

CrossLinks Topical Index

What is the CrossLinks Topical Index?

The CrossLinks Topical Index functions as a Scripture cross-reference, topical index, and commentary—all rolled into one.

Unlike a Bible cross-reference (such as The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge) which can be indexed by Bible addresses, but not by topic, the CrossLinks Topical Index provides the ability to look up a topic and find the addresses of related passages of the Bible. For example, by looking up the topic: faith – righteousness by we find the following related passages in the Bible: Gen. 15:6; Rom. 3:22; Gal. 1:6; Gal. 1:8; Heb. 11:7

Unlike a topical Bible, such as Naves Topical Bible, which can be indexed by topic, but not by Bible address, the CrossLinks Topical Index provides the ability to look up a Scripture address and list topics related to that passage of the Bible. For example, by looking up the Bible address: Gal. 1:15 we find the following related topics: Christ - in me, Paul - conversion of, unbeliever - prepared by God, womb - called from

The CrossLinks Topical Index also includes commentary on selected topics and passages. The CrossLinks Topical Index is designed to be used like a dictionary. All entries appear in alphabetical order. Simply look up the topic or Bible address (see Abbreviations below).

As an example, suppose we were interested in the list of topics associated with the bible verse Romans 9:4

In this example, we were interested in topics related to Romans 9:4 (perhaps wanting to study this passage of Scripture). Of several topics listed, we were interested in shekinah and followed to its entry for additional information.

We could have just as easily begun by looking up shekinah to find Scripture passages related to the visible presence of God. From there, we could then investigate Isaiah 4:5 or Romans 9:4.

The commentary at the entry for shekinah contains a quote by an author. The source of the quote, usually a book or article, can be obtained by looking up the entry for Ref-57. We might want to study further by reading the book or article for ourselves.

Kaiser states that according to 1 Pet 1:10-12, the prophets were aware of five facts in their prophecies: They knew they were predicting that: (1) the Messiah would come; (2) the Messiah would suffer; (3) the Messiah would be glorified (in kingly splendor); (4) the order of events 2 and 3 was that the suffering came first, and then the glorious period followed; and (5) this message had been revealed to the prophets not only for their own day, but also for a future generation such as the church of Peter's audience (v. 12)." Ref-1272, p. 89.

 9th - of Av : Num. 14:35 ☪ Tisha B'av (9th of Av) Ref-0025, p. 196. "The Jewish-Roman historian Josephus, for example, saw a divine punishment for Israel behind the judgment on both the first and second temples, since both occurred on the same day (the nine of the Jewish month of Av)." Ref-0031, p. 58.

"Therefore, on the ninth day of the Jewish month of Av in A.D. 70, the city and the Temple were burned as Daniel had prophesied." Ref-0144, p. 70. "Five events of national tragedy have been associated with this date. The first of these national tragedies, and the supposed cause of all that followed, was the failure of the Israelites to enter the Promised Land under Moses [Num. 14:23]. . . oral tradition recounts that this lamentation took place on the Ninth of Av. . . The next four events occurring on the Ninth of Av all relate to the Temple. The second and third disasters involve Solomon's first Temple and Herod's second Temple, where were both destroyed on the same day 656 years apart. The last two disasters occurred 65 years later on the same day (A.D. 135). The first of these was the defeat of the army of Bar Kokhba at Betar. The second followed as a consequence of the first. It was the plowing of the site of the Temple Mount by the Roman governor of Judea, Tineius Rufus. . ." Ref-0144, pp. 212-213. "According to the Jewish Mishnah it was discovered by the rabbis that five things happened to the Jewish forefathers on the ninth of Av (the Jewish month when these events occurred): 1) the Jews were sentenced not to enter Eretz-Yisrael; 2) the First Temple was destroyed; 3) the Second Temple was destroyed; 4) Bethar (the city in the Judean hills where Bar Kokhba made his final stand against the Romans) was captured; and 5) the Temple Mount was plowed over by the Romans (Mishnah, Ta'anit 4:6)." Ref-0146, p. 84. "the Ninth of Av, the Roman governor of Judea, Tineius Rufus, plowed up the Sanctuary of the Temple Mount and its environs in the name of the emperor (see Eruchin 27a; Ta'anit 29a; Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 4:6,1)." Ref-0146, p. 89. "On the ninth of Av in 586 B.C., Solomon's Temple was destroyed by Babylon, and the Jewish people were carried into captivity. More than 650 years later, in A.D. 70, the Temple built by Zerubbabel, modified by Herod, and visited by Jesus was sacked and destroyed by the Romans under the command of Titus. Sixty-five years later on the same date in A.D. 135 the Romans killed the pseudomessiah Bar Kochba and crushed his Jewish revolt at Betar. In 1492 King Ferdinand of Spain issued the expulsion decree that set Tisha B'Av as the final date for all Jews to leave Spain, thereby destroying one of the largest Jewish communities in the world. The date also saw the beginning of the infamous Spanish Inquisition, instituted to force the Jewish people to embrace Catholicism or face horrific torture. . . . Although the Bible does not give the date, Jewish students of Scripture also believe the sin of the spies at Kadesh-barnea, which caused the Lord to make the nation wander in the desert for forty years, occurred on Tisha B'Av." Thomas Simcox, "Tisha B'Av - Israel's Day of Tragedies," Ref-0057, September/October 2004, p. 15. "As a child in Hebrew School, I thought All that is ancient history. Never did I dream a Tisha B'Av catastrophe would strike in my lifetime. This year [2005] the ninth of Av fell on August 14. The next day began the heart-wrenching expulsion of more than 8,000 Israelis from their homes in the Gaza strip. I watched on television as Jewish mothers wailed; Israeli soldiers carrying out the "disengagement" wept; and religious men wrapped themselves in their prayer shawls, begging God to perform a miracle and stop the evacuation. But He did not." Lorna Simcox, What I'd Tell My Dad, Ref-0057 November/December 2005, p. 27. "Of these [eras] one was that which took as its epoch the destruction of the Second Temple. In this era, dates are given as in a certain year of "the destruction of the temple" (לְחֹרְבַן הַבַּיִת) or "from the destruction" (אַחַר הַחֹרְבָן) . . . As to the month and day, the Jewish sources claim a striking identity between the destruction of the Second Temple and of the First Temple. 2 Kings 25:8 states that the First Temple was burned by Nebuzaradan on the seventh day of the fifth month, while Jer. 52:12 gives the tenth day of the fifth month. The rabbis reconciled these data by explaining that the Babylonians entered the temple on the seventh day of Ab (which is the fifth month), ate and did damage to it on that day and the eighth, and on the ninth day toward dusk set fire to it; it then continued to burn through the whole of that day which is presumably extended through the tenth. As to the recurrence of disaster at the identical time, they said, "The same thing too happened in the Second Temple." For a single day, the ninth of Ab was taken as the exact date: "On the ninth of Ab . . . the Temple was destroyed the first and the second time." . . . The date of the burning [of the Second Temple] is stated explicitly by Josephus: "the tenth of the month Loos the day on which of old it had been burnt by the king of Babylon" (6.250). In the later correlation of the Macedonian calendar as it was used in Palestine . . . Loos was parallel to Ab, the fifth month. Therefore Josephus's date of Loos = Ab 10 is identical with Jeremiah's (52:12) date of the tenth day of the fifth month for the first destruction, and just one day later than the ninth day of Ab taken as the official date by the rabbis." Ref-0840, p. 106. "Along with Josephus's eyewitness account of the destruction of the temple by the Romans, there is also an account by Rabbi Yose ben Halafta in Seder 'Olam Rabbah (30.86-97) . . . the passage reads: Rabbi Yose used to say: Propitiousness is assigned to a propitious day and calamity to a calamitous day. As it is found said: When the temple was destroyed, the first time, that day was immediately after the Sabbath, it was immediately after the Sabbatical year, it was (during the service of) the priestly division of Jehoiarib, and it was the ninth day of Ab, and so the second time (the temple was destroyed). . . . it is also of interest to note how the Mishna associates yet other untoward events with the same date of the ninth day of Ab: On the ninth day of Ab it was decreed against our fathers that they should not enter into the land [of Israel]¹, and the temple was destroyed the first and second time [by Nebuchadnezzar and by Titus], and Beth-Tor [or Bethar, modern Bettir southwest of Jerusalem, the scene of Bar Kokhba's final defeat in A.D. 135] was captured, and the City [Jerusalem] was ploughed up [by Hadrian].^[2] [1] For this date see Seder 'Olam Rabbah 8.45-47, Milikowsky, Seder 'Olam, 473. [2] Taanich 4:6; Danby 200." Ref-0840, p. 107. "The following synchronism is hereby established: A.M. 3828 = A.S. 381 = A.D. 69/70 = year 1 of the era of Destruction." Ref-0840, p. 110.

120 - year life span : Gen. 6:3; Deu. 31:2; Deu. 34:7 ☪ Many commentators believe Gen. 6:3 teaches that god's patience with mankind would last another 120 years; after this all were destroyed in the flood. it seems unlikely to be referring to lifespans; for one thing, many people lived far longer than 120 years for centuries after the flood. - 2009060201.pdf : DOC 2009060201.pdf - Zionism - dangers - NCC + National Council of Churches Dangers of 'Christian Zionism' are cited in new NCC brochure "New York, December 12, 2008 -- "Christian Zionism" is a dangerous movement that distorts the teachings of the Church, fosters fear and hatred of Muslims and non-Western Christians, and has negative consequences for Middle East Peace. A new brochure, Why We Should Be Concerned About Christian Zionism, by the Interfaith Relations Commission of the National Council of Churches (in English and Spanish) is now available as an educational tool for communions, congregations and other groups who want to share these warnings with their members. Christian Zionism, while ostensibly a Christian movement in support of Israel, actually has the opposite effect. This brochure shows Christian Zionism to be a misguided ideology that considers the State of Israel divinely ordained with the role of ushering in the end of history, where unconverted Jews and Christians of "questionable status" will be judged by God's wrath. In fact, the brochure points out, many evangelical Christians and Israelis reject the notion. "The danger of this ideology is that it is a manipulation of Christian scripture and teaching," said Dr. Antonios Kireopoulos, NCC Senior Program Director for Interfaith Relations. "Unfortunately it has influence in American churches, to the point where many well-meaning Christians are swayed to support particularly destructive directions in U.S. foreign policy with regard to the Middle East." In its narrowest form, Christian Zionism advocates preserving control of historic Palestine, including Gaza and the West Bank, for the Jewish people alone, rejecting any peace settlement based on a two-state solution. An effect of the Christian Zionist ideology is that Christians in the Middle East and Muslims are viciously stereotyped. Many scholars have concluded that the Christian Zionist ideology has no roots in the traditional teachings of the church. The National Council of Churches has historically and consistently supported the security needs and rights of both Israelis and Palestinians. The brochure was introduced during recent meetings of the National Council of Churches Governing Board and the General Assembly of the NCC and Church World Service." <http://www.nccusa.org/news/081202christianzionismbrochure.html> accessed 20090602.

Why We Should Be Concerned About Christian Zionism • It can lead to the dehumanization of Israelis and Palestinians Because Christian Zionism bases support for the State of Israel on its supposed role in the end of history, its adherents tend to treat Israelis and Palestinians not as neighbors to be loved, but as pawns in a cosmic drama of divine vengeance and retribution. The conclusion of this drama involves the death of all non-Christians, including Jews, through apocalyptic warfare or divine judgment. Given these beliefs, even many Jews wonder if the movement promotes proper Jewish- Christian relationships and question the nature of the movement's support for Israel. • It is not based on traditional teaching or doctrines of the Church Christian Zionism and its theological presuppositions are nineteenth-century innovations in Christian doctrine. The most prominent spokesperson for these beliefs was John Nelson Darby (1800-1882). Although the advocates of Christian Zionism and its underlying theology sometimes claim to base their beliefs on ancient understandings, generally scholars recognize these to be recent innovations. • Evangelical Christians are concerned Ideological Christian Zionists sometimes claim that they speak on behalf of all American evangelicals. This is not so. Many evangelicals in the US do not want to be identified as ideological Christian Zionists. Several prominent evangelical spokespersons have spoken out strongly against this ideology, recognizing how it contradicts the central commitments of Christianity to justice and peace-making. Many question its theological assumptions. HOW SHOULD WE RESPOND? Christians in the West must ask themselves questions about the influence of Christian Zionism on US public opinion. It grieves the member communions of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA to note that many Christians visiting the land of Jesus' birth, death, and resurrection are not even aware of the existence of Arab Christians, and do not have opportunities to interact with local Christian communities. One step toward addressing this concern is for Christians in the West to become better aware of Christian Zionism and its effects, including the history, theology, and forms of biblical interpretation underlying this ideology. Please take the time to learn what this movement is all about, get involved, and continue to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem" (Psalm 122:6). Christians are troubled when injustice is committed. We are especially troubled when it is perpetuated through the appropriation of Christian theology for ideological purposes. One such misappropriation is commonly referred to as Christian Zionism. WHAT IS CHRISTIAN ZIONISM? Christian Zionism may be defined either broadly or narrowly. Broadly speaking, it designates any Christian support for the national revival movement of the Jewish people realized through the establishment of the modern State of Israel (historically known as Zionism). More narrowly defined, Christian Zionism is an ideology grounded in beliefs which consider the State of Israel to be divinely ordained and scripturally determined with a central role in ushering in the end of history, where unconverted Jews and unbelievers (including Christians who are considered to be of questionable status) are judged by God's wrath. It is the narrower form that causes immediate concern. WHY SHOULD WE BE CONCERNED? There are a number of reasons why this narrow ideological form of Christian Zionism raises concerns for the member communions of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA. Among these are the following: • It is a movement with negative consequences for Middle East peace Christian Zionism, in its narrow ideological form, encourages political advocacy committed to preserving control over all of historic Palestine for Jewish people alone, including the West Bank and Gaza strip, to ensure the realization of the movement's own end-times hopes. This ideological approach rejects any peace process built on a negotiated settlement towards a two-state solution to the conflict. Leading advocates of this ideology have formed themselves into oftentimes very public and well-funded political action groups whose aim is to prevent any negotiations that may lead to a two-state solution to the conflict. • It fosters fear and hatred of Muslims and non-western Christians Prominent spokespersons for Christian Zionism are known for promoting negative stereotypes of Muslims and Middle Easterners, including Middle Eastern Christians. They often accuse these Christians of siding with Muslims against the US and the State of Israel in a cosmic battle of good and evil, thus questioning their Christian faithfulness. Rather than fostering understanding and cooperation with neighbors, ideological Christian Zionism often teaches Christians in the US to harbor suspicion and enmity towards Muslims and non-westernized Christians. When it does so, the movement negates Christ's command to love our neighbors as ourselves (Matthew 22:39).

Dan, along with Zebulun, is not mentioned in 1 Chronicles 4-8, which was written after the Exile. Yet even with Dan’s absence, the listing of the other tribes is normally taken in Chronicles in a literal way. Some speculate that Dan was omitted in Revelation 7 because of that tribe’s idolatrous history, as narrated in Judges 18:30 and 1 Kings 12:29.¹⁸ Others credit its omission to the view that the Antichrist might come from the tribe of Dan.¹⁹ . . . [n19] - Irenaeus wrote the following regarding the Antichrist and the omission of Dan in Revelation 7. “And Jeremiah does not merely point out his sudden coming, but he even indicates the tribe from which he shall come, where he says, ‘We shall hear the voice of his swift horses from Dan; the whole earth shall be moved by the voice of the neighing of his galloping horses: he shall also come and devour the earth, and the fulness thereof, the city also, and they that dwell therein.’ [Jer. 8:16] This too, is the reason that this tribe is not reckoned in the Apocalypse along with those which are saved.” (Against Heresies, 5.30.2).” Richard Shalom Yates, The Identity of the Tribulation Saints, Ref-0200, Vol. 163 No. 649 January-March 2006, 79:93, p. 83 “This, too, the apostle affirms: “When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction shall come upon them.”? And Jeremiah does not merely point out his sudden coming, but he even indicates the tribe from which he shall come, where he says, “We shall hear the voice of his swift horses from Dan; the whole earth shall be moved by the voice of the neighing of his galloping horses: he shall also come and devour the earth, and the fulness thereof, the city also, and they that dwell therein.”? This, too, is the reason that this tribe is not reckoned in the Apocalypse along with those which are saved.” Irenaeus, Against Heresies 5.30.2, Ref-0537, p. 559. “And in like manner also we find it written regarding Antichrist. For Moses speaks thus: “Dan is a lion’s whelp, and he shall leap from Bashan.”? But that no one may err by supposing that this is said of the Saviour, let him attend carefully to the matter. “Dan,” he says, “is a lion’s whelp,” and in naming the tribe of Dan, he declared clearly the tribe from which Antichrist is destined to spring. For as Christ springs from the tribe of Judah, so Antichrist is to spring from the tribe of Dan.? And that the case stands thus, we see also from the words of Jacob: “Let Dan be a serpent, lying upon the ground, biting the horse’s heel.”? What, then, is meant by the serpent but Antichrist, that deceiver who is mentioned in Genesis,? who deceived Eve and supplanted Adam. . . . That it is in reality out of the tribe of Dan, then, that that tyrant and king, that dread judge, that son of the devil, is destined to spring and arise, the prophet testifies when he says, “Dan shall judge his people, as (he is) also one tribe in Israel.”? But some one may say that this refers to Samson, who sprang from the tribe of Dan, and judged the people twenty years. Well, the prophecy had its partial fulfilment in Samson, but its complete fulfilment is reserved for Antichrist. For Jeremiah also speaks to this effect: “From Dan we are to hear the sound of the swiftness of his horses: the whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing, of the driving of his horses.”? Hippolytus, Treatise on Christ and Antichrist, Ref-0541, p. 207.

At some point after the beginning of the final age the heathen powers would assemble under an unidentified leader

(the Antichrist), attack, but be defeated by the forces of the LORD.²⁵ [25] The New Testament calls the unidentified leader Antichrist (1 John 2:18, 22; 4:3; 2 John 7; cf. 2Th. 2; Rev. 13); less specific is 2 Baruch 40:1-2; “The last ruler who is left alive at that time will be bound, whereas the entire host will be destroyed. And . . . my Anointed One . . . will kill him and protect the rest of my people.”” Ref-1200, p. 290.

[5001.6] antichrist - duration of power : Dan. 7:25; Rev. 13:5

[5001.7] antichrist - Edom and Moab escape :

Dan. 11:41 “These three peoples will escape his fury. The reason for their escape seems to be a double one. In Ps. 83, which describes an event at a little earlier period, we are told, ‘they have taken crafty counsel against Thy people, and consulted against Thy hidden ones. They has said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance. For they have consulted together with one consent, they are confederate against Thee: the tabernacles of Edom and the Ishmaelites; of Moab, and the Hagarenes; Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalck; the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre; Assur (the Assyrian) also is joined with them?’ (Ps. 83:3-8). Thus we see that these three peoples acted in concert with the Antichrist when a determined effort was made to utterly exterminate the Jewish people. The Antichrist, therefore, spares these submissive allies of his when he goes forth to overthrow the other countries.” Ref-0215, “The Doom of the Antichrist”

The evil emperor’s name was spelled in two ways: Nero or Neron. The letter n meant 50. If the copyist was familiar with only the form Nero, he could be dropping the n obtain 616. It is most difficult to think of any other reason for 616.” Ref-0154, p. 48. “Nero Caesar” transliterated into the Hebrew from the Greek (Neron Kaiser) adds up to exactly 666 in Hebrew. N=50, R=200, W=6, N=50 plus Q=100, S=60, R=200 totals 666. This spelling of Nero Caesar was found in the discovery of an Aramaic document in Wadi Murabba’ at (BASOR 170, 65). The Latin form of ‘Nero Caesar’ when transliterated into Hebrew adds up to 616. This most likely explains the textual variant in Revelation 13:18 with the number 616. It should also be noted that the Greek word for ‘Beast’ when transliterated back into Hebrew adds up to 666. Ancient writers referred to Nero as a ‘beast’ (See Philostratus Vit. Apoll. 4.38; Sib. Or. 5.343; 8.157). For more detailed commentary see Word Biblical Commentary: Revelation 6-16 by David E. Aune.”

[<http://bibleandscience.com/biblecodes.htm>] “. . . Buchanan affirms that only the spelling with the yod is found in a concordance search of the Talmuds, the Mishnah, the Tosephta, and the Tannaitic Midrashim. Therefore, there is no indisputable evidence for the spelling of ךָּס without the ךָּ, and yet this spelling is necessary for identifying Nero as the first beast of Revelation 13.” Mark L. Hitchcock, “A Critique of the Preterist View of Revelation_13 and Nero”, Ref-0200, Volume 164 Number 655, July-September 2007, 341:356, p. 346. “Gumerlock, . . . says he has “evidence from a fifth-century book on biblical genealogies that some in the early church had been using Nero’s name to calculate the number of the beast.” [Gary DeMar and Francis X. Gumerlock, The Early Church and the “End of the World”: The Past Fulfillment of Matthew 24 (Powder Springs, GA: American Vision, 2005), 81 n. 108.] Gumerlock found this evidence in a chronology entitled Liber genealogus (Genealogical Book or Book of Genealogy) which was written in the fifth century in North Africa, composed between 405 and 412 and then edited in 427, 438, and 455. Written in Latin, it was edited by Theodore Mommsen. It lists events from the creation of Adam and Eve all the way up to the fifth century A.D. The Liber genealogus says on page 194 that “Nero is he whose name John called in the Apocalypse 616. Here wisdom is understood [Rev. 13:18], that through letters the name of him may be computed, who is called, as is related: ‘Antichrist.’ 1 13 18 9 3 8 17 9 18 19 20 18. The collected number equals 154. Multiplying this by four, according to the four letters of the name of Nero equals 616, which is the name of Antichrist.” Admittedly, this moves the date of the first connection between Nero and the first beast of Revelation 13 back about 1,400 years from what was previously believed. But even if some leaders in the fifth century made this connection, the question still remains, Why did none of the earliest Christian writers who discussed 666 ever mention it? Why were Irenaeus, Andreas, Primasius, and Victorinus apparently unaware of this view? If Neron Caesar is such an obvious connection to the number 666 or even 616, then why did it take at least 350 years for someone to see it?” Mark L. Hitchcock, “A Critique of the Preterist View of Revelation_13 and Nero”, Ref-0200, Volume 164 Number 655, July-September 2007, 341:356, pp. 352-353. “. . . he will order incense-pans to be set up by all everywhere, that no man among the saints may be able to buy or sell without first sacrificing; for this is what is meant by the mark received upon the right hand. . . . Many names indeed we find, the letters of which are the equivalent of this number: such as, for instance, the word Titan, an ancient and notable name; or Evanthas, for it too makes up the same number; and many others which might be found. But, as we have already said, the wound of the first beast was healed, and he (the second beast) was to make the image speak, that is to say, he should be powerful; and it is manifest to all that those who at present still hold the power are Latins. If, then, we take the name as the name of a single man, it becomes Latinus. Wherefore we ought neither to give it out as if this were certainly his name, nor again ignore the fact that he may not be otherwise designated.” Hippolytus, Treatise on Christ and Antichrist, Ref-0541, pp. 214-215. “The main feature of the complex, the ziggurat [believed to be the original site of the Tower of Babylon], is described by the Esagil Tablet, which indicates dimensions in terms of the suklam-cubit, as used by the Assyrian kings Sennacherib and Esarhaddon: “60.60.60 [is] the length, 60.60.60 is the breadth”” T. In Gal. 3:20 Paul appears to be emphasizing the contrast between a man-made covenant (which mediates between two parties) and the Abrahamic covenant which Abraham did not participate in. Unlike the giving of the Mosaic Law where Moses mediated between God and the Israelites, with the Abrahamic covenant God was both the promise-giver and the mediator.

Within these boundaries today fall the countries of Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, and portions of Iraq and Saudi Arabia. Many verses (Deu. 30:5; Eze. 36:28; 37:25) indicate the promised land is a literal region on earth (?where your fathers dwelt) and not a hazy spiritual notion of redemption.

Practically every one of the Major and Minor prophets mention in some form the hope of future possession of the land. All of them were written after Solomon's day. . . . The original promises of the land involved (1) possession of the land, (2) permanent possession, (3) and occupying the land. Even in Solomon's day at the height of his kingdom the land was not all possessed. At best it was placed under tribute as. . . [1K. 4:21] indicates. Certainly all must agree that possession was not permanent. Further at no time was all the land actually occupied by Israel." Ref-0081, pp. 178-179. An example which ignores this obvious problem and asserts fulfillment is: "Joshua 21:43-45 explicitly declares that all the land that God promised Israel was given to them. . . . God fulfilled the promises He made to Abraham." Ref-0189, p. 27. Some have interpreted 'permanent occupation' of the land to be fulfilled by the bones of the Patriarch's which are buried there -- which hardly does justice to the character of God. Also -- if the promiser were fulfilled during Solomon's reign as some suppose, then why do post-Solomonic prophets expound it to be yet future? "several of these restoration passages speak of a restoration in which the ten tribes of the north are reunited with the two tribes of the south (Ia. 11:12; Jer. 3:18; 23:5-8; 31:27; Eze. 37:15-23; Hos. 1:11; Zec. 10:6), and this did not happen under the three previous returns from exile (Kaiser 1992: 105-07; idem 1998: 2016; Jelinek 1998: 242)." Ref-0697, p. 107. See especially Ref-0697, pp. 107-109. Hebrews 4:8 implies that promises associated with the land were not fulfilled in the days of Joshua. "Additionally, Kaiser brings a formidable challenge: 'While the sheer multiplicity of texts from almost every one of the prophets is staggering, a few evangelicals insist that this pledge to restore Israel to her land was fulfilled when Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah led their respective returns from the Babylonian Exile. But if the postexilic returns to the land fulfilled this promised restoration predicted by the prophets, why then did Zechariah continue to announce a still future return (Zec. 10:8-12) in words that were peppered with the phrases and formulas of such prophecies as Isaiah 11:11 and Jeremiah 50:19?'" "Genesis 15:21 mentions the Canaanites and the Jebusites among the peoples whose lands the Israelites would possess. According to the OT, the Israelites did not fully possess the lands of the Canaanites and Jebusites during the lifetime of Joshua. Joshua himself interpreted the Genesis 15 promise as requiring the driving out of all these inhabitants (Josh 3:10). Judges 1:21 reveals that such did not happen prior to Joshua's death. Indeed, the Israelites continued to live in the midst of all the peoples God listed in Genesis 15 (see Judg 3:5). It wasn't until the time of David that the Jebusites were finally evicted from their stronghold at Zion (2 Sam 5:7-9). Though the Levites and Ezra in Heb. 9:8 seem to state that God had fulfilled the promise made to Abraham in Gen. 15:18-21, the context and the remainder of Scripture must be brought to bear on that statement." William D. Barrick, "New Covenant Theology and the Old Testament Covenants", Ref-0164, Volume 18 Number 2 Fall 2007, 165:180, p. 172. "There are four different attitudes toward these prophetic announcements concerning the return of Israel to Palestine. One is that these prophecies were all fulfilled in the return of the Jews under Ezra and subsequent decades. This, however, is contradicted by three facts: The Jews that returned under Ezra, and later leaders, did not come from the four quarters of the earth an from all the nations of the earth, but only from Babylon and Persia. Isaiah 11:11 speaks clearly of a return that is designated as a second one, and there has been no second one up to this century. Finally, the passages we have been discussing which predict a return insist that when this takes place, Israel will be planted in the land forever. She was not so planted with the return under Ezra. Another theory proposed is that God is through with Israel and that in her rejection of Christ she forfeited all expectations of being specially dealt with by the Lord at any future time. The answer to this is that Israel's apostasy and disobedience are foreseen by the very prophets who also speak of a time to come when Israel will turn from disobedience and accept her Messiah. A third theory is that these prophecies are fulfilled in the history of the church. This principle of interpretation is called spiritualizing and leads to a chaotic, confused suggestion as to what these phrases mean when they speak of the land and Jerusalem and agricultural richness, and especially the reign of David their king over Jerusalem. The church is not a body of people originally belonging to God and now being brought back to him, but is made up of lost sinners. They never knew God and are brought out of their spiritual death to newness of life. This newness of life can never be identified with a migration to Palestine." Ref-1163, pp. 38-39. "I believe that the sons of Abraham are to re-inherit Palestine, and that the forfeited fertility will yet return to that land; that the wilderness and the solitary places shall be glad for them, and the desert will rejoice and blossom as the rose. [H. Bonar, "The Jew," The Quarterly Journal of Prophecy (July, 1870): 211]" Ref-1263, p. 10. "That the land of Israel has distinct eschatological importance is indicated by [Jonathan] Edwards' consideration of its strategic location: . . . "And it is the more evident, that the Jews will return to their own land again, because they never have yet possessed one quarter of that land, which was so often promised them, from the Red Sea to the river Euphrates (Exod. 23:31; Gen. 15:18; Deut. 11:24; Josh. 1:4). Indeed, it was partly fulfilled in Solomon's time, when he governed all within those bounds for a short time; but so short, that it is not to be thought that this is all the fulfillment of the promise that is to be. And besides, that was not a fulfillment of the promise, because they did not possess it, though they made the nations of it tributary.”

(2) The sun/moon/stars have a direct corollary in Joseph’s dream (Gen. 37:9). Sun = Joseph’s Father (Jacob), moon = Jacob’s mother, 11 stars = brothers (12 stars meaning all twelve tribes). Hence a strong reference to Israel. (3) The reference to ‘clothed with the sun’ and ‘the moon under her feet’ refer to many passages which declare that the promises made to Israel (especially for a Davidic ruler and the continuation of the nation) can be thwarted only if the sun and moon can be made to cease from before God (Ps. 89:35-37; Jer. 31:36). Hence the reference is to the permanence of Israel and its promises in the mind of God as evidenced by His oaths involving the sun and moon. (4) The woman travels to give birth to the man-child (singular, male) who is caught-up. This would seem a clear allusion to the promise of the seed of the woman (Gen. 3:15) and the man-child is obviously Christ and not (the rapture of) the church.” “Rachel died . . . giving birth to Benjamin . . . Leah, no doubt, raised Joseph and Benjamin . . . The emperor Caligula's plan to erect a statue of himself in the Temple (ca. A.D. 40) may have been seen by some as at least a partial fulfillment of this 'prophecy,' but the Gospels of Matthew and Mark, both written more than twenty years later, associate the abomination with the events to precede the expected return of Jesus as 'Son of man' and evidently regard it as yet to be fulfilled (Matt. 24:15-21; Mark 13:14-19)." Ref-0131, s.v. Abomination That Makes Desolate. "In my own study of the phrase in the context of Temple desecration I discovered the phrase served as a technical reference to the introduction of an idolatrous image or an act of pagan sacrilege within the Sanctuary that produces the highest level of a ceremonial impurity, Temple profanation." Randall Price cited in Thomas Ice, "An Interpretation of Matthew 24-25 -- Part XIII", Ref-0181, May 2003, p. 6. "Therefore the abomination of desolation, which the reader is to understand, includes the following elements: 1. It occurs in the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem (Dan. 11:31; 2Th. 2:4). 2. It involves a person setting up a statue in place of the regular sacrifice in the holy of holies (Dan. 11:31; 12:11; Rev. 13:14-15). 3. This results in the cessation of the regular sacrifice (Dan. 9:27; 11:31; 12:11). 4. There will be a time of about three-and-a-half years between this event and another event and the end of the time period (Dan. 9:27; 12:11). 5. It involves an individual setting up a statue or image of himself so that he may be worshipped in place of God (Dan. 11:31; 2Th. 2:4; Rev. 13:14-15). 6. The image is made to come to life (Rev. 13:14). 7. A worship system to this false god is thus inaugurated (2Th. 2:4; Rev. 13:14-15). 8. At the end of this time period the individual who commits the act will himself be cut off (Dan. 9:27)." Thomas Ice, "An Interpretation of Matthew 24-25 -- Part XIII", Ref-0181, May 2003, p. 6. "In my own study of the phrase 'abomination of desolation' in the context of Temple desecration I discovered the phrase served as a technical reference to the introduction of an idolatrous image or an act of pagan sacrilege within the sanctuary that produces the highest level of ceremonial impurity, Temple profanation." Randal Price, "Historical Problems with a First-Century Fulfillment", Ref-0209, p. 387. Irenaeus sees the abomination yet future: "the Father of our Lord, by whose directions the temple which is at Jerusalem was constructed for those purposes which I have already mentioned; in which [temple] the enemy shall sit, endeavouring to show himself as Christ, as the Lord also declares: "But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation, which has been spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (let him that readeth understand), then let those who are in Judea flee into the mountains; and he who is upon the house-top, let him not come down to take anything out of his house: for there shall then be great hardship, such as has not been from the beginning of the world until now, nor ever shall be." Irenaeus, Against Heresies, Ref-0537, p. 553. "The earliest clear Christian references to Daniel 9:24-27 is by Irenaeus in his Against Heresies (ca. A.D. 180). In Book 5.25.3 Irenaeus clearly linked the prophecy of the little horn in Daniel 7 to 2 Thessalonians 2, and he indicated that the Antichrist will be in power three and a half years. In 5.25.2 he quoted Matthew 24:15 and stated that this will be fulfilled with the Antichrist literally going into the Jewish temple for the purpose of presenting himself as Christ. In 5.25.4 Irenaeus has an extended discussion about the Antichrist, which culminates in his linking this with Daniel 9:27. "And then he [Daniel] points out the time that his [Antichrist's] tyranny shall last, during which the saints shall be put to flight, they who offer a pure sacrifice to God: 'And in the midst of the week,' he says, 'the sacrifice and libation shall be taken away, and the abomination of desolation [shall be brought] into the temple: even unto the consummation of the time shall the desolation be complete.' Now three years and six months constitute the half-week." . . . Although Irenaeus did not give any calculation of the seventy weeks, it is clear from his writings that the seventy weeks were not completely fulfilled in the first coming of Jesus Christ, for Irenaeus said that the half a week in verse 27 is the three and a half years when the Antichrist will reign (5.25.4)." J. Paul Tanner, Is Daniel's Seventy-Weeks Prophecy Messianic? Part 1 Ref-0200, Vol. 166 No. 662 April-June 2009, 181:200, pp. 185-186. abomination of desolation - fulfillment theories : ☪ . . . scholars have offered their interpretations for the 'abomination of desolation' as a past fulfillment. I will simply list these with a brief observation about each: 1) The Statue of Titus erected on the side of the desolated Temple (popular in Patristic times) is more likely a tradition that developed from the memory of Roman standards erected in the Temple area by order of Titus. 2) Statues erected by Pilate and Hadrian. All we know for certain is that Pilate brought Roman standards into the Temple, which had medallions with an image of the emperor. As to the site of the equestrian statue, John Wilkinson argues that it would not have been at the site of the Temple itself, but that this area would have remained free of such objects so that the site could later be rebuilt by the Jews as a show of Roman benevolence. 3) Caligula's attempted desecration. The events of A.D. 33-40 are believed to have created a fear that although Caligula had attempted to erect a pagan statue in the Temple and failed, another might succeed.

However, this whole theory has been shown to be implausible on textual and historical grounds [see footnote 44 in this text]. 4) The invading Roman army of A.D. 70. If the Roman invasion that desecrated and destroyed the Temple in A.D. 70 was the fulfillment of the abomination of desolation, we are left without a complete correspondence with Daniel 9:27, for both the covenant is missing and the destruction of the desolator would have to be construed differently." Ref-0146, pp. 489-480. "Preterists suggest that the abomination of desolation was one of four possible events. First, they say it could have been the occupation of the temple courts by murderous zealots. These zealots even invaded the holy of holies, placed an imposter in office as high priest, and ordained unqualified misfits to the priesthood. Josephus referred to this in The Jewish Wars. Second, preterists say the abomination of desolation may have been the intrusion into Jerusalem by Idumeans (at the invitation and aid of the zealots), who slaughtered many people, including the chief priest Annus. (This polluted the temple courts with blood and took place before A.D. 70, probably in A.D. 68.) Third, preterists say it is possible that the abomination of desolation refers to the capture and burning of the temple by the Romans. Torching the temple, the Roman soldiers set up their standards opposite the eastern gate and offered sacrifices. DeMar says, "The Roman abomination hypothesis is the most popular since it parallels the actions of Antiochus Epiphanes." Although Demar fels any or all of the preceding views are possible, he prefers a fourth explanation of the abomination of desolation. He believes it describes the corruption of the temple by the abominations and defilements of apostate Israel." Stanley D. Toussaint, "A Critique of the Preterist View of the Olivet Discourse," Ref-0200, Vol. 161 No. 644, October-December 2004, 469-490 pp. 479-480. "The Abomination of Desolation referred to in Dan 9:27; 12:11 and in the Synoptic Apocalypse awaits an eschatological fulfillment in the Antichrist. It may be asked whether Hippolytus did not also interpret the "Abomination" of Matt 24:15 (Mark 13:14) in relation to the destruction of the temple by the Romans in AD 70. It appears that in a proper sense he did not. The phrase of Luke 21:20, "When you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies," is understood to prophesy the siege of Vespasian against the city, but Hippolytus clearly distinguishes Luke's account from the eschatological perspective of Matthew and Mark." David G. Dunbar, Hippolytus of Rome and the Eschatological Exegesis of the Early Church, Westminster Theological Journal Volume 45 Number 2 (Fall 1983) pp. 333-334.

abortion - fetal use : "Professor Richard Gardner of Oxford University, a renowned expert on human reproduction and an advisor to Britain's Human Fertilization and Embryology Authority, recently raised the prospect of using organs from aborted fetuses for transplantation into adults. This possibility offers the potential to save or improve the lives of the hundreds of thousands of patients in desperate need of such organs throughout the world, especially the more than 70,000 in the United States waiting for kidneys. While such procedures have never been attempted in humans, research on mice has demonstrated that fetal kidneys develop quickly inside adult animals -- and according to Gardner, fetal-to-adult transplantation is "probably a more realistic technique in dealing with the shortage of kidney donors than others." If aborted fetuses do prove a useful source of organs for transplant, and there is hope to believe that they might, our society may soon have to grapple with the possibility of yet another controversial and startling -- yet potentially beneficial -- phenomenon: a legal market in fetal tissue and organs. Opponents of organ sales fear that transforming transplantation into a financial transaction will lead to exploitation of the poor, particularly in developing nations, and will expose the world's least fortunate inhabitants to unnecessary medical risks and to exchanges in which they lack equal bargaining power. The striking benefit of a legal trade in fetal organs, unlike adult organs, is that it may provide all of the benefits that supporters desire without resulting in the exploitative harms that opponents fear. Such sales could prove the rare economic transaction in the medical field in which all participating parties can truly be said to benefit. The first striking feature of fetal organs is that their supply, for all practical purposes, is unlimited. Unlike living kidney donors, who must then advance through life with only one functioning kidney, pregnant women who provide fetal kidneys could do so repeatedly without incurring the medical consequences of adult organ loss. Opponents of reproductive choice will object to such a market on the grounds that it will increase the number of abortions -- which will indeed be the logical result. However, such a market might also bring solace to women who have already decided upon abortion, but desire that some additional social good come from the procedure. Like the families of accident victims who donate the organs of their loved ones, these women could well find their decisions fortified by the public benefit that they generate. Someday, if we are fortunate, scientific research may make possible farms of artificial "wombs" breeding fetuses for their organs -- or even the "miracle" of men raising fetuses in their abdomens." Jacob M. Appel, Are We Ready for a Market in Fetal Organs?, Huffington Post, March 17, 2009.

According to the 2000 census, this number equals the current population of 19 different states. . . The number 42 million also equals the combined populations of California and Georgia. . . On a daily basis, abortion takes more lives than were lost in the September 11th tragedy. On average, 3,836 pre-born babies have been routinely eliminated every day for thirty years. Since 1973, unwanted pre-born babies have had their lives ended at an average rate of 2.5 per minute, 160 an hour, and 1,400,000 a year!" The Legal Alert, Christian Law Association, January 2003, p. 2.

[<http://www.christianlaw.org>] "In the thirty-six years since Roe and Doe, abortion has taken the lives of more than fifty million unborn victims. . . ." George McCormick, Professor of Jurisprudence and Director of the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions at Princeton University, January 21, 2009 cited in Focus on the Family Action newsletter, February 2009. "Abortion remains the most common surgical procedure for American women; one-third of them will have one by the age of 45. The number performed annually in the U.S. has largely held steady: 1.3 million in 1977 and 1.2 million three decades later. four out of every ten pregnancies in that city are terminated by abortion. That statistic is horrific, leading a group of New York religious leaders to describe the abortion rate as "chilling." Of even greater magnitude is the abortion rate among African-Americans in New York City ? a rate of almost 60 percent. This means, of course, that far more black babies are aborted than are born. How is it that black church leaders are so silent on this murderous assault on unborn African-American babies? The Guttmacher Institute recently reported that the national abortion rate is 22 percent. Two out of every ten pregnancies in America end in abortion. The enormity of the abortion rate in America underlines the fact that abortion is anything but rare. Over 1.2 million abortions were performed in the United States in 2008, the last year with full numbers reported." Abraham - faith before circumcision : Gen. 15:6 (younger than 86, see Gen. 16:16); Gen. 17:24 (Ishmael 13 and Abraham 99 years old); Rom. 4:10 ☉ "Because the covenant of circumcision was first introduced when Abraham was already ninety-nine years old (Gen. 17:1-14); but the covenant of faith and the justification took place before even the birth of Ishmael, and therefore before his eighty-sixth year (Gen. 16:16 cf. Gen. 17:1). Consequently Abraham had been justified already thirteen years before he was circumcised." Ref-0197, p. 96

Abraham - father of faithful : Gen. 12:3; Isa. 59:21; Luke 3:8; Luke 19:9; Rom. 4:11-18; Rom. 9:6; Gal. 3:7; Gal. 3:29; Gal. 6:16; Php. 3:3 ☉ "Abraham's seed," therefore, is not necessarily equivalent of a Jew or a member of the people of Israel. God's promise to Abraham encompassed both 'a great nation' and 'all peoples on earth' (Gen. 12:2-3). Both of these groups, therefore, share the fulfillment of that promise in the salvation of God without being merged into each other. It is significant that when the fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise is related to the Gentiles, it is specifically this statement about 'all nations,' not any reference to the 'great nation' or Israel, that the apostle uses as OT support (Gal. 3:8). Again, there is sharing, but not identity. . ." Robert L. Saucy, "Israel and the Church: A Case for Discontinuity," Ref-0199, p. 254.

accreditation - seminary : ☩ "Accreditation has many benefits for both educational institutions and students, but it is neither a guaranty nor is it the sole criterion of an excellent education. Every accredited institution was once unaccredited. For example, Dallas Theological Seminary (DTS) was founded in 1924 but was not accredited by SACS until 1969, long after the graduation of notables such as Dwight Pentecost, Charles Ryrie, and Chuck Swindoll. administered by collegiate praetors, who were attended by lictors (Acts 16:20ff., 35ff.); that Thessalonica, like other cities of Macedonia, called its chief magistrates politarchs (Acts 17:6, 8). He was acquainted with the Areopagus at Athens (Acts 17:19, 22, 34); he knew that the leading men of the cities of Asia were called Asiarchs (Acts 19:31), that Ephesus enjoyed the honorary title of Neōko'ros ("temple warden") of Artemis (Acts 19:35) and that the town clerk (grammateu's) occupied an important and responsible place in its municipal administration (Acts 19:35ff.). Adam - brought death : Gen. 3:19; Rom. 5:12-15; Rom. 5:17; 1Cor. 15:21; Jas. 1:15 ☼
 "As soon as one even allows for [an age of the earth of] millions of years, one has also accepted death, disease (like cancer--there is evidence of cancer in dinosaur bones supposedly millions of years old), bloodshed, violence, and thorns (there are thorns in the fossil record supposedly 300 million years old--yet the Bible makes it clear thorns came after the Curse (Genesis 3:18)) before man sinned--and thus God called this 'very good.' This undermines the Gospel--the message that death is the result of sin, which is why Christ died on the Cross." Ken Ham, Answers in Genesis, <http://www.answersingenesis.org/news/0701rbc.asp>

Adam - named animals : Gen. 2:19-20 ☪ "It says that Adam named only cattle, birds and 'beasts of the field' (Gen. 2:19-20). Unlike Linnaeus, Adam did not name any plants, any sea creatures (which make up the majority of living forms), any creeping things or any 'beasts of the earth' (cf. Genesis 1:25 and 2:19-20). The assumption that Adam was naming only animals that would be domesticated is far more reasonable and biblically based than Dr. Archer's assumptions [that Adam's task was akin to Linnaeus taking 30 years to give double Latin names to all the fauna and flora known to 18th-century scholarship]." Adam - pre-Adamites - Archer, Gleason : ☪ + "To revert to the problem of the Pithecanthropus, the Swanscombe man, the Neandertal and all the rest (possibly even the Cro-magnon man, who is apparently to be classed as Homo sapiens, but whose remains seem to date back at least to 20,000 B.C.) it seems best to regard these races as all prior to Adam's time, and not involved in the Adamic covenant. We must leave the question open, in view of the cultural remains, whether these pre-Adamic creatures had souls (or, to use the trichotomic terminology, spirits)." Archer, G. Jr., A Survey of Old Testament Introduction, Revised edition, Moody Press, Chicago, pp. 204-205, 1985, cited by Ref-0028, 24(4), September-November 2002, p.45 "In fact the Scriptures know nothing of any pre-Adamic race, despite the unfortunate statements of several commentators, including one very competent Old Testament scholar [Archer], who suggests that Pithecanthropus, the Swanscombe man, and Neanderthal all be relegated to a period prior to Adam. Such a statement once more demonstrates the folly of accepting the propositions of science uncritically, for when we find a place for Neanderthal before Adam, we also find that most scientists now insist that he was very intelligent, had a religion, gardening ability, and socializing tendency. His only difference from a normal contemporary human being was that he suffered from rickets. Now that science has changed its mind, where are our harmonizations left?" Ref-0819, pp. 140-141.

Adam - pre-Adamites - Stott, John : ☪ + "[M]y acceptance of Adam and Eve as historical is not incompatible with my belief that several forms of pre-Adamic 'hominid' seem to have existed for thousands of years previously. . . . It is conceivable that God created Adam out of one of them. . . . I think you may even call some of them Homo sapiens. . ." Adam's disobedience brought condemnation leading to death, Christ's obedience brought justification leading to life. 3. Those who are 'in Adam' die, those who are 'in Christ' have eternal life. 1Cor. 15:22 4. Adam is the 'son of God' (Luke 3:38) as is Christ. (Both were directly created by God.) 5. All men are 'born once' in Adam. Believers are 'born again' in Christ. 6. First Adam became a living being (Gen. 2:7), the last Adam became a life-giving Spirit (1Cor. 15:45). 7. Adam is from the earth -- made of dust (Gen. 2:7), Christ is from heaven. 8. Adam lost dominion, Christ regained it. 9. A tree bore Adam's downfall, a tree bore Christ's victory. 10. Adam's body was animated by the breath of God (Gen. 2:7), the body of Christ is animated by the breath of God (1Cor. 12:13).

age - earth - appearance : "Why does the universe look so old? First, the most natural understanding from Scripture on the age of the universe is this: The universe looks old because the Creator made it whole. When He made Adam, Adam was not a fetus; Adam was a man. He had the appearance of a man, which by our understanding would have required time for Adam to get old. But not by the sovereign creative power of God. He put Adam in the garden. The garden was not merely seeds; it was a fertile, fecund, mature garden. The Genesis account clearly claims that God creates and makes things whole." R. Albert Mohler, Jr., Why Does the Universe Look So Old?, [<http://www.icr.org/article/5669/>] accessed 20101017. "I will define 'mature creation' in the following way. The earth, solar system, Milky Way Galaxy and entire universe were brought into existence supernaturally during six 24-hour days. Top soil and trees appeared virtually instantaneously in the Garden. Fully-grown animals were miraculously formed on land and in the air, complete with symbiotic relationships. The seas instantly swarmed with creatures, great and small, that had never been born or developed from infancy. Our first parents, Adam and Eve, were adults from their first breaths. The sun's nuclear fusion furnace began on Day 4, at full power and in thermodynamic equilibrium. Starlight from distant stars was created in transit, complete with a virtual history of information embedded within the light waves. Adam and Eve could look at the night sky their first evening on earth and see cosmic light sources much as we do tonight. To an observer, the completed creation on Day 6 was fully functioning and in steady state. . . . The mature creation definition does not include such present realities as thorns, thistles, disease and death. These profound defects follow from the post-creation Fall or Curse as described in Genesis 3. Likewise, the mature creation description does not include the idea that fossils were created ex nihilo in Earth rocks. Such evidences of judgment and death find their source in the Genesis Flood which took place about 1600 years following creation." Ref-0784, Don B. DeYoung, Mature creation and seeing distant starlight, 24(3), 54:59, p. 54. "As a point of interest, the question of Adam's navel has also impacted the art world. Raphael (1483-1520) included navels for Adam and Eve in his ceiling fresco at the Vatican. Michelangelo (1475-1564) likewise included a navel for Adam on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. . . . In contrast, Dutch artist Jan van Scorel (1495-1512) painted smooth, featureless stomachs in his Adam and Eve in Paradise. One can imagine the artistic debates over this issue at the time of the paintings, a debate still unresolved." Ref-0784, Don B. DeYoung, Mature creation and seeing distant starlight, 24(3), 54:59, p. 56. "The spectra of distant stars do indeed contain detailed information. Furthermore, every single component of any conceivable supernatural creation faces this 'problem'. Consider a pebble lying upon the ground in the Garden of Eden. Today, rocks come from previously existing materials. If the just-created pebble in the Garden is a smooth stone, it bears an apparent record of chemical weathering or tumbling in water. If it appears rough or broken, it then bears an apparent record of fracturing by previous mechanical weathering. The reader is challenged to describe any detail of the Creation Week, large or small, which would not carry such a historic record. . . . Likewise, did trees in the Garden have rings and knots? . . . If creation with maturity is deceptive, whether for rocks, atmosphere, stars, or our first parents, then so are all biblical miracles. . . . Consider the New Testament miracle of wine-making, found in John 2:1-11. If a chemist could go back in time, could he or she perhaps measure the molecular components that had never actually been converted from sugars? Perhaps the wine could be identified as the product of a particular local vineyard, even though it had never been pressed from harvested grapes. The point here is that created wine contains detailed chemical information, just as starlight contain spectral details. Mature creation is deceptive only when one assumes outright that apparent age is false. The Genesis account of God's supernatural creative activities in six literal days, complete with visible starlight, is fully consistent with a mature creation." Ref-0784, Don B. DeYoung, Mature creation and seeing distant starlight, 24(3), 54:59, p. 57. [Furthermore, the apparent age of creation can hardly be deemed 'deceptive' by God when He clearly revealed otherwise in Genesis -- which at one time was universal knowledge. Those who ignore God's self-revelation in the Scriptures and then accuse Him of being deceptive in a mature creation have only themselves to blame.] "I will conclude with five brief points in favor of a mature creation model. First, a mature creation takes a straightforward, transparent literal approach to the Genesis creation account. Genesis 1 and 2, after all, give us literal narrative history. Second, in explaining the observation of distant starlight, the mature creation view does not require the employment of abstract physics concepts including general relativity, cosmology and gravity theory. Such disciplines are incomplete and may be modified in the future. Third, consider the alternative to created starlight. We are then led to use our present understanding of natural science to explain details of the supernatural Creation. Is this logical or consistent? Were the laws of nature including relativity and conservation of energy even in operation during the Creation Week? Fourth, those who favor a mature creation are in good company. It is a historically-rich position as demonstrated by many Bible scholars, past and present. Fifth, the mature creation is consistent and compatible with the nature of miracles from the Old and New Testaments." age - earth - evolution : ☪ + "Sometimes the glimmering sea suffers a wave of melancholy. Overwhelmed by nostalgia for years gone by, some times even this great expanse feels a touch of weariness in its seemingly eternal existence. The oceans began to form 44 billion years ago. Earth, then in its earliest youth, was hit by storms of meteorites that released carbon dioxide upon disintegration, thus creating the water vapor that would be necessary for the eventual creation of these immense bodies of water, from condensation. The seas must have had a chaotic "childhood," given the young Earth's unstable conditions. Vaporization may have caused them to appear and disappear several times, as a result of multiple periods of warming produced by asteroid showers. After the bombardments of celestial projectiles ceased -- 3.9 billion years ago -- the oceans finally stabilized. In time, simple life forms would emerge, first in the form of bacteria, then, 3 billion years later, as sponges, shipworms, and jellyfish." age - earth - Jewish : ☺ + "The point corresponding to Tishri 1, 3761 B.C., has continued to be that from which the World era is reckoned among the Jews. Accordingly, the formula for changing a date in the World era into the Christian era is to subtract 3,761 between the Jewish New Year's day (Tishri 1) and December 31, and to subtract 3,760 between Jan 1 and the Jewish New Year's day. . . . Note that in comparison with the Jewish date for the creation of the world in 3761 B.C. the Byzantine date was 5509 B.C. and the date calculated by Archbishop James Ussher (1650-1654) was 4004 B.C. In writing such a year date in Hebrew the 5 (ה) of the thousands is simply understood and not written. Next, for the date just given [5721 which corresponds to Sept 21, 1960], come ה and ו which have the numerical values of 400 and 300, respectively and total 700. Then come כ = 20 and נ = 1. Such precision is, of course, impossible, but Ussher and Lightfoot, though failing to take into account the possibility of gaps in the genealogies of Genesis 5 and 11, are much, much closer to the true age of the age - earth - population : ☺ + "According to the now prevailing view, the first Homo sapiens lived over a million years ago. If that is really so, where are all the trillions of people who should either be alive, or whose buried remains, potentially fossilized, should be found in vast graveyards scattered around the world? As a child, I was raised to believe that Adam and Eve were the first two people created and I had no problem believing it. But later people said we evolved from apes and I started to have problems. A big question arose in my mind, 'How many millions of years ago could humans have supposedly begun evolving from apes.' I worked out how many times the world's population had doubled since the first man and woman. Allowing for past diseases, famines, pestilence, wars and infant mortality, the population would probably have doubled at about the rate of once every couple of hundred years, allowing for it to be much slower than the sixty to seventy years it took to double last time. Multiplying the number of times that the population doubled by a couple of hundred years should give a rough idea, give or take a few thousand years, of when the first two humans were either created or evolved. Believe it or not, the world's population has doubled only 31 ? times since the first human couple appeared on earth. This gives 6,500 years. You can work it out for yourself on your own calculator. A lecturer on evolution once told me that there were never just two people because a whole population would have evolved. If that were so, then that would mean that the human population has doubled far less than 31 ? times. But, to maximize believability of the evolutionary scenario, let's say that the population started with only four people a million years ago. This would mean that the average time that the world's population took to double was about 33,000 years (30.5 doublings). So it would have taken that many years to get to eight people, and another

33,000 years before the world's population rose to 16. That is rather slow growth ? by comparison, a Maori lady died in New Zealand in December 1984 at the age of 112, leaving 450 descendants. Population growth is increasing currently at a rate of approximately 1.8% per annum (World Book Encyclopaedia), or doubling every 39 years. Even if the average time that the population doubled in the past was as slow as once every thousand years (that is one twenty-fifth of the present growth rate), this would put the first pair of humans on Earth 31,500 years ago. Some people, not willing to believe that mankind was created only a few thousand years ago, claim that the world's population has been almost wiped out many times. Clearly it has never been wiped out entirely. While some people will assert that the human population has been almost wiped out a number of times, without their providing any evidence to back it up, these same people get very agitated if we suggest that the population was nearly wiped out once by a great Flood in the time of Noah. The world's population was approximately 600 million in the year 1650 and increased to about 2,400 million by 1950. This means that it would have doubled twice in 300 years, at an average rate of once every 150 years. Thanks to the Bible, we can trace the lineages of Jews and Arabs right back to the same patriarch, Abraham, who was born about 2167 BC and had six sons. His first son, Ishmael, was the father of the Arabs, and his second son, Isaac, was the father of Jacob, later called Israel, from whose twelve sons came the 12 tribes of Israel, better known as the Jews. The World Book of Knowledge says that there are approximately 200 million Arabs in the world and about 18 million Jews. This means that since Abraham's time, his descendants through only two sons have doubled roughly 28 times at an average rate of about once every 150 years. Now the Jewish people have undergone a tremendous amount of persecution and slaughter over the centuries. Hitler murdered over six million in concentration camps alone during the Second World War. They must have lost many members through disease, infant mortality and starvation over the centuries just as other people groups have. Their history is replete with stories of battles and loss of life because of wars. Yet we find that their numbers have doubled a minimum of 23 times, at an average rate of once every 182 years. We can calculate the rate of population growth starting from about 4,500 year ago, when, from the historical details found in the Bible, Noah and his family ? eight in total ? survived the deluge. That population has to double 29 ? times to get the current world's population of six and a half billion, at an average doubling rate of once every 152 years. Interesting, isn't it? The Bible's timeframe of history fits the data."

"Evolutionists say that the earth is 4.6 billion years old, so from where did they get this number? They derived it in 1956 from a comparison of isotope ratios in meteorites. What do isotope ratios in meteorites have to do with the age of the earth? Possibly very little -- it depends on where you think they came from. Evolutionists believe that the solar system formed out of leftover dust and gas after the sun formed in a cloud of rubble left over from supernova explosions. They believe that meteorites represent dust-aggregates typical of those "planetesimals" which formed the earth and the other planets. They believe that meteorites have been wandering around in the solar system for the last 4 or 5 billion years, unaffected by the kind of weathering that interferes with earth-bound isotopes. They conclude, therefore, that meteorites contain pristine isotope compositions and thus their isotope "clocks" are reliable . . ." Ref-0814, pp. 166-167.

Allah - not Yahweh : ☪ + "May I state for the record, Allah is not the Arabic term for "God." Allah is an idol. In all our debates in universities and colleges, my brother and I have never found one Muslim ulema who believes that Allah of the Qur'an and the God of the Bible are the same God. Never. If monotheism is the sole measure of truth in this case, if Allah is the same god as the true and living God, then Elijah owes the prophets of Baal (also monotheistic) an apology. So why use the term? I asked a Christian Arab why he continues to use the term Allah when he prays, and he whispered to me, "I cannot bring myself to use the Hebrew names, you know?" Yes, I know. Sadly, I know." Ergun Caner, "The MBBs' Dirty Little Secret", Ref-0057, November/December 2004, p. 10.

Allah - origin - moon god? : ☪ "The desert Arab. . . feared and worshiped incalculable deities in stars and moons. . . Now and then he offered human sacrifice; and here and there he worshiped sacred stones. The center of this stone worship was Mecca [with] the Kaaba and its sacred Black Stone. . . in its southeast corner, five feet from the ground, just right for kissing. . . Within the Kaaba, in pre-Moslem days, were several idols representing gods. One was called Allah. . . three others were Allah's daughters -- al-Uzza, al-Lat, and Manah. We may judge the antiquity of this Arab pantheon from the mention of Al-il-Lat (Al-Lat) by Herodotus as a major Arabian deity. The Quraish [Muhammad's tribe controlling Mecca] paved the way for monotheism by worshiping Allah as chief god; He was presented to the Meccans as the Lord of their soil, to Whom they must pay a tithe of their crops and the first-born of their herds. The Quraish, as alleged descendants of Abraham and Ishmael, appointed the priests and guardians of the shrine and managed its revenues." Ref-0047, cited by Ref-0017, February 2000. "In Mecca was the Kabah, a simple primitive structure housing a black meteorite which the Arabs worshiped as a fetish, and to which they brought sacrifices and came on annual pilgrimages. Some also worshiped Allah and the goddesses at the Kabah. The building that housed the sacred meteorite was in the shape of an enclosed square; its name, Kabah, gives us our word for cube. Allah was the patron deity of the Quraysh, a tribe that made its home in Mecca." Ref-0150, pp. 324-235.

Allah - origin - not moon god? : ☪ "The moon god theory does not adequately explain the presence of the term 'Allah' in present-day Arabic Christian bibles. Evidence seems to suggest that this way of referring to the one true biblical God as Allah began to occur among Jews and Christians earlier than in Muhammad's time. Translations of parts of the New Testament into the Arabic language were done in the fourth and fifth centuries A.D., in which the word 'Allah' was used for the true God." Imad N. Shehadeh, "Do Muslims and Christians Believe in the Same God?", Ref-0200, vol. 161 no. 641, January-March 2004 (pp. 14-26), pp. 16-17. "The word 'Allah' is a cognate of the Hebrew plural אֱלֹהִים, 'a god' or 'God.' The root of these Hebrew words is assumed to be אֱלֹהִים, which corresponds to the Arabic 'ilah, meaning 'a god.' However, while the moon god was referred to as 'ilah, or 'al 'ilah, it is wrong to conclude that 'al 'ilah contracts to 'Allah,' for this has little historical evidence. This popular view does not explain the elimination of the second syllable 'el (or 'il), which is the most important in 'al-'ilah where 'el or 'il is the Semitic word for God since time immemorial. Furthermore this popular belief sadly ignores the much more plausible notion that the word 'Allah,' like many other words -- especially religious words -- was imported from the Arabic 'alaha or 'alah, which is the word for the unique Christian God. Several lines of evidence support this Aramaic origin. . . Imad N. Shehadeh, "Do Muslims and Christians Believe in the Same God?", Ref-0200, vol. 161 no. 641, January-March 2004 (pp. 14-26), p. 18.

almah - a virgin : Isa. 7:14 ☪ almah (Strong's h5959) here means virgin. How else is it a major sign (Isa. 7:11)? Septuagint translates using Greek "parthenos" which specifically is a "virgin". Mtt. 1:23 clearly quotes passage as referring to Christ. Only 7 uses in OT: Gen. 24:43 Rebekah (unmarried, a virgin), Ex. 2:8 Miriam (unmarried, a virgin), Ps. 68:25 procession before God (better be virgins!), Sos. 1:3 purity in marriage, Sos. 6:8 contrasted with queens and concubines (non-virgins), Isa. 7:14 how could an illegitimate child be a sign? See Niessen's article, "The Virginity of the almah in Isaiah 7:14", Ref-0200 137/546 (1980):133-50. "God's instruction to have Shear Jashub accompany Isaiah when he confronts Ahaz as well as the switch from the plural you (Isa. 7:13-14) to the singular "you" (Isa. 7:15-17) makes it clear that this part of the prophecy is not directed to all the house of Israel but rather to Ahaz personally. Thus, having a futuristic prophecy fulfilled in the life of Christ in now way damages relevance to Ahaz since this passage contains two prophecies. One prophecy deals with the distant future and the other deals with Ahaz's immediate situation. Arnold G. Fruchtenbaum, Messianic Christology (Tustin, CA: Ariel Ministries, 1988), 32-37." Andy Woods, "The Purpose of Matthew's Gospel, Part II", Ref-0785, Volume 11 Number 34 December 2007, 5:42, p. 7n6). "The phrase "shall not be established" refers back to this covenant recorded in 2 Samuel 7 and 1 Chronicles 17. God promised David, in an unconditional covenant, that one of his descendants would sit upon the throne of David forever in Jerusalem. At the end of the covenant, God says "And your house and your kingdom shall be established forever before you, Your throne shall be established forever" (2 Sam 7:16). The prophecy of Isaiah 7 was based on the Davidic covenant. . . . The word "you" in verse 14 is second person plural. In other words, he is no longer talking to Ahaz, but the whole House of David. As I understand the chronology of this period, the teenage Prince Hezekiah is alive and well in the courts of the House of David. The sign of the virgin-born son, Immanuel, was directed primarily toward him in order to encourage him to trust the Lord. A few years later, when he came to the throne, he had a great revival in that first year. His trust was only in the Lord." Under the Mosaic Law this altar would have been illegitimate, because its stipulations prohibited both going 'up by steps to My altar' (Exodus 20:26) and an eastward orientation. This is why the altars in previous Temples were constructed with a ramp for priestly ascent (see Mishnah Middot 3:4) and with a north-south orientation. The reason for this prohibition (as well as the commandment in Exodus 28:42 concerning the priests wearing linen underwear) was because of Israel's proximity to the Canaanite culture, whose priests ascended stepped altars in order to reveal their nakedness during their sacrificial rituals, which involved the worship of nature and fertility deities. In addition, the Canaanites worshiped the god Shamash, who represented the sun, which rises in the east." Ref-0146, p. 548.

amillennialism - Augustine of Hippo : ☉ + "Augustine of Hippo is best known as the father of amillennialism. Augustine dated the beginning of the millennium to the first coming of Christ and taught the kingdom of God was present on earth." Ron J. Bigalke Jr., The Revival of Futurist Interpretation following the Reformation, Ref-0785, Volume 13 Number 38 April 2009, 43:58, p. 51. "As the first and most influential theologian to adopt an amillennial viewpoint, Augustine moved that eschatology to the forefront and kept it there for over a millennium. He was the first whose position on the subject is undeniable. It would be the prevailing teaching of not only the Roman Catholic Church, but would influence, in various forms, the teaching of the Reformation." Cameron Cloud, Formative influences in the Allegorical Hermeneutic of Augustine, Ref-0785, Vol. 14 No. 42 August 2010, 25:34, p. 33.

amillennialism - two views : Rev. 20:4; Rev. 20:5; Rev. 20:6 ☉ + "There are basically two forms of amillennialism: the Augustinian view and the "Warfieldian" view. Augustinian amillennialism teaches that the thousand-year period mentioned in Revelation Twenty is figurative, and stands for the New Testament era from the crucifixion and the resurrection of Jesus Christ, through the last judgment and the creation of the new heavens and new earth. The millennium, then, is what dispensationalists call the Church-age, upon earth. Christ is now reigning on a spiritualized throne of David, over a spiritual Israel, for a spiritualized millennium. The saints on earth are also presently reigning spiritually with Christ. The second view, which we have called the "Warfieldian" view, affirms everything that is stated above save for the identity of those who are partakers of the first resurrection and the millennium. This view as earlier taught by the German scholar Klieforth, who, in 1874, posited that the martyred saints now in heaven, are reigning in the spiritual millennium. B. B. Warfield popularizes this view in the United States. He believed the first resurrection represented "the symbolical description of what has befallen those who while dead yet live in the Lord." . . . All amillennialists posit a spiritual resurrection in Revelation 20:4, but a physical resurrection in Revelation 20:5-6." Paul Martin Henebury "The Eschatology of Covenant Theology", Ref-0785 Volume 10 No. 30, September 2006, 5:16, pp. 11-12.

The reason it was translated as 'giant' is because in the Septuagint, the Jewish scholars translated Gen. 6:4 by the Greek word gigantes which means 'Titan.' Our English word 'giant' comes from this Greek word gigentes. It is from the events of Gen. 6:1-4 that the source of Greek and Roman mythologies were derived. These mythologies record how gods from Mount Olympus intermarried with human beings on earth and produced children who had superhuman characteristics, who were greater than men but less than gods." These teeth easily could remove flesh from an animal, but the fruit bat does not use them for this purpose. The same teeth in many kinds of predatory animals used to shred meat can also be used to shred plant material. . . . Bears of the American northwest provide the best example in the wild of how behavior determines diet. Grizzly bears and black bears are well-equipped to destroy the life of other animals. But they also use their physical tools to eat fruits and vegetables. As a biologist, I have personally witnessed bears clean apples out of an apple tree, consume large quantities of clover, and strip all the berries from wild raspberry, huckleberry, and choke cherry plants. These activities are also well documented in the scientific literature. Although classified as carnivores, bears are actually opportunistic omnivores and are quite capable of living off a vegetarian diet if the food source is available." No text is too remote to be able to be twisted to their confusion, no argument is too casuistical, no blasphemy too startling for him to employ. . . . On the strength of Psalm 106:37, he states that they "sacrificed their sons and daughters to devils; they outraged nature; and overthrew from their foundations the laws of relationship. They are become worse than the wild beasts, and for no reason at all, with their own hands they murder their own offspring, to worship the avenging devils who are the foes of our life. . . . The synagogues of the Jews are the homes of idolatry and devils, even though they have no images in them. They are worse even than heathen circuses. . . . Ref-0215, "The Person of Antichrist" "The fact that Dan is not mentioned in verses 5-8 [Rev. 7:5-8] is not unusual. Dan, along with Zebulun, is not mentioned in 1 Chronicles 4-8, which was written after the Exile. Yet even with Dan's absence, the listing of the other tribes is normally taken in Chronicles in a literal way. Some speculate that Dan was omitted in Revelation 7 because of that tribe's idolatrous history, as narrated in Judges 18:30 and 1 Kings 12:29. ¹⁸ Others credit its omission to the view that the Antichrist might come from the tribe of Dan. ¹⁹ . . . [n19] - Irenaeus wrote the following regarding the Antichrist and the omission of Dan in Revelation 7. "And Jeremiah does not merely point out his sudden coming, but he even indicates the tribe from which he shall come, where he says, 'We shall hear the voice of his swift horses from Dan; the whole earth shall be moved by the voice of the neighing of his galloping horses: he shall also come and devour the earth, and the fulness thereof, the city also, and they that dwell therein.' [Jer. 8:16] This too, is the reason that this tribe is

And Jeremiah does not merely point out his sudden coming, but he even indicates the tribe from which he shall come, where he says, "We shall hear the voice of his swift horses from Dan; the whole earth shall be moved by the voice of the neighing of his galloping horses: he shall also come and devour the earth, and the fulness thereof, the city also, and they that dwell therein."? This, too, is the reason that this tribe is not reckoned in the Apocalypse along with those which are saved." Irenaeus, Against Heresies 5.30.2, Ref-0537, p. 559. "And in like manner also we find it written regarding Antichrist. For Moses speaks thus: "Dan is a lion's whelp, and he shall leap from Bashan."? But that no one may err by supposing that this is said of the Saviour, let him attend carefully to the matter. "Dan," he says, "is a lion's whelp;" and in naming the tribe of Dan, he declared clearly the tribe from which Antichrist is destined to spring. For as Christ springs from the tribe of Judah, so Antichrist is to spring from the tribe of Dan.? And that the case stands thus, we see also from the words of Jacob: "Let Dan be a serpent, lying upon the ground, biting the horse's heel."? What, then, is meant by the serpent but Antichrist, that deceiver who is mentioned in Genesis,? who deceived Eve and supplanted Adam. . . . That it is in reality out of the tribe of Dan, then, that that tyrant and king, that dread judge, that son of the devil, is destined to spring and arise, the prophet testifies when he says, "Dan shall judge his people, as (he is) also one tribe in Israel."? But some one may say that this refers to Samson, who sprang from the tribe of Dan, and judged the people twenty years. Well, the prophecy had its partial fulfilment in Samson, but its complete fulfilment is reserved for Antichrist. For Jeremiah also speaks to this effect: "From Dan we are to hear the sound of the swiftness of his horses: the whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing, of the driving of his horses." This last-days opponent of the Jewish people and the Messiah is especially prominent in some of the apocalyptic texts of the Dead Sea Scrolls. Michael Stone, a leading Israeli expert on this literature, has observed that 'the background to this figure lies in Jewish eschatology.' The same conclusion was drawn by Hebrew University professor David Flusser. As an expert on the origins of Christianity, he categorically states, 'The idea of Antichrist is strictly Jewish and pre-Christian.' . . . in later Jewish commentaries, the legendary name given to antimessiah is Armilus. A brief summary of his characteristics, as given in such works as Sefer Zerubbavel and those by Saadiah Gaon, reveals close similarities between the Jewish and Christian concepts of the Antichrist: "This Armilus will deceive the whole world into believing that he is God and will reign over the whole world. He will come with ten kings and together they will fight over Jerusalem. . . Armilus will banish Israel 'to the wilderness' and it will be a time of unprecedented distress for Israel; there will be increasing famine, and the Gentiles will expel the Jews from their lands, and they will hid in caves and towers. . . God will war against the host of Armilus. . . and there will be a great deliverance for Israel and the kingdom of Heaven will spread over all the earth." Ref-0142, p. 244 citing Klatzkin, Jacob, Encyclopedia Judaica, s.v. "Armilus," 3:476-477. "In the Jerusalem Talmud, Targum pseudo-Jonathan and the later Jewish apocalyptic midrashim (commentaries), a Jewish equivalent of the Antichrist appears by the name of Armilus. Works such as Sefer Zerubbavel and those by Saadiah Gaon reveal his characteristics in striking detail. . . Armilus will deceive the whole world into believing he is God and will reign over the whole world. He will come with ten kings and together they will fight over Jerusalem. Armilus is expected to persecute and banish Israel to the wilderness and it will be a time of unprecedented distress for Israel. There will be famine conditions, and the Gentiles will expel the Jews from their lands, and these Jews will hide in caves and towers. Then at the end, God will war against the host of Armilus, there will be a great deliverance for Israel, and the kingdom of heaven will spread over all the earth. Other references have Armilus arising from the Roman empire, having miraculous powers, and being born to a stone statue of a virgin (because of which he was called 'the son of a stone'). It is also interested that he makes this statue 'the chief of all idolatry,' with the result that 'all the Gentiles will bow down to her; burn incense and pour out libations to here.' This resembles Daniel's wicked 'king' and 'coming prince' and his 'abomination of desolation' (Dan. 11:1-31,36-37), and especially the book of Revelation's statue of the beast which is brought to life and made an object of worship (Rev. 13:4,15)." antichrist - Jewish? : Dan. 2:32-45; Dan. 7:2-3; Dan. 9:27; Zec. 6:12; Rom. 11:25; Rev. 11:2; Rev. 12:13; Rev. 13:2 ☪ "Does the person who rebuilds the Temple have to be considered the Messiah? Note that neither the Jewish governor Zerubbabel nor the Judean king Herod -- both of whom rebuilt the Second Temple -- were thought by the Jewish people to be the Messiah. . . the Gentile Persian emperor Cyrus. . . made possible the rebuilding of the Second Temple through his edict. . . It is an outsider who has to sign a legal document [Dan. 9:27] with the Jewish people, not one of their own. . . since the object of Satan's attacks during the Tribulation are all ethnic Jews (Rev. 12:13), it would seem unlikely that the one Satan empowers would also be Jewish (Rev. 13:2). . . it would be contrary to the prophetic sequence of Daniel to have a Jewish kingdom (Dan. 2:32-45; Rom. 11:25). . . to say that the Antichrist is to be a Jew would contradict the very nature of the times of the Gentiles. . . two different beasts are described as arising from the 'sea' and the 'earth.' The 'sea' is a literary image that often indicates the 'Gentile nations' (Dan. 7:2-3). This would mean that its opposite term here, 'earth,' would refer to 'the Jews' There is support for this in that the Greek word can be used as a technical expression for 'the land of Israel.' If this is so, then the first beast, which is from the sea, the Antichrist, is Gentile. And the second beast, the false prophet, is Jewish. . . . While Zechariah 6:12 indicates that the Messiah (?the Branch') will build the Temple, Zechariah is referring to the Millennial Temple. This allows for the Third (Tribulation) Temple to be built by someone else. . . the text of Revelation 11:2 that identifies the Antichrist with the Temple in its desecration does so in terms of Gentile occupation of the site." The Latin form of 'Nero Caesar' when transliterated into Hebrew adds up to 616. This most likely explains the textual variant in Revelation 13:18 with the number 616. It should also be noted that the Greek word for 'Beast' when transliterated back into Hebrew adds up to 666. Ancient writers referred to Nero as a 'beast' (See Philostratus Vit. Apoll. 4.38; Sib. "Gumerlock, . . . says he has "evidence from a fifth-century book on biblical genealogies that some in the early church had been using Nero's name to calculate the number of the beast." [Gary DeMar and Francis X. Gumerlock, The Early Church and the "End of the World": The Past Fulfillment of Matthew 24 (Powder Springs, GA: American Vision, 2005), 81 n. 108.] Gumerlock found this evidence in a chronology entitled Liber genealogus (Genealogical Book or Book of Genealogy) which was written in the fifth century in North Africa, composed between 405 and 412 and then edited in 427, 438, and 455. Written in Latin, it was edited by Theodore Mommsen. It lists events from the creation of Adam and Eve all the way up to the fifth century A.D. The Liber genealogus says on page 194 that "Nero is he whose name John called in the Apocalypse 616. Here wisdom is understood [Rev. 13:18], that through letters the name of him may be computed, who is called, as is related: 'Antichrist.' 1 13 18 9 3 8 17 9 18 19 20 18. The collected number equals 154. Multiplying this by four, according to the four letters of the name of Nero equals 616, which is the name of Antichrist." Admittedly, this moves the date of the first connection between Nero and the first beast of Revelation 13 back about 1,400 years from what was previously believed. But even if some leaders in the fifth century made this connection, the question still remains, Why did none of the earliest Christian writers who discussed 666 ever mention it? Why were Irenaeus, Andreas, Primasius, and Victorinus apparently unaware of this view? If Neron Caesar is such an obvious connection to the number 666 or even 616, then why did it take at least 350 years for someone to see it?" Mark L. Hitchcock, "A Critique of the Preterist View of Revelation_13 and Nero", Ref-0200, Volume 164 Number 655, July-September 2007, 341:356, pp. 352-353. But, as we have already said, the wound of the first beast was healed, and he (the second beast) was to make the image speak, that is to say, he should be powerful; and it is manifest to all that those who at present still hold the power are Latins. Robinson, who supports the early date, says, "But in Revelation it is clear that the first king must be Augustus." If it is clear-cut that one should begin counting with Julius, as Gentry alleges, why do a majority of early-date advocates begin the count with Augustus and end up with Galba (or even Vespasian) as the sixth king? "Speaking of the eighth and final form of the beast's rule, Rev. 17:11 says, "and he goes to destruction." Gentry says this refers to Vespasian. However, to chapters later (in Rev. 19:20) the beast and the false prophet are cast into the lake of fire, which is the same destruction of the final head of the beast described in Rev. 17:11. Yet Gentry interprets Rev. 19:20 as a reference to Christ's providential destruction of Nero."

antichrist - Nero - thought to be : ☉ "That the temple accordingly was built in seven weeks, is evident; for it is written in Esdras. And thus Christ became King of the Jews, reigning in Jerusalem in the fulfilment of the seven weeks. And in the sixty and two weeks the whole of Judaea was quiet, and without wars. And Christ our Lord, "the Holy of Holies," having come and fulfilled the vision and the prophecy, was anointed in His flesh by the Holy Spirit of His Father. In those "sixty and two weeks," as the prophet said, and "in the one week," was He Lord. The half of the week Nero held sway, and in the holy city Jerusalem placed the abomination; and in the half of the week he was taken away, and Otho, and Galba, and Vitellius. And Vespasian rose to the supreme power, and destroyed Jerusalem, and desolated the holy place. And that such are the facts of the case, is clear to him that is able to understand, as the prophet said." Clement of Alexandria, The Stromata, or Miscellanies, 1.21, Ref-0538, p. 329. On the basis of this proposal and Paul’s teaching that the Day of the Lord will not come until the man of sin is revealed, some conclude that the Day of the Lord will not start until sometime after the middle of the 70th week. There is a significant problem with this proposal, . . . other activities of the man of sin . . . will precede his declaration to be God and reveal who he is at least three and one-half years before that declaration. First, the man of sin will rise to power as the 11th ruler within the already formed ten-division confederation that will constitute the revived Roman Empire (Dan. 7:7-8, 20, 23-24). Second, as the man of sin rises to power, he will overthrow three of the original ten rulers of the revived Roman Empire (Dan. 7:8, 20, 24). Apocrypha : ☛ The 14 books of the Septuagint included in the Vulgate but considered uncanonical by Protestants because they are not part of the Hebrew Scriptures. The Roman Catholic canon accepts 11 of these books and includes them in the Douay Bible. Writings or statements of questionable authorship or authenticity. [Middle English Apocrypha, not authentic, from Late Latin Apocrypha, the Apocrypha, from Greek Apokrupha, neuter pl. of apokruphos, secret, hidden, from apokruptein, to hide away : apo-, apo- + kruptein, kruph-, to hide.] Fifteen writings recorded during the 400 years between the Old and New testaments. Apocrypha - canonical? : ☛ + "Following the lead of the great patristic writer and scholar Jerome, the reformers argued that the only Old Testament writings that could be regarded as belonging to the canon of Scripture were those originally included in the Hebrew Bible. A distinction was thus drawn between the "Old Testament" and "Apocrypha": the former consisted of works found in the Bible that were originally written in Hebrew (or Hebrew and Aramaic), while the latter consisted of works found in the Greek and Latin Bibles (such as the Vulgate), but not in the Hebrew Bible. While some reformers allowed that the apocryphal works were edifying reading, there was a general agreement that these works could not be used as the basis of doctrine. Medieval theologians, however, to be followed by the Council of Trent in 1546, defined the "Old Testament" as "those Old Testament works contained in the Greek and Latin Bibles," thus eliminating any distinction between the "Old Testament" and "Apocrypha." Ref-0686, pp. 222-223.

Apocrypha - deuterocanonical : ☛ + "Roman Catholics use the terms "protocanonical" and "deuterocanonical," holding a distinction between a first or original canon (Greek protos, meaning "first") and a secondary canon (Greek deuterios, meaning "second"). Instead of "apocrypha" the Roman Catholic term is "deuterocanonical," acknowledging that these questioned books were not originally part of the canon but were accepted later." Ref-0236, pp. 163-164. "The Roman Church prefers to think of the apocryphal books as "scripture" (with a little "s") and distinguishes them as a "second canon," or deuterocanonical (a term introduced in 1566 by Sextus of Sienna), which indicates they are not equal in authority to the books of the "first canon" (protocanonical). The Eastern Orthodox Church devised a different three-fold distinction: books that could be read in the church (canonical), books that could be read privately (Apocrypha), and books that could not be read (pseudepigrapha)." Ref-0062, pp. 78-79. "At the Council of Trent in 1546, the Roman Church promulgated the following decree: 'If anyone receive not as sacred and canonical these said books, entire with all their parts. . . Let him be anathema!' By this decree Jerome himself was condemned, while the very firm position of the synagogue on the canon was contradicted." Ref-0060, p. 173. "In this preface Jerome explains his views on the Apocrypha. . . He declares that as there are twenty-two letters in the Hebrew alphabet, so there are twenty-two books of the Hebrew canon. He then lists the twenty-two books which, though counted differently, are the same as our thirty-nine. Although Jerome hurriedly translated Tobit and Judith for his friends, he excluded them from the canon because they did not meet the benchmark of what he called "the Hebrew truth." Nevertheless, contrary to Jerome, the books of the Apocrypha, handed down in their Old Latin form, were retained in the Latin Bible." Ref-0236, p. 145. "The first Latin Bibles of the second century had been translated from the Greek Septuagint rather than from the Hebrew text and so had naturally included these books [the Apocrypha]. Jerome, however, insisted on distinguishing these apocryphal books from the canonical books, and thus he relegated them to a secondary position. At the Council of Carthage in 397, however, it was decided that the apocryphal books were suitable for reading in the churches despite Jerome's reservations." Ref-0791, p. 63.

Ref-0060, p. 97. "[The Apocrypha] seem not to have been included in the beginning in the Septuagint, but they were gradually introduced into its later editions. Neither Josephus nor Philo cites them. Christ and the apostles never referred to them, although they freely used the text of the Septuagint and were certainly acquainted with the material in question. (Jude 1:9 may allude to the Book of Enoch, a pseudepigraph. . .). . . In the first century, Jerome added the Apocryphal books to his Latin translation of the Bible, the Vulgate, calling attention to the evident difference between the inspiration of the canonical writings and the less significant spiritual value of these." Ref-0060, p. 172. There is an almost unbroken testimony of antiquity AGAINST accepting the Apocrypha into the canon: (1) Philo quoted the OT prolifically, but never quoted from the Apocrypha as inspired. (2) Josephus explicitly excludes the Apocrypha, numbering the books of the OT as twenty-two. Neither does he quote the apocryphal books as Scripture. (3) Jesus and the NT writers never once quote the Apocrypha although there are hundreds of quotes and references to almost all of the canonical books of the OT. (4) The Jewish scholars of Jamnia (A.D. 90) did not recognize the Apocrypha. (5) No canon or council of the Christian church recognized the Apocrypha as inspired for nearly four centuries. (6) Many of the great Fathers of the early church spoke out against the Apocrypha, for example, Origen, Cyrille of Jerusalem, Athanasius. (7) Jerome, the great scholar and translator of the Latin Vulgate, rejected the Apocrypha as part of the canon. (8) Many Roman Catholic scholars through the Reformation period rejected the Apocrypha. (9) Luther and the Reformers rejected the canonicity of the Apocrypha. "Josephus's canon of twenty-two books clearly excludes the additions in the Greek version of his day. Discussion seeking to identify precisely which books he had in mind must take into consideration that some books which were counted as one in Josephus's day are divided in modern Bibles. The most dramatic example is that in the first century the Minor Prophets were considered on book, the Book of Twelve, possibly because they all fitted on a standard-size scroll." apostasy - saved - never : 1Jn. 2:19 apostasy - scholarly : ☪ "When religious people in mosques, synagogues, and churches take up their writings of their respective faiths, they find there what God has told to Muhammed or Moses or Jesus, true and factual stories about what the founders of Islam, Judaism, or Christianity have said and done. When scholars of Islam or Judaism or Christianity read these same writings, a fair number of them receive these writings not as God's word but as statements of what humanity has written down in God's name. In the case of the Gospels, therefore, the body of the faithful in the churches read words they assume Jesus said, accounts of what he did, while scholars in universities and Christian seminaries alike find in the Gospels evidence that - properly interpreted - may tell us about things Jesus 'really' did or said. It follows that there is a considerable difference between how the faithful receive Scriptures - as the word of God - and how scholars read this same Scripture - as (mere) evidence about what may or may not have been said. . . . which Jesus? Is it the one the scholars (this morning) tell me really lived and worked, said this (but not that), did this (but not the other thing)? Or the one Christian believers believe is son of God. . . ." The first is this: Does the Bible indicate that there will be apostasy in the church? The second is, What should be the Christian's attitude toward it?" Ref-0056, p. 139. ". . . a definition of apostasy is this: ?A departure from truth previously accepted, involving the breaking of a professed relationship with God.' Apostasy always involves willful leaving of previously known truth and embracing error." Ref-0056, p. 140.

"The following is a list of the seven major passages that deal with the last days for the church: 1 Timothy 4:1-3; 2 Timothy 3:1-5; 4:3-4; James 5:1-8; 2 Peter 2:1-22; 3:3-6; Jude 1-25. Every one of these passages emphasizes over and over again that the great characteristic of the final time of the church will be that of apostasy. The New Testament pictures the condition within the professing church at the end of the age by a system of denials. 1) Denial of God (Luke 17:26; 2 Timothy 3:4-5); 2) Denial of Christ (1 John 2:18; 4:3; 2 Peter 2:6); 3) Denial of Christ's return (2 Peter 3:3-4); 4) Denial of the Faith (1 Timothy 4:1-2; Jude 3); 5) Denial of sound doctrine (2 Timothy 4:3-4); 6) Denial of the separated life (2 Timothy 3:1-7); 6) Denial of Christian liberty (1 Timothy 4:3-4); (6) Denial of morals (2 Timothy 3:1-8,13; Jude 18); 7) Denial of Authority (2 Timothy 3:42)." apostle : ☪ Greek apostolos = sent away from. Apos = away from, stello = sent. Hebrew equivalent: apo = me, stello = sheliac, the root for Mashiach or Messiah. "It is precarious to equate a missionary with an apostle merely upon the basis of the idea of sending forth in the verb from the same root, apostello. The word apostle means 'a sent one' only in the sense of a representative of God sent to the people. . . . Except for Barnabas and Paul, the apostles were not characterized by missionary activity. On the contrary, the apostles remained in Jerusalem while others went forth with the message (See Acts 5:2,18; 6:2-6; 8:1; 9:27; 15:2; Gal. 1:17-2:10). Acts 8:1 especially makes this clear, since the apostles remained in Jerusalem after the rest of the church was scattered and even years after this event (see Acts 11:1; 15:2; Gal. 1:18; 2:1). The initial outward thrust of Christianity was carried by Philip the evangelist (Acts 8:5-40) rather than by an apostle." Ref-0115, pp. 53-54.

Now a messenger is usually sent; but the word messenger also calls to mind the message the person carries, and suggests he represents the one who sent him. In other words, actual usage in the New Testament suggests that ἀπόστολος (apostolos) commonly bears the meaning a special representative or a special messenger rather than "someone sent out." "Aramaic sections of the Old Testament include two words as a place name in Genesis 31:47; one verse in Jeremiah 10:11; about six chapters in the Book of Daniel (Dan. 2:4b-7:28). If someone looks at a copy of the Hebrew Bible, these sections in Aramaic will appear no different from other parts of the Old Testament. This is true because the Aramaic characters are like those of the Hebrew, or, to be more exact, the square-shaped Hebrew letters are actually borrowed from the Aramaic. . . . The longest Old Testament section in Aramaic begins in Daniel 2:4. The first part of the verse is in Hebrew, and the Aramaic portion starts with the response of the Chaldeans, "O king, live forever!" An interesting confirmation of this linguistic change within the verse has come to light in recent years. The amazing Dead Sea Scrolls have produced a little fragment of this section of Daniel, and in the middle of Daniel 2:4 the Hebrew stops and the Aramaic begins exactly as our text reads two thousand years later. The Hebrew portion of Daniel resumes at the end of chapter 7. This transition of Aramaic to Hebrew is also confirmed by the Dead Sea Scrolls, for of the two manuscripts that have this section, both have the change from Aramaic to Hebrew precisely where our modern text has it!" The battle is placed in the sixth year of the Assyrian king and it is stated that he left Nineveh on the fourteenth day of Aiaru (Apr/May) and crossed the Euphrates at its (spring) flood, hence the event at Qarqar is probably to be placed in the summer of 853 B.C. This provides independent confirmation of the rule of Ahab at this time." Ref-0840, p. 248. "Adherents of the Assyrian School, presupposing that the Eponym List is precise, will "fix" Shalmaneser II's (III) accession to the throne at the "Assyrian" date B.C. 859 (or 858). Then, having accepted "A-ha-ab-bu Sir-i-la-a-a" as being Ahab of Israel, they deduce that these two sovereigns engaged one another at the Battle of Qarqar 853 B.C. (or 852) in Shalmaneser's sixth year. Thus, for this school, the term of Ahab's reign is forced to correspond to that year, even though the Hebrew record clearly places him about forty-five years back in time. "la-u-a mar Hu-um-ri-i" is also embraced as "Jehu, son of Omri"; hence they compel Jehu to be on the throne in the eighteenth year of the reign of Shalmaneser, about 841 (Assyrian date). But again, this does violence to the Hebrew account which would place Jehu forty-five years earlier. How then does the Assyrian Academy content with and remove this forty-five year excess? They reduce the span by contriving and interjecting a serious of unsubstantiated co-regencies upon the lengths of reign of the Jewish monarchs. . . . Dr. Thiele, for example, proposes nine such overlapping co-regencies. However, of the nine, five are neither mentioned nor demonstrable in the Holy Text." Ref-0186, p. 161. "The story may be improbable given the events that happened during Ahab's reign. He suffered a three year drought that destroyed most of the livestock in the kingdom. Just a few years before this alleged event at Qarqar took place, Ahab was invaded by Benhadad. In that battle, Ahab was scarcely able to muster 7000 soldiers much less any chariots or horsemen. However, the story is that he sent 10,000 troops and 2000 chariots to this battle at Qarqar. This was no small force, especially considering the large number of chariots." archaeology - Ahaz - bulla : 2K. 15:38; 1Chr. 3:13; Isa. 1:1 ☪ " . . . Ahaz is mentioned once in the surviving inscriptions of Tiglath-pileser. On a large clay tablet giving a summary of the first 17 years of his reign, the king states that he received tribute from 'Jehoahaz of Judah'. . . Here Ahaz's full name, meaning 'Yahweh has possessed,' is used. This payment was probably made in 734 BC, whereas the one recorded in the Old Testament most likely dates to the following year. . . A clay sealing, or bulla, impressed by the original seal reads, 'Belonging to Ahaz [son of] Yehotam, King of Judah.' The inscription thus names two Biblical personages -- Ahaz king of Judah, and his father Yehotam (Jerusalem in our English translations), also a king of Judah. Presently in a private collection in London, the origin of the bulla is unknown." Ref-0066, Vol. 14 No. 1, Winter 2001, p. 24. archaeology - Artemis - coin : Acts 19:35 ☪ "A bronze coin of the time of the Roman Emperor Antoninus Pius A.D. 138-161, minted in Ephesus. The obverse shows the head of the Emperor and the reverse the Temple of Artemis, the principal goddess of the city. . . . The Authorised and Revised Versions of the Bible give the name of the goddess in this passage as Diana (Acts 19:24,27-28,34-35), but this is simply a substitution of the Roman or Latin name for the Greek form Artemis, which is what appears in the Greek text . . . The Greek inscription on the obverse of the coin reads ephesiōn, 'of [the] Ephesians', and dis neōkorōn, 'twice temple keeper' being a title granted to several cities in Asia Minor which built and maintained temples in honour of the Roman emperor. The 'twice' indicates that Ephesus was 'temple keeper' also of the Temple of Artemis, a fact referred to in the speech of the town clerk (grammateus) of Ephesus, quoted in Acts . . ." Gods rule heaven and earth, man made from clay mixed with blood to take over lesser gods' chores of tending land. Flood is sent to destroy mankind. One man, Atrahasis, is warned and told to build boat. Loads boat with food and animals and is saved while world perishes. The human race is put to work and it multiplies, until the noise disturbs Enlil's sleep. He therefore decides to destroy man and sends first a plague, then a famine, and then a drought, and finally a flood, but each time Enki instructs Atrahasis, who now appears in the story, on how to mitigate the effects of these disasters. He gives him seven days warning of the flood, and tells him to build a boat. archaeology - Babylonian Chronicle : 2K. 24:10-17 ☪ Cuneiform tablets bought by British Museum in late nineteenth century and translated in 1956. One entry reads: "The 7th year, the month of Kislev, the king of Babylonia mustered his forces and marched to Syria [Syria-Palestine]. He camped against the city of Judah [Jerusalem] and on the second day of the month of Adar he took the city and captured the king. He appointed a king of his own choice there, took its heavy tribute and brought them to Babylon." Ref-0025, p. 233. " This tablet forms part of a series which summarises the principle events of each year. Each annual entry is separated from the next by a horizontal line, and begins with a reference to the year of reign of the king in question, The present tablet, which covers the years 605 to 594 B.C., is of particular interest from the point of view of Biblical archaeology because of the entry for the seventh year of Nebuchadnezzar (598-7 B.C.). The text (lines 11-13 on the reverse) runs ?[1.11] in the seventh year, the month of Kislimu, the king of Akkad mustered his troops, marched to Hatti-land, (1.12) and encamped against the city of Judah (ālu ia hu du) and on the second day of the month of Addaru he seized the city and captured the king. (1.13) He appointed there a king of his heart, received its heavy tribute and sent (it) to Babylonian.' In this passage it is clear from the preceding entries that the 'king of Akkad' was Nebuchadnezzar, the 'Hatti-land' was Syria-Palestine, and the 'city of Judah' was Jerusalem. The text is therefore saying that Nebuchadnezzar led his army to Syria-Palestine, besieged Jerusalem and captured it. . . . the importance of the text is that it fixes the date of the first fall of Jerusalem to 16 March 597 B.C., an event referred to in 2 Kings 24:10-17, which identifies the deposed king as Jehoiachin (or Jehoiachin) and Nebuchadnezzar's nominee as Zedekiah. . . . This document has a tantalizing aspect because it ends with the year 594 B.C., and the next surviving tablet in the series only takes up the story again in 556 B.C., so the Babylonian evidence for the final destruction of Jerusalem, probably in 586 B.C., is lacking." Nabonidus . . . concludes the inscription with a prayer to the moon god Sin to whom the ziggurat was consecrated. The prayer is of particular interest since it ends . . . with a plea for the piety of . . . 'Belshazzar the son first (born) the offspring of my heart (body)'. The reference is, of course, to Belshazzar who figures prominently in the Book of Daniel, where he is described as 'king' of Babylonian (Dan. 5:1 etc.). It is clear from other inscriptions that Nabonidus spent several years of his reign in north-west Arabia during which Belshazzar ruled Babylonian in his place, and though he is not included in the king lists he was king in all but name during that time, and the Biblical statement may be understood in that light. The cuneiform texts show that the designation of Daniel as 'the third ruler in the kingdom' (Dan. 5:29) makes sense, Nabonidus (in Arabia) being first, and Belshazzar (in Babylon) being second." Ref-0843, p. 80.

Recent excavations at et-Tell, a large mound a mile and a half from the shores of the Sea of Galilee, uncover a thriving port with city-levels that date back to the time of King David. Religious items for both Yahweh and Baal / Moon-god worship confirm the Bible's description of Assyrian influences on Israel and Syria. I gathered all their [former] inhabitants and returned [to them] their habitations. . ." Ref-0025, p. 251. "This clay cylinder is inscribed in Babylonian cuneiform with an account by Cyrus, king of Persia 549-530 B.C., of his conquest of Babylonian in 539 B.C. and capture of Nabonidus, the last Babylonian king . . . He then describes measures of relief which he brought to the inhabitants of the city, and tells how he returned a number of god-images which Nabonidus had collected in Babylonian, to their proper temples through Babylonia, Assyria and western Iran. At the same time he arranged for the restoration of these temples, and organized the return to their homelands of a number of people who had been held in Babylonia by the Babylonian kings. Though this account refers only to Mesopotamia and Iran it represents a policy which he carried out throughout his newly conquered empire, and the document transcribed in Ezra 6:3-5 authorizing the rebuilding of the Jerusalem Temple, and the subsequent return of the Jews (Ezra 2) to Palestine, were manifestations of this policy." archaeology - David - house of : 2K. 8:28-29 ☩ See Gary A. Byers, "The Tell Dan Stela", Ref-0066, 16.4 (2004), p. 121. "More than thirty years ago, Israeli archaeologists commenced a massive dig at Tel Dan, the site of the infamous shrine erected by the apostate king of Israel, Jeroboam. After uncovering the ruins of a cult center including a high place with a huge stepped altar, they came across an inscription carved into a rock that had been used secondarily as part of the protective walls of the city. The inscription, dating from the mid-9th century and written in Aramaic, describes battles waged by an Aramean king against Israel and Judah, which he calls bytdwd, "house of David." This reference to David by name, along with what may be now regarded as a second reference (see following), places David's existence on solid, indisputable historical grounds. Despite feeble responses on the part of skeptics who explain the name David in a host of ways so as to relegate it as unimportant, archaeology has provided great opposition to the minimalist school." archaeology - Gilgamesh Epic - flood story : Gen. 7:7; Gen. 8:4; Gen. 8:7-12; Gen. 8:20 ☩ Babylonian account of the Flood. Named after King Gilgamesh who is supposed to have ruled the Mesopotamian city of Uruk around 2600 B.C. Believed to date from 18th century B.C. Man, Utnapishtim, warned by creator god Ea to build boat. Passed safely through the Flood with family, treasures, and living creatures. Boat comes to rest on Mount Nisir in Kurdistan. Utnapishtim sends out a dove, a swallow, and finally raven. When raven doesn't return he leaves boat and offers sacrifice to gods. Ref-0025, p. 64. "One of the great literary compositions of ancient Mesopotamia was the Epic of Gilgamesh, mainly known from copies of the seventh century B.C. found at Nineveh. . . . The eleventh tablet contains the story told to Gilgamesh by Utnapishtim, a hero living in a distant land, of how he gained immortality. He narrates how the gods became angry at the nuisance caused on the earth by men and decided to destroy them with a flood. Utnapishtim was specially favoured by the God Ea, who warned him to build a ship and to bring into it all his family, his treasures, and living creatures of every kind. He does this and so escapes a prodigious storm leading to a flood which destroys all the rest of mankind. The storm ends on the seventh day, and on the twelfth day land emerges from the waters. In due course the boat comes to rest on Mount Nisir (in Kurdistan) and Utnapishtim sends out in turn a dove, a swallow and a raven, only the raven not returning. Finally Utnapishtim emerges from the boat, and offers a sacrifice to the gods. This version, which made a tremendous stir in Victorian England when George Smith announced its discovery in 1872, supplies details about the resting place of the boat and the episode of the birds, which are missing in the Atrahasis Epic." archaeology - Hezekiah's water tunnel : 2Chr. 32:2-4; 2Chr. 32:30-32; 1K. 1:45; 2K. 20:20 ☪ Tunnel is 1,750 feet long through solid limestone connecting the Gihon Spring with present-day Pool of Siloam. "Researchers in the old City of David believe they may have discovered underground spaces that may have been used as a miqveh (ritual immersion pool) for the special purification of the High Priest in the Second Temple era (time of Jesus). Diver's photographs underneath the famous 8th-century B.C. water tunnel location south of the City of David revealed the subterranean spaces. . . Hezekiah's water tunnel was rediscovered in the 19th century when Jerusalem was under the Ottoman Turkish Empire. An inscription left by the original diggers, which described their procedure (as in the Biblical account), was removed and permanently housed in the museum in Istanbul. . . the water did not stream directly from the spring to the tunnel and then to the pool (from where the water was drawn) but followed a long path through underground spaces from the spring to the tunnel. Because the High Priest's purification required a separate, undefilable place, and the biblical text records that the High Priest anointed kings of Israel at this place (1 Kings 1:45), the researchers have conjectured that these spaces may have been utilized for that purpose." Ref-0051, March/April 2002. "Scholars from Hebrew University and the Geological Survey of Israel studied flora samples taken from the plaster that lined the tunnel walls. A radioisotope study of a stalactite in the tunnel corroborated this date." -- Todd Bolen, BiblePlaces Newsletter, Oct. 21, 2003. "Radiometric tests of the Siloam Tunnel, carried out in September 2003 by researchers from the Hebrew University, the Israel Geological Survey, and UK-based Reading University, have confirmed that it dates back to around 700 BC. A Biblical account credits its construction to King Hezekiah (2K. 20:20; 2Chr. 32:30). In fact, history shows that in 701 BC, in preparation for a potentially disastrous siege by Assyrian King Sennacherib, Hezekiah decided to bring the Gihon's waters into the city." Fortification walls collapsed at the time the city was destroyed, possibly by earthquake activity (Jos. 6:20). Destruction occurred at harvest time in the spring as indicated by large quantities of grain stored in the city (Jos. 2:6; Jos. 3:15; Jos. 5:10). Siege was short since the grain stored in the city was not consumed. The grain was not plundered, as was usually the case in antiquity, due to Divine injunction (Jos. 6:17-18). Ref-0025, p. 152. "They found collapsed walls, not walls that were broken down from the outside but that had fallen down (Jos. 6:20). The walls had not fallen inward, but outward, creating a ramp of fallen bricks by which the Israelites 'went up into the city, every man straight before him' (Jos. 6:20). The unusually large stores of carbonized grain found in the ruins showed that the city had endured only a short siege, which the Bible numbers at seven days (Jos.

6:12-20), and that the grain had been recently harvested (Jos. 3:15). Also, because grain was a valuable commodity almost always plundered by conquering forces, the large amount of grain left in the ruins is puzzling -- but consistent with God's command that nothing in the city be taken except valuable metals to be used for the treasury of the Lord (Jos. 6:24). The city had also been burned, exactly as the Bible records (Jos 6:24)." Scott Ashley and Jerold Aust, "Jericho: Does the Evidence Disprove or Prove the Bible?", Ref-0066, 16.2 (2003), p. 56. "From 1930 to 1936 an expedition . . . was conducted by Professor John Garstang of the Liverpool University. Concerning the subsequent uninhabited period he wrote, 'Our excavations have in fact proved that after its destruction the walled city was not reconstructed, nor was the site more than partially inhabited, for about 500 years.' . . . In his chapter entitled 'The city destroyed by Joshua', Garstang wrote: 'The main defences of Jericho in the Late Bronze Age [LB] followed the upper brink of the city mount, and comprised two parallel walls, the outer six feet and the inner twelve feet thick. Investigations along the west side show continuous signs of destruction and conflagration. The outer wall suffered most, its remains falling down the slope. The inner wall is preserved only where it abuts the citadel, or tower, to a height of eighteen feet; elsewhere it is found largely to have fallen, together with the remains of buildings upon it, into the space between the walls which was filled with ruins and debris. Traces of intense fire are plain to see, including reddened masses of brick, cracked stones, charred timber and ashes." David Down, The Story of Jericho, Ref-0784, 20(1) 2006, pp. 87-88.

archaeology - Nazareth Inscription : ☪

"The Nazareth Inscription is one of the most powerful pieces of extra-biblical evidence that the resurrection of Christ was being preached right from the beginnings of Christianity. It is a Greek inscription on a marble tablet measuring approximately 24 inches by 15 inches. The exact time and place of its discovery is not known. The text records an abridged decree by emperor Claudius, instituting the death penalty for tomb robbing, a very unusual punishment. This fact clearly proves that the story of the resurrection of Christ was widely known almost immediately after His crucifixion. In other words, the story of the resurrection of Christ must have been a story that was circulated by his Apostles themselves, and it was not a later invention by Christians of the post-apostolic period, as some modern scholars in the past have argued." Jared M. Compton, Is the Resurrection Historically Reliable?, Ref-0066, 22.4 (2009), 105:108, p. 106.

Of special interest to Bible students is one panel in the second row in which a bearded Semite bows before the king while his servants present gifts. The text refers to the humble suppliant as Jehu, son of Omri (a name by which all Israelite kings were identified, whether of the Omride dynasty or not) and describes the gifts he brought. The event, apparently from the year 841 BC, gives us the earliest surviving picture of an Israelite and shows how such a person might have appeared to an Assyrian sculptor. The inscription on it simply gives the Hebrew consonants pym (from right to left) and this spelling, vocalised pîm in the Old Testament, is found in a passage in 1 Samuel which describes the Philistine monopoly of metalworking in Palestine in the time of Saul. According to the text there was no smith in Israel, and the Israelites went to the Philistines to have their tools sharpened. The charge was a pîm for the ploughshares, the axes, and three(-tined) forks, the adzes and the setting of the goads (1S. 13:19-21). The pîm here presumably represented that weight in silver." This would make it quite plausible that nearly 400 years later (c. 1440 BC) a Semite in Egypt--named Moses--could write the Pentateuch." Ref-0818, p. 89. "The question as to whether or not Moses could have had access to an alphabetic script and therefore could have written the Pentateuch in its present form appears now to be answered with a resounding affirmative. In earlier times the invention of an alphabet was attributed to the Phoenicians who flourished at 1200-1000 B.C. or so, some centuries later than the traditional date of Moses. In the 1930s, a graffiti Semitic alphabet was discovered at Serabit el-Khadem in the Sinai desert, dated by Albright to the 16th century, thus roughly contemporary to Moses. Even more recently a similar alphabet was found carved on the face of a cliff at Wadi el-Hol in deep South Egypt. This one, from ca. 1900 B.C., antedates Moses by 450 years." Eugene H. ark - Noah's - animals fit on : Gen. 7:2-3 ☪

"One common definition of a species is a group of organisms which can interbreed and produce fertile offspring, and cannot mate with other species. However, most of the so-called species (obviously all the extinct ones) have not been tested to see what they can or cannot mate with. In fact, not only are there known crosses between so-called species, but there are many instances of trans-generic mating, so the 'kind' may in some cases be as high as the family. Identifying the 'kind' with the genus is also consistent with Scripture, which spoke of kinds in a way that the Israelites could easily recognize without the need for tests of reproductive isolation." ark - Noah's - duration : Gen. 7:11; Gen. 8:18

☪ "The chart below summarizes the events and activities which took place during the time Noah was on the Ark, as told in Genesis 7-8. Take note of the number of days given as the total amount of time Noah was on board the Ark with his family and the animals: 364, not 370 or 377, as is usually supposed. Note that this analysis assumes that Noah did not enter the Ark until the rains actually began to fall and the fountains of the deep began to open, pairing verses 7:11 and 7:13 as referring to the same day. . . . it seems obvious to me that Noah spent only 364 days on the Ark with his family and the animals (providing, of course, he entered on the 17th day of the 2nd month, and not seven days earlier, as some theologians interpret. This analysis is based on the Masoretic text." Mark L. Howard, How long was Noah on the Ark? Ref-0784, 22(1) 2008, 62:64, pp. 62-63.

"Consider the following sobering points: At the purely factual level, we do not know to within an order of magnitude how many species of plants and animals we share the globe with: fewer than 2 million are currently classified, and estimates of the total number range from under 5 million to more than 50 million. At the theoretical level, things are even worse: we cannot explain from first principles why the global total is of the general order of 10⁷ rather than 10⁴ or 10¹⁰." Ref-0232, p. 280. "The underlying problem, as Whitney saw it, was the shortage of space on Noah's ark. "If we insist upon fixity of species we make the Ark more crowded than a sardine can," he argued. "If we agree to all [variation] that can be demanded, we simplify the Ark problem greatly," because all present-day species could have descended from relatively few passengers on the ark." Ref-0792, p. 109.

"Think of one and a half football fields for the length and a four-story building for the height. . . capable of holding over 500 railroad stockcars inside its hull! . . . the average size for animals is that of a sheep. The Ark was capable of holding 125,280 sheep. . . Only the animals that live on land (mammals, reptiles) or in the air (birds) were to be taken on board the Ark. Ultimately, the number of animals that went on the Ark was about 35,000. A number that would fill approximately 146 railroad stockcars. . . The Bible says they were sent according to their kind. . . From the large Saint Bernard to the diminutive Chihuahua, there are presently 250 types of domesticated dogs living today. There are also wild dogs such as the wolf or coyote. Noah did not need to take every type of dog on board. He only needed a pair of a 'kind' of a dog, which was sent specifically by God." William Geating, Noah And His Ark, Ref-0066, Vol. 14 No. 2, 2001.

ark - Noah's - species carried on Noah's : ☪ " . . . the number of actually catalogued fossil species is only about 200,000, ~95% of which were marine invertebrates which Noah was not required to take on board anyway." Ref-0003, 13(2) 1999, p. 27. "Grizzly bears (Ursa arctos) and polar bears (U. maritimus) are ecologically isolated most of the year, but can produce fertile offspring when they come in contact with each other. The ability to reproduce in the wild suggests that they are a single kind of animal separated only by their different fur color and other minor physical features that enable them to adapt to different ecosystems. Eastern and western meadowlarks, Sturnella magna and S. neglecta respectively, are classified as different species and provide a good example of behavioral isolation. Eastern and western meadowlarks don't typically interbreed in the wild, partly because they don't readily recognize the mating song of the other species and partly because they prefer slightly different habitats. Both species are nearly identical in appearance and are physically capable of interbreeding in the laboratory, and occasionally hybrids between the two species are identified in natural habitats. The potential to reproduce, and the nearly identical appearance and genetic constitution of these two bird species, certainly qualifies them as the same biblical kind, in spite of their classification as different species. . . . recently it has been estimated that 10 percent of all animal species still hybridize (mate with other species, producing fertile offspring) in the wild, and even more when brought into contact with each other in captivity. This evidence indicates that most species had a common ancestor from which similar species have descended. If the Ark had roughly 30,000 animals (less than 15,000 species or different kinds), how could the animals on the Ark produce millions of species within a few hundred, or a few thousand, years after the Flood? Surely this would require a faster evolutionary rate than even the most ardent evolutionist would propose. However, it is not correct to assume that a few thousand species would have produced the millions of species extant (alive) today. There are fewer than 30,000 extant species of mammals, birds, reptiles, and possibly land-reproducing amphibians (many salamanders) that were represented on the Ark. The millions of other species are the invertebrates (>95 percent of all animal species), fish, and a few aquatic mammals and reptiles that survived in the water during the Flood. The processes of speciation discussed above need to only double the number of animal species from 15,000 to 30,000. This is certainly a feasible process based on observable science. . . . Domesticated animals, as examples of genetic potential, do not motivate a scientist to name a new breed of dog a species. However, there is more phenotypic and genetic variation in domesticated animals than there are in many, if not most, wild "species" of animals that were discussed above. The only requirement to be classified as a species, in many cases, is for two populations of animals to be reproductively isolated. Most people would be hard pressed to identify an eastern meadowlark from a western meadowlark, but they are classified as different species simply because they have different mating songs and are reproductively isolated in the wild. Many of these animals are so close phenotypically (in appearance) that only an expert can tell them apart. Even humans have far more phenotypic variation than many animals that are divided into separate species, and scientists are not about to start classifying different ethnic groups of humans as different species." Taken to Tanis, Egypt by Pharaoh Shishak (Sheshonk-1 Kings 14) 3. Taken in battle by King Jehoash of Israel (2 Kings 14) 4. Given by King Hezekiah as tribute payment to Assyrian King Sennacherib (2 Kings 18) 5. Destroyed by King Manasseh when he desecrated the Temple (2 Kings 21; 2 Chronicles 33) 6. During days of Manasseh, taken by Israelite priests to Elephantine Island on the Nile and eventually reached Axum, Ethiopia (see 2 Kings 21; 2 Chronicles 33) 7. Hidden by Jeremiah on "the mountain which Moses ascended to see the heritage promised by God." (Mt. Nebo, Mt. Sinai or Mt. Olives - 2 Maccabees 2) 8. Taken by Jeremiah to Ireland 9. Hidden by Israelite priests beneath the Temple Mount before Babylonian captivity (Mishnah Shekalim 6:1-2; Babylonian Talmud Sotah 9a; Yoma 52a-54a; Tosefta Sotah 13:1) 10. Hidden by Israelite priests beneath Golgotha before the Babylonian captivity (Gordon's Calvary - Hebrews 9) 11. Returned to Kiriath Jearim from Jerusalem by Israelite priests before the Babylonian captivity 12. Taken by God to the Heavenly Temple, probably before the Babylonian captivity (see Revelation 11:19; Hebrews 9; also Exodus 15;

1 Chronicles 28) 13. Destroyed by King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon when he plundered and destroyed the Temple (2 Kings 24-25; 2 Chronicles 36; Lamentations 1) 14. Hidden by priests in a cave near the Dead Sea before the Roman destruction of Jerusalem (the Copper Scroll). 16. Taken to Rome and ultimately hidden in the Vatican (Josephus, Wars 7:148-149) 17. Taken to Rome by Titus, taken from Rome to Carthage by the Vandals, taken to Constantinople (Byzantium) by Beligarius, returned to Jerusalem by Justinian and hidden beneath the New ("New") Church in Jerusalem (6th century A.D. Byzantine historian Procopius of Caesarea) 18. Hidden at an undetermined time in a fully reconstructed Temple buried in the Hinnom Valley (the Ezekiel Tablets) 19. Swallowed by the earth (2 Baruch 6) 20. Transported to Yemen and incorporated into the Lemba tribe's sacred ngoma 21. "The campaign of Armageddon could be identified as consisting of three separate battles (all characterized in Scripture as being like the treading of a winepress) beginning with the Valley of Jehoshaphat (Joel 3:12-14), the valley created by the dividing of the Mount of Olives at Christ's return (Zec. 14:4-5). The second battle will take place near Bozrah where Christ will stain His garments with blood when the restored Israelites fail to follow His orders to capture the territory of Edom (Isa. 63:1-6; cf. Ob. 1:15-21). The final battle is in the valley of Jezreel near Megiddo and gives its name to the campaign (Rev. 16:16; 19:11-18). This three-battle scenario is implied by Hindson's explanation that the 200-mile river of blood (Rev. 14:20) is equivalent to the distance between Bozrah and Megiddo (159)." William D. Arminianism : Rom. 7:19 ☛ Teachings of Jacobus Arminius, a pastor in Amsterdam (1588-1603) and professor at the University of Leiden, the Netherlands. (1) conditional election based on God's foreknowledge; (2) resistable grace; (3) universal atonement; (4) man cooperates with God in salvation through prevenient grace; (5) a believer may lose his salvation. He interpreted Rom. 7:19 as denoting the unregenerate man (whereas the context dictates that it is Paul describing himself as a mature regenerated believer). "After Arminius' death, his disciple Simon Episcopius (d. 1643) wrought his master's doctrines into a system, notably in his Confession and Declaration (1622). This is a treatise in defense of the basic document of the Arminian party, the celebrated Remonstrance of 1610. The chief framer of the Remonstrance was John Uytenbogaert, chaplain to Prince Maurice. Briefly this document states (1) that the eternal decree of salvation refers to those who shall believe and persevere in the faith; (2) that Christ died for all men, though believers only are benefited;

(3) that man can do nothing truly good until he is born again through the Holy Spirit; (4) that grace is not irresistible; and (5) that the faithful are assisted by grace in temptation and are kept from falling if they desire Christ's help and are 'not inactive.' These are the Five Points of Arminianism." Ref-1096, p. 264. See Synod of Dort.

Arminianism - prayer - Spurgeon : "You have heard a great many Arminian sermons, I dare say; but you never heard an Arminian prayer--for the saints in prayer appear as one in word, and deed and mind. An Arminian on his knees would pray desperately like a Calvinist. He cannot pray about free-will: there is no room for it. Fancy him praying, "Lord, I thank thee I am not like those poor presumptuous Calvinists. Lord, I was born with a glorious free-will; I was born with power by which I can turn to thee of myself; I have improved my grace. If everybody had done the same with their grace that I have, they might all have been saved. Lord, I know thou dost not make us willing if we are not willing ourselves. Thou givest grace to everybody; some do not improve it, but I do. There are many that will go to hell as much bought with the blood of Christ as I was; they had as much of the Holy Ghost given to them; they had as good a chance, and were as much blessed as I am. It was not thy grace that made us to differ; I know it did a great deal, still I turned the point; I made use of what was given me, and others did not--that is the difference between me and them." That is a prayer for the devil, for nobody else would offer such a prayer as that. Ah! when they are preaching and talking very slowly, there may be wrong doctrine; but when they come to pray, the true thing slips out; they cannot help it." -- C. H. Here the Lord says, "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I myself have given it [יָדַעְתִּי] to you upon the altar to make atonement for your lives, for it is the blood, by means of the life, that makes atonement." On the one hand, God says that sacrificial blood is for the purpose of making atonement. On the other hand, however, he emphasizes that he himself is the one who provides the means of atonement in the first place. This is an important reversal of how we normally think about sacrifice, namely, as something we give to God." Ref-0184, p. 79.

atonement - limited - MacArthur : ☩ + "The author [MacArthur] does hold to limited atonement. He believes the expression the "whole world" is a generic term that does not include every single individual. A corollary here is that there is no such thing as potential atonement (pp. 48-50). By that, MacArthur means Christ could not have died for all potentially, only for the elect." Ray Charles, Review of "1-3 John by John MacArthur" Ref-0785, Volume 11 Number 34 December 2007, p. 79.

atonement - meaning : ☩ + "Atonement" is an Anglo-Saxon word which means, literally, "a making at one." Ref-1200, p. 64n3. ☩ "Two recent Christian studies of this word in the Old Testament -- one with a concentration on its meaning in the book of Leviticus, and the other paying special attention to Ezekiel's usage in chapters 40-48 -- have offered a re-evaluation of its meaning in the context of a theocratic government. Their research has determined that the understanding of the Hebrew term for atonement kippur, should be 'to purify' or 'cleanse,' based on the Akkadian cognate kuppuru, rather than the traditionally understood meaning of 'to cover,' borrowed from the cognate Arabic kapara or the ransom/propiation view, which is based on the noun form kopper and sees atonement as the 'averting of divine wrath by the payment of a ransom.'" atonement - of Christ limited - FOR - scriptures used : Mtt. 1:21; John 10:11; John 10:15; John 17:9; Acts 20:28; Rom. 8:32; Eph. 5:25 ☩ + Isa. 53:5 ☩ These passages are often used to teach the concept of limited atonement, but the scriptural evidence for unlimited atonement seems clear and overwhelming. See atonement - of Christ unlimited "Limited Redemptionists believe that the Cross is the only means whereby the elect are saved. Listen to R. C. Sproul's objection: "If faith is a condition for God's justice to be satisfied, then the atonement, in itself, is not sufficient to satisfy the demands of God's justice. In itself, the atonement is not "sufficient" for anyone. ... Full satisfaction is not rendered until... a person adds to the atonement his faith. . . ." We have deliberately chosen this quote in order to demonstrate how an adroit Limited Redemptionist argues. Again, we will unpack his meaning: i. Only Christ's atonement satisfied God's justice and so actually secures salvation. ii. If one adds faith in order to receive that atonement, then obviously Christ's death was not enough. Faith must be added (i.e. the Cross + Faith). This makes faith a work. iii. Therefore, faith is not a condition for receiving the benefits of Christ's death. If the logic of this position is followed, it is not easy to see how an LR can hold to justification by faith. The fact that they do shows up a problem with their theology at this point. Robert Lightner's comment is insightful: "The strict Calvinist position which insists that Christ's death of itself saved the elect makes faith, ... virtually unnecessary." Paul Martin Henebury, Paul Martin Henebury, Christ's Atonement: Its Purpose and Extent, Part 1, Conservative Theological Journal Volume 9, 26 (Fort Worth, TX: Tyndale Theological Seminary, 2005), p. 103-104. "The Scriptures do not always include all the truth involved in the theme presented, at a given place. Similarly, if the fact that any reference to the nonelect world is omitted from these passages (which refer only to the elect) is a sufficient ground for the contention that Christ died only for the elect, then it could be argued with inexorable logic that Christ died only for Israel (cf. John 11:51; Isa. 53:8); and that He died only for the Apostle Paul, for Paul declares "who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Gal. 2:20). As well might one contend that Christ restricted His prayers to Peter because of the fact that He said to Peter: "But I have prayed for thee" (Luke 22:32)." Ref-0195, p. 3:202.

atonement - of Christ limited - ramifications :

☩ + "Put simply, Five-Pointers are right to point out that a "four point Calvinist" who sticks to the Reformed definitions excluding Limited Atonement has an irreconcilable tension in his theology, and that a consistent Five-Point Calvinist will NOT be a dispensationalist.²⁵ 25 - It is this writers' opinion that the reason men like A. W. Pink and S. Lewis Johnson, and many like them, rejected dispensationalism is because they were Five-Point Calvinists. They were already employing two hermeneutical methods -- the grammatical-historical, and the grammatical-historical-theological, in order to hold to Limited Atonement and regeneration prior to faith. Quite clearly, something had to give!" Paul Henebury, The Extent of the Atonement, Part 2, Ref-0055, vol. 9 no. 27 August 2005 241:257, p. 252. "One thing is for certain, no five-point Calvinist can tell a lost soul that Christ died for them. For example: "As a reformed Christian, the writer believes that counselors must not tell any unsaved counselee that Christ died for him, for they cannot say that. No man knows except Christ Himself who are His elect for whom He died."²⁹ . . . If Christ died only for the elect then we can't tell an unsaved person (who may be non-elect) that God loves him, and that Christ died for him. John 3:16 may not refer to him. 29 - Jay E. Adams, Competent to Counsel, (Nutley: Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Co., 1970), 70." Paul Henebury, The Extent of the Atonement, Part 2, Ref-0055, vol. 9 no. 27 August 2005 241:257, pp. 255-256. "Finally, Limited Atonement is not found in any of the Church Fathers until the later Augustine. Most of the Reformers did not hold to it (e.g., Luther, Melancthon, Bullinger, Cranmer, Latimer; even Calvin speaks up for unlimited atonement in some passages.) Among those who believed in unlimited atonement, a selection would include: Athanasius, Cyril, Basil, Richard Baxter, John Bunyan, John Preston, John Newton, Alfred Edersheim, J. C. Ryle, Charles Simeon, G. Campbell Morgan, A. T. Robertson, L. S. Chafer, F. F. Bruce, Leon Morris, C. C. Ryrie, John Walvoord, and Millard Erickson." If the word means value, then the atonement is unlimited; if it means extending, that is, applying, then the atonement is limited." Ref-0104, p. 186 quoting William G. T. Shedd, Dogmatic Theology, II, p. 466. "... it is our conviction that the Bible teaches that Christ died to provide a basis of salvation for all men. To those who are elect and who therefore believe in Christ, this provision secures for them their eternal salvation when they believe. For those who do not believe and thus evidence the fact that they are the nonelect, the provisions exist as a basis of condemnation." Ref-0097, p. 112 Chafer mentions a restriction of unlimited atonement to the present age: "... those who . . . are known as unlimited redemptionists contend that Christ died for all men who live in the present age, which age is bounded by the two advents of Christ, and that His death has other and specific values in its relation to the ages past as well as the ages to come." Ref-0195, p. 3:183. "... the informed, unlimited redemptionist recognizes the dispensational features of God's dealings with men, and contends that the universal aspect of the value of Christ's death could apply only to the present age of the outcalling of that elect company which comprises the Church, which is the Body of Christ--an age differing, as it does, from all other ages in many respects, notably, that in it a universal gospel is to be preached . . ." Ref-0195, p. 3:189. "Part Two of the book begins with Kevin Kennedy's convincing argument that John Calvin believed in a universal atonement. For anyone who has studied Calvin's writings on it this ought to be a dead issue. Scores of examples can be and have been brought forward to prove this assertion. Kennedy demonstrates that Calvin, in arguing against Georgius in Concerning the Eternal Predestination of God, rejected the common Calvinistic view that "Christ suffered sufficiently for all, but efficaciously only for the elect" as a "great absurdity." (209). In the same quote Calvin asserts, It is incontestable that Christ came for the expiation of the sins of the whole world (Ibid)." Paul Henebury, Review: "Whosoever Will: A Biblical-Theological Critique of Five-Point Calvinism" (2), [<http://drreluctant.wordpress.com/2011/11/22/review-whosoever-will-a-biblical-theological-critique-of-five-point-calvinism-2/>] accessed 20111213.

atonement - penal - denied : Isa. 53:5-10 ☺ + Writes that the evangelical view of the substitutionary atoning sacrifice of Christ on the cross is a misrepresentation akin to "cosmic child abuse." "The fact is that the cross is not a form of cosmic child abuse, a vengeful father punishing his son for an offense he has not even committed.

Understandably, both people inside and outside of the church have found this twisted version of events morally dubious and a huge barrier to faith. Deeper than that, however, is that such a concept stands in total contradiction to the statement that God is love. If the cross is a personal act of violence perpetrated by God toward human kind but borne by His Son, then that makes a mockery of Jesus' own teaching to love your enemies and to refuse to repay evil with evil." Augustine - conversion scripture : Rom. 13:13-14 ☺ "Augustine for thirty-one years led a tumultuous existence, alternating between efforts of self-reformation and repeated defeats and misery. Writhing one day in wretched humiliation in the garden, he heard the voice of a child from the neighborhood chanting: 'Take and read! Take and read!' He went to get the scroll containing the epistles of Paul, and his eyes fell on Rom. 13:14. All was decided by a word, in an instant: Jesus had overcome! Augustine made no attempt to inquire further; he closed the book. With the end of that sentence ?a stream of light and security was poured into his soul; and all the night of his doubts had vanished." Ref-0060, p. 288.

Genesis 9:6, therefore, becomes one of the most important landmarks in all of human history, for here God not only decrees the beginning of human government in a sinful world, but also lays down the moral and social foundation of all such government. In Canaanite mythology El and Baal were distinct deities. El was the high god who ruled over the divine assembly and imparted authority to the storm god Baal. If this distinction is maintained here, then the city apparently contained a temple for each god and swore allegiance to both." Robert B. Babel - meaning : Gen. 11:5; Gen. 11:9 ☩ "Babel [is an] obviously Akkadian word meaning the 'door/gate of god'. . . . Despite what has been understood and held as true by so many scholars over the centuries, I am convinced that the biblical author's emphasis in verse nine was not on the confusion of the languages, but rather on God's decision to appear 'there'. This is the real reason the place was named 'the door of God', because God chose to come down in that specific place (šām) and confound the futile plans of mean (Genesis 11:5)! . . . This failure to make the connection between the repetition of 'there' (šām) and 'Babel' (the door of God) puzzled me until I checked on the Septuagint's rendering of the passage. The name Babel doesn't even appear! The 2nd century B.C. translator, obviously the perpetuator of the problem, evidently had no idea that Babel meant 'door of God' and translated it as 'Synchysis': quite literally 'confusion'. Brenton's English translation of the Septuagint reads, 'On this account its name was called Confusion, because there the Lord confounded the languages of all the earth, and thence the Lord scattered them upon the face of all the earth.'" Mark L. Howard, "Therefore it was called Babel", Ref-0784, 23(3) 2009, 56:57, pp. 56-47.

Babel - tower to heaven : Gen. 8:20; Gen. 11:4; Jer. 51:53; Rev. 18:5 ☩ "He [Nimrod] also said he would be revenged on God, if he should have a mind to drown the world again; for that he would build a tower too high for the waters to be able to reach! and that he would avenge himself on God for destroying their forefathers!" Ref-0026, I, iv 2 "Josephus says of Nimrod: Now it was Nimrod who excited them to such an affront and contempt of God. He was the grandson of Ham, the son of Noah--a bold man, and of great strength of hand. He persuaded them not to ascribe it to God, as if it were through his means they were happy, but to believe that it was their own courage which procured that happiness. He also gradually changed the government into tyranny--seeing no other way of turning men from the fear of God, but to bring them into a constant dependence upon his own power. He also said he would be revenged on God, if he should have a mind to drown the world again; for that he would build a tower too high for the waters to be able to reach! and that he would avenge himself on God for destroying their forefathers! (Ant. I: iv: 2)" David P. Livingston, Who was Nimrod?, Weekly Article: Associates for Biblical Research, August 30, 2006 [http://abr.christiananswers.net/articles/article_54.html]. "These structures had, with the Babylonians, a special name: ziqqurratu, apparently meaning "peak," or the highest point of a mountain. This word was applied to the mountain height upon which Utnapishtim, the Babylonian Noah, offered sacrifices on coming forth from the ark (or ship) when the waters of the great Flood had sufficiently subsided." As far as the physical city of Babylon was concerned, this was not true of ancient Babylon as it continued for many years after its political downfall. Further, it is pointed out that the prophecy of Isa. 13:6; Isa. 13:9-11 which formed the context of Isa. 13:19-22, indicates that the destruction of Babylon would be in the day of the Lord [Ref-0036, pp. 1-30]" Ref-0032, p. 262.

other cities, contrary to Jeremiah 51:26, "No rock will be taken from you for a cornerstone, nor any stone for a foundation, for you will be desolate forever, declares the Lord." It is reliably reported that at least six cities bear the marks of having used parts of ancient Babylon in their building: Seleucia, built by the Greeks; Ctesiphon, by the Parthians; Almaidin, by the Persians; an dKufa, by the Caliphs. Hillah, just a twenty-minute walk from the Babylonian ruins, was built almost entirely from the ruins of Babylon. The builders of Baghdad, fifty miles north of the site of ancient Babylone, also used materials from the ancient city. The Encyclopedia of Lands and People states in reference to Babylon: "They found great treasure and the materials of its wonderful buildings were used for the construction of Baghdad in 762 . . . and so, during the centuries, the greatness of Babylon and Assyria passed away. Their magnificent cities were used to supply the bricks for succeeding towns and villages, and such ruins as the barbarians left fell into decay until they became shapeless mounds whose very names were forgotten." Babylon - Rome called? : 1Pe. 5:13 ☆ "Babylon" was a common euphemism for 'Rome' in the Pseudepigrapha (2 Baruch 11:1, 67:7; Sibylline Oracles 5:143, 159) and in rabbinic writings. Midrash Rabbah on Sos. 1:6 states directly, One calls Rome 'Babylon.' Yechiel Lichtenstein on 1 Pe 5:13 remarks that Rome is called 'Babylon' since it is always described as the worst kingdom. Those who interpret Babylon in 1Pe. 5:13 as denoting Rome include: Ref-0038. Those who take it as literal Babylon on the Euphrates include: Ref-0147 (see especially note on 1Pe. 5:13), Ref-0187. "In the first century of the Christian era Babylon still stood, for Peter refers to a church there! (See 1 Pet. 5:13)." Ref-0215, Babylon and the Antichrist "1 Peter was written to a predominantly Jewish audience. His use of the word 'diaspora' in 1Pe. 1:1 always refers to Jews in all of its New Testament uses (John 7:35; Jas. 1:1) and LXX (Deu. 28:25; 30:4; Isa. 49:6; Ps. 74:2; 2 Macc 1:27). If Babylon refers to Babylon in all of its Old Testament uses, why would 1 Peter 5:13 be the exception considering Peter's Jewish audience? . . . Fruchtenbaum argues that at the time that Peter's epistle was written, Babylonia had the largest concentration of Jews living outside the land. Moreover, Babylon was also the center of Judaism outside the land. The Babylonian Talmud would later be developed from this area.

Because Peter was the apostle to the circumcised (Gal. 2:8), it would have been a logical place for him to travel." -- Andy Woods, What is the Identity of Babylon In Revelation_17-18?, [<http://www.pre-trib.org/article-view.php?id=46>]

[<http://www.SpiritAndTruth.org/id/articles.htm?7>]

"Regarding 1 Peter 5:13, Rome proponents cite several reasons to support the conclusion that Peter was speaking of Rome rather than literal Babylon in 1 Peter 5:13.

First, tradition places Peter in Rome at the end of his life. Second, according to 1 Peter 5:13, one of Peter's companions was Mark. Mark was with Paul during his first Roman imprisonment (Col. 4:10; Phm. 1:22-23) and may have accompanied Timothy to Rome for the second incarceration (2Ti. 4:11).

Therefore, it is more rational to assume that Peter and Mark got together in Rome rather than in Babylon." Andy Woods, The Identity of Babylon in Revelation_17-18, Ref-0055, vol. 9 no. 27 August 2005 142:169, p. 152.

"Although the majority of scholars believe that Peter was referring to Rome in 1 Peter 5:13 rather than literal Babylon, it is interesting to note that many prominent interpreters throughout Church history have held to the literal Babylon interpretation. These prominent interpreters include Erasmus, Calvin, Hort, Gregory, Alford, Mayor, Moorehead, and Thiessen." Andy Woods, The Identity of Babylon in Revelation_17-18, Ref-0055, vol. 9 no. 27 August 2005 142:169, pp. 161-162.

Balfour - declaration : ☪ + "James Perkins made some very telling comments concerning this historic document that clarify common misunderstanding: "The Balfour Declaration for the first time established a unit called Palestine on the political map. But there were two essential elements in political realism which it could not create. In the first place the Jews, who had through all the centuries clung to their right to settle in the Holy Land, had been so reduced in numbers and importance that they were not a recognized and accepted presence to the rest of the population as were the Christians in Lebanon. In the second place, though the word 'Arab' was rapidly coming to be accepted as covering the indigenous inhabitants who spoke Arabic, independently of their religious or ethnic affiliation, there was no such thing historically as a 'Palestinian Arab,' and there was no feeling of unity among 'the Arabs' of this newly defined area. Hence the unfortunate phrase used to describe the majority of the population in the Declaration -- 'the non-Jewish communities'. The Balfour Declaration did not 'give Palestine to the Jews'. It recognized that here existed already a historic Jewish right, not to but in the country; and it promised to assist the Jewish people in its development in such a way that the other rights in the country were not endangered. It equally did not 'give away what belonged not to it but to the Arab people'; for it has already refused to recognize, also on historical grounds, that the Arab claim to be exclusive owners of the country was justified.""" baptism - child - Belgic Confession of Faith : ☪ + ". . . and therefore they [children] ought to receive the sign and sacrament of that which Christ has done for them; as the Lord commanded in the law that they should be made partners of the sacrament of Christ's suffering and death shortly after they were born. . . . Moreover, what circumcision was to the Jews, baptism is to our children. And for this reason St. Paul calls baptism the circumcision of Christ." The Belgic Confession of Faith, Article XXXIV, cited by Willem VanGemeren, "Systems of Continuity," Ref-0199, p. 41.

baptism - child - Bonhoeffer : ☩ + "This element of finality in baptism throws significant light on the question of infant baptism. The problem is not whether infant baptism is baptism at all, but that the final and unrepeatable character of infant baptism necessitates restrictions in its use" Bonhoeffer, Deitrich, The Cost of Discipleship p. 234-235.

baptism - child - Heidelberg Catechism : ☩ + ". . . since they [children], as well as adults, are included in the covenant and the Church of God, and since both redemption from sin and the Holy Spirit, the Author of faith, are through the blood of Christ promised to them no less than to adults, they must also by baptism, as a sign of the covenant, be ingrafted into the Christian Church. . . . as was done in the old covenant or testament by circumcision, instead of which baptism was instituted in the new covenant." The Heidelberg Catechism, answer 74, cited by Willem VanGemeren, "Systems of Continuity," Ref-0199, p. 42.

baptism - child - Puritans : ☩ + "As the 1640s gave way to the 1650s, more and more children of the earliest settlers failed to experience God's grace in the same fashion as their parents, and hence they did not seek full membership in the churches. The problem became acute when these children began to marry and have children of their own. Under the Puritans' Reformed theology, converted people had the privilege of bringing their infant children to be baptized as a seal of god's covenant grace. Now, however, many of those who had been baptized as infants were not stepping forth on their own to confess Christ. Yet they wanted to have their children baptized. The Puritan dilemma was delicate: leaders wished to preserve the church for genuine believers, but they also wanted to keep as many people as possible under the influence of the church." Ref-0958, p. 48. "The second and third generation saw a disquieting change of temper. The ideal of a church of the regenerate was faced with a condition of increasing indifference and the failure in many of evidence of conversion. A concession to this condition was made in the Half Way Covenant (1662), which without admitting the unregenerate to communion permitted the baptism of their children. The new plan called forth controversy but was at length generally adopted. It may have led to the weakening of the religious life that was characteristic of the early eighteenth century in New England as elsewhere." Ref-1096, p. 341.

bar-mitzvah : Luke 2:42 (?); Rom. 7:9 ☩ Hebrew. "Son of command." At first Sabbath after 12 years of age, directly responsible before God thereafter and eligible for father's inheritance. Also qualifies as one of ten adult males needed to found a synagogue. "Luke specifically mentions the visit during Jesus' twelfth year because Jesus was performing the Jewish mitzvot connected with arriving at the age of puberty." Ref-0146, p. 257. "It was apparently a tradition that children accompany their fathers to the Passover at least a year prior to their reaching puberty (M. Niddah 5:7-9; cf. M. Hagiga 1:1; Pirke Avot 5:24), S. Safrai, 'Home and Family,' JPFC 2:771f, notes that T. Hagiga 1:2 indicates that a child was to keep whatever mitzvot he was capable of performing. The later concept of the Bar Mitzvah probably developed from this early tradition." Ref-0146, p. 670, note 9. "The passage from childhood to adolescence was physical, social, legal, and religious. By tradition it was associated with a girl's twelfth year and a boy's thirteenth, but these are only approximate figures." Ref-1200, p. 249. "Formal education was usually concluded at the age of twelve or thirteen. At that point many young men began learning a craft or trade. . . . The end of formal education did not mean the end of study. Many men continued either personal or group study throughout life."

baskets - twelve vs. seven : Mtt. 14:20; Mtt. 15:37 ☪ Both numbers indicate completeness. Twelve for the Jewish feeding (the twelve tribes) and seven for the Gentile feeding (completeness). The feeding of the 4,000 was in Gentile territory -- decapolis (Mark 7:31). "Because Christ deliberately involved the disciples (Mtt. 15:32-36) in the feeding of the four thousand (Mtt. 15:29-39), this miracle was again designed primarily for their benefit. Not only did it reinforce the same lesson that they had learned in the feeding of the five thousand (Mtt. 14:13-21), but it also played a role in further expanding their missionary vision. This miracle took place in Gentile territory (Mark 7:31). This seems clear since the crowd glorified the "God of Israel" (Mtt. 15:31) and because the Gentile word for basket (spyris) is used (Mtt. 16:10; Mark 8:8,20) rather than the Jewish word (kophinos) for basket (Mtt. 15:37). Thus, because this crowd was Gentile rather than Jewish, the disciples were not expecting this multitude to be fed. [Toussaint, Behold the King, 197.] The disciples were locked into this way of thinking because their previous ministry consisted of offering the kingdom exclusively to the nation (Mtt. 10:5-7; 15:24)." If we press on to consider usage, we discover that the Septuagint renders יְהִיד (yāhīd) as “alone” or “only” (e.g., Ps. 22:20 [21:21, LXX, “my precious life” (NIV) or “my only soul”]; Ps. 25:16 [24.16, LXX, “for I am lonely and poor”]), without even a hint of “begetting.” True, in the New Testament the word often refers to the relationship of child to parent; but even here, care must be taken. In Hebrews 11:17 Isaac is said to be Abraham’s μονογενής (monogenēs) -- which clearly cannot mean “only-begotten son,” since Abraham also sired Ishmael and a fresh packet of progeny by Keturah (Gen. 25:1-2). Isaac is, however, Abraham’s unique son, his special and well-beloved son. The long and short of the matter is that renderings such as “for God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son” (John 3:16, NIV) are prompted by neither an inordinate love of paraphrasis, nor a perverse desire to deny some cardinal truth, but by linguistics.” Ref-0698, pp. 30-31.

Comparing biblical passages, the behemoth group includes a wide array of terrestrial animals (verse 4). Verses in Leviticus and Deuteronomy indicate that behemoth includes the camel, rock badger, hare, swine, sheep, goat, oxen, deer and ibex. Zechariah 14:15 notes that horses, mules, camels and donkeys belong to this classification. Deuteronomy 28:26 and 1 Samuel 17:44 note that behemoth comprise non-avian carnivorous animals that consume the remains of humans. Proverbs 30:30 notes that the lion is from the behemoth. Furthermore, in Ecclesiastes 3:18, humans are attributed to the behemoth. Lastly, Jeremiah 15:3 associates dogs with behemoth. To sum up, the Bible suggests that the translation of behemoth corresponds to the Linnaean classification of mammal . . . However, that remes comprises small mammals suggests that behemoth includes mammals with sizes equal to or larger than the hare or rock badger.” Joel David Klenck, Major Terrestrial Animal Taxonomic Classifications as Defined by God, Ref-0784, 23(2) 2009, 118:122, pp. 121-122.

The Word of God says, ‘For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive’ (1 Cor. 15:22). All sinners, both before and after Christ, are in Adam. And all who are saved both before and after Christ, are in Christ. All men are either dead in Adam, or they are alive in Christ. No one is neutral.” Ref-0189, p. 35. “If the Holy Spirit is not working in new and different ways with members of the church, why did Jesus tell the 11 apostles that ‘the Spirit of truth abides with you, and will be in you’ (John 14:17)? If the Holy Spirit is working in essentially the same way in both Old and New Testament times, why did Jesus have to leave in order for the Spirit to come (John 16:7; cf. 14:16, 26; 15:26)? Why did the Apostle John quote Jesus’ promise that from the believer’s ‘innermost being shall flow rivers of living water’ (John 7:38) and then explain, ‘But this He spoke of the Spirit, whom those who believed in Him were to receive; for the Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified’ (v. 39). Also why did Jesus speak of the Holy Spirit as ‘the promise of My Father’ (Luke 24:49), if the Spirit was already fulfilling all His ministries? Even the Old Testament predicts that the Holy Spirit will minister to Israel in the end times in ways different from what He was doing then (Eze. 36:25-27; 37:14; cf. 11:19-20; Jer. 31:33-34). Such passages show that the Holy Spirit ministers to members of the church, the body of Christ, and will minister to ethnic Israel in the end times, in ways different from His ministry in the Old Testament, thus making the church a distinct people of God.” John A. English was seen as the language of peasants, incapable of expressing anything other than the crudest and most basic of matters. English was just fine when dealing with spreading dung on fields. But how could such a barbaric language do justice to such sophisticated matters as philosophy or religion? To translate the Bible from its noble and ancient languages into English was seen as a pointless act of debasement." Ref-0686, p. 24.

Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia - origin : ☪ "Scholars agree that the Ben Asher family of biblical texts is the most reliable. It is represented today by the Aleppo Codex (A) (lacking the Pentateuch), the British Museum Codex Or. 4445 (B) (covering the Pentateuch), the Cairo Codex (C) (covering the Prophets), and the Leningrad Codex B19a (L) (the only complete representative of the Ben Asher tradition available today). The third edition of Kittel's Hebrew Bible (1937), known as BHK, abandoned the eclectic Ben Hayyim text of 1524-25, also known as the Bomberg Bible, the Second Rabbinic Bible, or the Textus Receptus, in favor of the Leningrad Codex B19a. Kittel's original intention was to provide readers of BHK not only with the text of L but also with its complete Masorah, placing the Masorah parva (Mp) notes in the outer margins of the printed pages, and supplementing these with an alphabetic arrangement of Masorah magna (Mm) notes in a separate volume. These plans were only partially fulfilled. While the Mp or marginal notes were reproduced exactly as they appeared in L, the separate volume would only appear in 1971, and then only as a companion volume [Weil's Masorah Gedolah] to the fourth edition of BHK, otherwise known as Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS)." big bang - problem - missing antimatter : 2003050301.htm☆ big bang - problems : ☪ + See Fast stars challenge big bang origin for dwarf galaxies, Ref-0003, 14(3) 2000, p. 5. "This has profound and unwelcome implications for big-bang theory, because our universe is made of ordinary matter, not equal amounts of matter and antimatter. The only known way that matter can form from energy is via quantum pair production, and quantum pair production yields equal amounts of matter and antimatter. Since our universe consists only of matter (as far as we can tell -- though there are probably small amounts of matter/antimatter pairs associated with localized high-energy events), it is a reasonable conclusion that our universe could not have been produced by quantum pair production." Ref-0814, p. 126. "The problem [of galaxy formation] was once put this way: "There shouldn't be galaxies out there at all, and even if there were galaxies, they shouldn't be grouped together the way they are. . . . [it] is one of the thorniest problems in cosmology. . . . It's hard to convey the depth of the frustration that this simple fact induces among scientists." The scientists at NASA, the world's leading space exploration agency, have admitted that "We have no direct evidence of how galaxies were formed [or] how galaxies evolved, whether they were formed from aggregations of smaller units or from subdivision of large ones." . . . How can we say this simply? Perhaps just this. The universe is, by definition, the planets, stars, and galaxies that surround us. Insofar as big-bang theory does not explain the origin of these objects, then we can say that big-bang theory does not even address the question of the origin of the universe. It does not even get to first base." Ref-0814, p. 129. Big-bang theory suggests that as we see further and further out into the universe, we should see fewer complex, formed entities such as galaxies. But no matter how far back we look, we see fully-formed galaxies. "When we look out at the universe we find much the same picture in every direction -- galaxies upon galaxies as far as our telescopes can see. Even when the Hubble Space Telescope was focused for ten whole day s(a 153-hour exposure) on an 'empty' piece of sky, it turned out to be filled with galaxies, just like everywhere else." Ref-0814, p. 132. "The fourth line of evidence is the recent large-scale map of the galaxies, known as the Sloan Digital Sky Survey (SDSS). It reveals a picture of the universe completely opposed to the cosmological principle. The galaxies appear to be distributed in concentric shells focused on our galaxy, and they are far more dense close in than farther out. A big-bang universe would not produce concentric shells around our location in the sky, and the density of galaxies should increase, not decrease, as you look back in time -- because the galaxies were supposedly much closer together in the past." Ref-0814, pp. 135-136. "When astronomers look deep into the universe, they don't find a hierarchy of development of galaxies from large and complex nearly to the small and simple at great distance, but they find large complex galaxies at all epochs in the cosmos. The universe is organized into structure from start clusters, to galaxies, to galaxy clusters, to superclusters at all epochs. This is not what we would expect from the expanding big bang universe model." John Hartnett, "A Review of The Virtue of Heresy: Confessions of a Dissident Astronomer" by Hilton Ratcliffe. Ref-0784, 23(2) 2009, 32:37, p. 33. "In his Nobel lecture, William Fowler, a pioneer in Big Bang and stellar nucleosynthesis theory, acknowledged: 'In spite of the past and current research in experimental and theoretical nuclear astrophysics . . . Hoyle's grand concept of element synthesis in the stars [is not] fully established, . . . It is not just a matter of filling in the details. There are puzzles and problems in each part of the cycle that challenge the basic ideas underlying nucleosynthesis in stars.'" Jonathan F. Henry, Should Christian Apologists Advocate the Big Bang?

Implications for Dispensationalists., Ref-0785, Volume 14, Number 41, April, 2010, 7:20, pp. 9-10. "The Wilkinson Microwave Anisotropy Probe (WMAP) was sent into space to confirm the Big Bang prediction, but it did not. Continued observations have also failed to confirm Big Bang predictions with regard to CMB. Instead, the WMAP data are "far outside the current expectations" of Big Bang cosmology, and have added "to the anomalies seen in the CMB." Jonathan F. Henry, Should Christian Apologists Advocate the Big Bang? Implications for Dispensationalists., Ref-0785, Volume 14, Number 41, April, 2010, 7:20, p. 11. "To say that the universe was created out of nothing by a 'quantum fluctuation in the false vacuum' is simply promiscuous use of smoke and mirror; it is empty speculation with no experimental basis except that the universe does exist. Scientists who say that 'we do not need to invoke a higher power' simply mandate away any possible explanation outside the exceedingly narrow precepts of reductionist science." big bang - summary : ☺ + "The starting assumption of the big-bang model is that all the substance of the universe (in the form of energy) as well as time and space began in a single point of infinite density and temperature. This state of singularity is a thermodynamic dead end, so something else was needed to get it out of the singular state and into a form that could produce the galaxies and stars of the observed universe. This "something else" is called the "big bang," but nobody knows what it was -- nothing in the known world of physics could have produced it. Physical descriptions of the big-bang model can only begin after the unknown event has already happened. Even the "big bang" was not enough to explain what we see, so a period of "inflation" that expanded the universe by a very huge factor in a very tiny fraction of a second is proposed. As the inflated fireball expanded, it cooled down, and the energy turned into matter according to the known principles of particle physics. However, this process would have produced equal amounts of matter and antimatter -- but our universe consists only of matter, very little antimatter, so this is a major contradiction. After about 300,000 years, the end product was an expanding cloud of mostly hydrogen gas, accompanied by the cooling glow of radiation from the primordial fireball that we see today as the Cosmic Microwave Background Radiation (CMBR). There are no galaxies, stars, planets, or people in the big-bang universe, just an expanding cloud of gas. These latter objects are proposed to have formed by "other means" that have nothing to do with the big bang -- indeed they have to counteract the big bang and overcome the cosmic expansion in order to form the stars and galaxies. There are no convincing naturalistic explanations for the origin of the solid objects that we observe in the real universe." Ref-0814, pp. 161-162.

Ref-0100, Tape 4:B. "Contrary to Jerome's Latin Vulgate that translates these verbs as simple futures, the periphrastic future perfect nature of the verbs should cause them to be translated "shall have been bound" and "shall have been loosed." In other words, Peter's authority only comes from announcing what heaven has already determined. The "keys of the kingdom" probably refer to the ability to open citizenship to the kingdom to others. Peter did just this in the book of Acts." Andy Woods, "The Purpose of Matthew's Gospel, Part II", Ref-0785, Volume 11 Number 34 December 2007, 5:42, p. 27n55. "... the actions described in heaven are future perfect passives--which could be translated "will have already been bound in heaven . . . will have already been loosed in heaven." In other words, the heavenly decree confirming the earthly one is based on a prior verdict. This is the language of the law court. Jewish legal issues were normally decided in Jesus' day by elders in the synagogue community (latter by rabbis). Many Jewish people believed that the authority of Heaven stood behind the earthly judges when they decided cases based on a correct understanding of God's law." "This process came to be called "binding and loosing.") Jesus' contemporaries often envisioned God's justice in terms of a heavenly court; by obeying God's law, the earthly court simply ratified the decrees of the heavenly court. In Matthew 18:15-20, Christians who follow the careful procedures of verses 15-17 may be assured that they will act on the authority of God's court when they decide cases." Craig S. Bonhoeffer - creation - myth : Gen. 2:7 ☪ + "Here everything takes place in a very earthly way. The language is extremely childlike, and shocking for those who want to 'understand,' to know anything. How can we speak of God in the way that we speak of a man shaping his vessel out of earth and clay? The anthropomorphisms become more intolerable: God forming and shaping the clay, and man shaped like a vessel out of a clod of earth. This can surely not produce any knowledge about the origin of man! To be sure, as a narrative this story is just as irrelevant or meaningful as any other myth of creation" Bonhoeffer, Deitrich, Creation and Fall p. 50.

Bonhoeffer - inspiration - verbal denied : Gen. 1:6-10 ☪ + "Here we have before us the ancient world picture it in all its scientific naivet?. While it would not be advisable to be too mocking and self-assured, in view of the rapid changes in our own knowledge of nature, undoubtedly in this passage the biblical author stands exposed with all the limitations caused by the age in which he lived. The heavens and the seas were not formed in the way he says: we would not escape a very bad conscience if we committed ourselves to any such statement. The idea of verbal inspiration will not do." Bonhoeffer, Deitrich, Creation and Fall, p. 30.

Bonhoeffer - resurrection body - Jesus : ☪ + "He comes to us today, and is present with us in bodily form and in his word. If we would hear his call to follow, we must listen where he is to be found, that is, in the Church through the ministry of Word and Sacrament" Bonhoeffer, Dietrich, The Cost of Discipleship, pp. 225-226.

Bonhoeffer - sacraments : ☪ + "How then do we come to participate in the Body of Christ, who did all this for us? It is certain that there can be no fellowship or communion with him except through his Body. For only through that Body can we find acceptance and salvation. The answer is, through the two sacraments of his Body, baptism and the Lord's Supper . . . the word of preaching is insufficient to make us members of Christ's Body; the sacraments also have to be added." Bonhoeffer, Deitrich, The Cost of Discipleship, p. 239.

Bonhoeffer - works for salvation : ☪ + "If the Christian would be saved, he must do good works . . . There is only one question of paramount importance in the Christian life, and that is, how shall we survive the last judgement? And because we shall be judged according to our own works, it is vitally important that we should be trained to do good works." Bonhoeffer, Deitrich, The Cost of Discipleship, pp. 295-296.

Those who believe have their names retained in the Book of Life [Rev. 3:5] . . . However, in Psalm 69:28, the unsaved have their names blotted out of the Book of Life. . . Another book mentioned in the Scriptures that should be kept distinct is the Lamb's Book of Life. This book contains the names of every individual who is born again and only those who are born again. Their names were written into this book before the earth was ever created [Rev. 13:8; 17:8] . . . In Psalm 69:28, it is known as the Book of the Righteous. Based on God's election and foreknowledge, this book contains the names of only those who are born again. And because salvation is eternally sure, it is impossible to be blotted out of this particular book." Ref-0219, p. 523-524.

books - burning : Acts 19:19 ☉ "Then there is Ephesus, with its temple of Artemis, one of the seven wonders of the world, and so many of its citizens depending for their living on the cult of the great goddess; with its reputation for superstition and magic -- a reputation so widespread in the ancient world that a common name for written charms or spells was Ephesia grammata (?Ephesian letters'). It was no doubt scrolls containing these spells that were publicly burnt as Paul powerfully proclaimed the faith which set men free from superstitious fears (Acts 19:19)." Ref-0239, pp. 89-90. A modern secular author, who doesn't have sympathy for the Biblical view of the occult, laments obedient Christians: "The Jesuits, who exerted control in China in the early seventeenth century, prohibited the reading of books on many subjects, including feng shui, and Jesuit missionaries went so far as to order that books on these topics be burned. Thus many immensely valuable Chinese books fell prey to the conflict between Western ignorance and Chinese learning. Li Ying-Shih was converted to Christianity in 1602, was a distinguished scholar who had amassed an impressive library with many books on divination and feng shui. He possessed important ancient manuscripts, which he had procured at great expense. These books no doubt had much information on China's civilization and culture and very likely contained details about the invention and use of the magnetic compass in divination. It took three days to burn all of Li Ying-Shih's books. Even the carved plates used in printing such books were burned by the Jesuits--to ensure that the banned books would never be printed again. Thus the European ideal of "holy ignorance" closed forever the doors to knowledge about the origins of the greatest invention China has given the world." Amir D. Aczel, The Riddle of the Compass (New York, NY: Harcourt, Inc., 2001), p. 89.

This description corresponds to the Messiah's presentation as a righteous King in Matthew. (2) The Branch as Servant (Zec. 3:8). Messiah is clearly identified as the Servant of the Lord, who came to do the Father's will by redeeming humankind (Isa. 42:1; 49:3-4; 50:10; 52:13; 53:11). This description corresponds to Messiah as a servant in Mark 10:45. (3) The Branch as Fully Man. "The Man whose name is the Branch!" Levy, "Messiah's Coronation and Reign", Ref-0057, March/April 2005, p. 31. "we find the Messiah brought before us in the Old Testament Scriptures by this title of Tsemach in four different aspects of His character: (1) As the ideal King who shall reign in righteousness--the branch of David in whom shall be fulfilled all the promises made to the Davidic house (Jer. 23:5-6; 33:15-16). (2) As "My Servant the Branch" (Zec. 3:8). (3) As "The Man whose name is the Branch" (Zec. 6:12). (4) As "The Branch of Jehovah" who in that day shall be "for beauty and for glory, . . . for excellency and comeliness to them that should be of the escaped in Israel" (Isa. 4:2). The promised King--the Servant--The Man--the Branch, or Son of God. And this fourfold prophetic picture of Messiah on the pages of the Old Testament, as I have elsewhere shown many years ago, answers to the fourfold portraiture which the Holy Spirit has given us in the four different Gospels of the Christ of history. . . . In Matthew . . . we have the promised . . . King . . . the inscription written by the Spirit of God on the gospel of Mark is . . . Servant. . . . the prominent feature of our Lord in the Gospel of Luke . . . is that of "the Son of Man." . . . the picture of our Lord in the Gospel of John is undoubtedly that of "the Branch of Jehovah" Ref-0206, pp. 109-113.

In Scripture the church of this dispensation is symbolized as the Body of Christ, never as the Bride. From the close of John Baptist's ministry the Bride is never mentioned until she appears in the Apocalypse (John 3:29; Rev. 21:2, 9). The force of the "nevertheless" in Eph. 5:33 depends on the fact that the Church is the Body, not the Bride. The earthly relationship is readjusted by a heavenly standard. Based upon an analogy with 2S. 12:20, which also mentions bathing, perfume, and a simlah dress when David completed his mourning period for his son, it might imply that Ruth was still wearing the garments of her widowhood." British Israelitism : Gen. 28:11 ☪ "One especially curious legend has the Ark [of the Covenant] taken to the Irish isles by Ollam Fodhla (?holy prophet) and a small band in 584 B.C. According to this account the group landed near Ulster, where the descendants of the Tribe of Dan lived. The 'holy prophet' who had brought the Ark was the prophet Jeremiah, and he subsequently buried it under a hill known today as Ollam Fordhla's Cairn (?Jeremiah's Cave'). He also brought the stone that Jacob used as a pillow (see Genesis 28:11). This is claimed to be the coronation stone that sits under the throne chair in Britain. This legend has no historical support, but I include it because British-Israelitism seems to be making a return among anti-Semitic groups in America and abroad." Ref-0142, pp. 97-98.

Buddhism - Dalai Lama - lied : ☪ + "Recently the San Diego Union-Tribune announced that the Dalai Lama was to visit our fair city where he was scheduled to speak to three different influential groups as the head of a religion that boasts more than three million followers. This Buddhist mystic shook my hand when we met by chance in the hall of the hotel where we were both staying in Tiberius, Israel. I introduced myself as a minister from California and asked if anyone had ever explained to him who Jesus Christ really was and offered to meet with him privately for that purpose. Looking me in the eye, he claimed he couldn't speak English and turned me over to his aid who said he would if his schedule permitted. No such meeting ever took place. Two months later I saw him interviewed by Larry King on national TV and he spoke fluent English! So much for speaking truth. And he is the spiritual leader for more than 3 million trusting people." Tim LaHaye, Pre-Trib Perspectives, vol. 8 no. 98, May 2012

Jewish burial in the time of Jesus actually consisted of two burials that took place at least one year apart. First within family burial cave ("gathered to the fathers") followed by a period of mourning. Second within bone box (ossuary), usually with remains of other family members, after the flesh had decomposed. Jesus' retort may have been in reference to disciple wanting 11-month leave and unbiblical aspect of secondary burial. Ref-0025, p. 42. [See 2Chr. 21:2 for textual hint of two stages.] "After the body decomposed in about a year, the family would return, collect the bones and burial gifts, and place them in the repository with the bones of other family members. Thus, the recently expired individual was "gathered to his people" (Gen. 25:8, etc.)." Gordon Franz, Remember, Archaeology is NOT a Treasure Hunt!, Ref-0066, 18.2 (2005), p. 58. "Secondary burial (known as ossilegium) was typical of the first century. Family members placed the body of the deceased person in a rock-cut tomb, where the body decomposed for about a year. The bones were then placed in an ossuary with other family ossuaries. . . . Though secondary burial was done among other nations, in Judea this practice began around 40 B.C. and ended abruptly with the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70." Ren? A. The other party was composed of the partisans of Herod, who understood this law to forbid only the voluntary election of a stranger, and therefore esteemed it not unlawful to submit and pay tribute to a conqueror. These two parties, though bitterly opposed to each other, united in the attempt to entrap Jesus, by the question, -- "Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" Caiaphas - high priest : John 18:13; John 18:24

Caiaphas - high priest vs. Annas : Luke 3:2; John 11:51; John 18:13-24; Acts 4:6; Acts 4:23; Acts 9:21; Acts 23:2; Acts 24:1 ☪ "Technically, only one person at a time held the position of high priest, so the references to Annas as high priest in conjunction with Caiaphas can be confusing. Caiaphas was high priest by Roman law, Annas by popular opinion of the Jews. . . Merrill Unger observes that 'his great age, abilities, and influence, and his being the father-in-law of Caiaphas made him practically the high priest, although his son-in-law held the office.' Caiaphas, the son-in-law of Annas, became high priest shortly after Annas' resignation in A.D. 14, and he held the position until he was deposed in about 38." Ref-0105, p. 228. "Now it is observable that the high priesthood was at this time become an annual office, and the Passover was the time of making a new high priest. . . . Hence Luke tells us, that in the 15th year of Tiberius, Annas and Caiaphas were high priests, that is, Annas till the Passover, and Caiaphas afterwards." Ref-0849, pp. 166-167. ". . . the politicizing of the high priesthood began during the Ptolemaic period with the conflict between the Oniads and Tobiads. Later the Maccabean rulers, obtained the office for themselves. Thus the Old Testament ordinance that the office was to reside within a single family was set aside. The brothers Aristobulus II and Hyrcanus II acrimoniously exchanged the high priesthood between themselves. Herod the Great and other Roman rulers following him saw the high-priestly office as far too important to leave it to the chance of generational succession. They set aside the provision that a high priest serve for life. Instead, they installed and deposed chief priests at their pleasure. Josephus lists twenty-eight different persons who held the office between 37 B.C. and the suppressions of the revolt in A.D. 70. These, it seems, essentially came from only a few aristocratic families. The most influential high-priestly family was that of Annas, son of Seth; Annas held the office from A.D. 6 to 15. A total of eight members of his family filled the office. The best known is the son-in-law of Annas, Joseph Caiaphas (18-36), who presided at the trial of Jesus. The frequent turnover of high priests explains why Annas, who was not then a high priest, participated in the trials of Jesus (John 18:13,24) and of Peter and John (Acts 4:6), and why Caiaphas is described as "high priest for that year" (John 11:51). When Paul stood before the Sanhedrin, the high priest was Ananias, son of Nebedaeus (Acts 23:2; 24:1). Well known for his oppressive political activities, he held the office from 47 to 58. At one point during his reign he was charged with stirring up disorders in Judea and was sent to Rome in chains. He was acquitted, however, and his power and influence increased. . . . The final high priest was Phinehas, son of Samuel (68-70). He was installed by the people during a revolt after they had assassinated his predecessor, Mattathias, son of Theophilus and grandson of Annas (65-68)." Ref-1200, pp. 92-93.

One ossuary was exquisitely ornate and decorated with incised rosettes. Obviously it had belonged to a wealthy or high-ranking patron who could afford such a box. On this box was the inscription in two places "Qafa" and "Yehosef bar Qayafa" ("Caiaphas," "Joseph, son of Caiaphas"). [Josephus provides his full name as "Joseph who was called Caiaphas of the high priesthood."] Inside were the bones of six different people, including a 60-year-old man (most likely Caiaphas). Thereby he became the prototype of all who dare to approach the sanctuary of God without the shedding of blood (Heb. 9:22), who indeed own themselves dependent creatures but not death-deserving sinners. . . . And from this point onward these two 'ways' run through human history. On the one hand the 'way' of Cain (Jude 1:11); a religion of the flesh, a self-willed worship, the self-satisfied justification by works and the insubordinate self-redemption, which relies on itself and rejects substitution. . . . Thereby was given the basic tendency of all further human development, so far as it leads away from God; namely, overcoming the curse on the path of godless civilization, regaining Paradise without the experience of redemption, the combination of fleshly energy without the acknowledgement of God's sovereignty, and thus the self-redemption of mankind with the Deity excluded." But the further back in history, the less time there has been for mistakes to accumulate, thus pointing to a time when close intermarriage would not have caused problems." Batten, D. "... with modern astronomy one can reckon a year very precisely as being "365.24219879 days, or 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 45.975 seconds." However, in ancient times various systems were used. When one investigates the calendars of ancient India, Persia, Babylonia and Assyria, Egypt, Central and South America, and China it is interesting to notice that they uniformly had twelve thirty-day months (a few had eighteen twenty-day months) making a total of 360 days for the year and they had various methods of intercalating days so that the year would come out correctly. Although it may be strange to present-day thinking, it was common in those days to think of a 360-day year." Ref-0044, pp. 135-136 "Still it must be conceded that the feast recorded in Esther 1:1-5 lasted 180 days which is exactly six months of a 360 day year, thus indicating the possibility of a 360 day year." Ref-0186, p. 238. "The time measurements encountered in Genesis chapters 7 and 8 are the result of a lunar calendar. Gen. 7:11 states the flood began on the seventeenth day of the second month, and it ended on the seventeenth day of the seventh month (Gen. 8:4), exactly five months. Both Gen. 7:24 and Gen. 8:3 declare the waters were upon the earth 150 days. Assuming each month is the same length, they would have 30 days apiece. Skeptics say that is a big assumption because the story does not cover an entire year, and thus doesn't take into account any days the ancients may have added on to their year." Charles H. Ray, A Study of Daniel 9:24 - 27, Part II, Ref-0055, Vol. 5 No. 16, December 2001, p. 321. "... as can be seen . . . and also according to Talmudic tradition . . . should fog, clouds or a prolonged period of overcast prevent the moon from being seen, the thirtieth day after the previous new moon was reckoned and the new month began on the morrow." Ref-0186, p. 112. "The ancient solar years of the eastern nations consisted of 12 months, and every month of 30 days: and hence came the division of a circle into 360 degrees. This year seems to be used by Moses in his history of the Flood, and by John in the Apocalypse, where a time, times and half a time, 42 months and 1260 days are put equipollent. But in reckoning by many of these years together, an account is to be kept of the odd days which were added to the end of these years." Ref-0849, p. 139. "The moon orbits the earth every 29.5 days or so, and the year is (roughly) 365.25 days in length. It is an untidy arrangement that makes alignment of the lunar and solar calendars virtually impossible. 1 How much simpler it would have been had God, at the creation, decreed that the year should be 360 days and the lunar month 30 days in length. Evidence shows that God so ordained it at the beginning. The lunar year consisted of 12 months of 30 days' duration, equaling exactly the solar year of 360 days. Only after the Flood did the two calendars drop out of line with each other, necessitating numerous calendar reforms which even today have not resolved the problem. But how can one possibly know that the pre-Flood year consisted of 12 equal months of 30 days? Today's lunar calendar doesn't consist of 12 equal months. Nor does the solar calendar. Today's lunar months are alternately 29 and 30 days, making the lunar year one of just 354 days, 11 days or more short of the present solar year. Is there evidence that the pre-Flood lunar calendar did not contain this aberration? The evidence is found in the book of Genesis. The writer notes two specific calendar events: the exact day on which the fountains of the deep were broken up and the windows of heaven were opened (Gen. 7:11), and the exact day on which the waters abated (Gen. 8:3-4). The importance of this information is this: The Flood began on the 17th day of the 2nd month (Gen. 7:11), and was over by the 17th day of the 7th month (Gen. 8:4). That makes 5 months of 30 days duration each, which Genesis stresses by adding the daycount of 150." calendar - Hebrew - intercalation - 8 year cycle : ☪ + "Formerly, a most clever system was adopted. After being exposed to the Babylonians and their astrology and astronomical calculations during the captivity, the following simple expedient whereby an intercalary or thirteenth month (Veadar) was inserted in the third, sixth, and eighth years of each eight year cycle in order to keep the seasons from drifting as mentioned above. After three years of drifting by 11 1/4 days per year, a 30 day month was inserted bringing the drift back from 33 3/4 (3 x 11 1/4 = 33 3/4) to only 3 3/4 days (33 3/4 - 30 = 3 3/4). To this 3 3/4 year carryover was added the next cumulative 33 3/4 day drift over years four, five, and six so that at the end of year six the calendar has moved against the natural season by 37 1/2 days necessitating a second 30 day intercalation. This resulted in a 7 1/2 day carryover (37 1/2 - 30 = 7 1/2) to which was added the drift for years seven and eight or 22 1/2 days for a total of precisely 30 days (2 x 11 1/4 = 22 1/2 + 7 1/2 = 30). Thus after the third intercalation of a thirty day month, the days of drift were all practical purposes reduced to zero. . . . this adroit yet unadorned solution nearly perfectly accommodated the difficulty after every eight year cycle. As the maximum drift was but 37 1/2 days, the season would not have been unduly affected. Its use seems to have terminated at some unknown date after Julius Africanus (c.200-245 A.D.) yet prior to Hillel II (c.350 A.D.)." Ref-0186, p. 111.

calendar - Hebrew - intercalation - 19 year cycle : ☪ "The Assyrians during the period here under discussion measured time by lunar months and solar years. A new month was begun with each new moon. Since the moon makes a complete revolution of the earth once each 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, and 2.8 seconds, or approximately once every 29 1/2 days, the Assyrian months as a rule were alternately 29 or 30 days in length. Twelve of these months made up the year. But since this procedure gave a year that was approximately eleven days short of the solar year, it was necessary, if the year was to be kept in line with the sun and the annual seasons, for frequent adjustments to be made. Such adjustments were made whenever necessary by the addition of an intercalary month to the yearly calendar. Thus once in every two or three years--seven intercalations within a nineteen year period--the calendar contained thirteen months instead of the usual twelve, and by this means the Assyrian year was kept in line with the solar year. This was also the procedure followed in Babylon and among the Hebrews." Ref-0839, p. 68. "The achievement of the ancient Babylonian astronomers in devising the nineteen-year cycle with its seven intercalated months was indeed remarkable. It has been noted that one solar year equals 365.24219879 days while one lunar month equals 29.530588 days. Nineteen solar years, therefore, equals 6,939.601777 days. In nineteen 12-month years there are 228 months; adding seven more months equals 6,939.688180 days. Thus, the difference between 235 lunar months and 19 solar years is only 0.086403 day or 2 hours, 4 minutes, 25.22 seconds. This is how close the ancient Babylonian system came to solving the problem of the relationship between the lunar year and the solar year." Ref-0840, p. 27. "When the intercalation took place the added month was called the Second Adar, and the year with a Second Adar was a "leap" year in contrast with an ordinary year. The length of the added month was left to the judgment of the council, and it might be either twenty-nine or thirty days in length. Leap years were frequent and fell, on average, rather more than once in three years. . . . Maimonides also gives a lucid account of the process of intercalation as conducted under the Sanhedrin. Noting that the solar year exceeds the lunar year by approximately eleven days, he says that whenever this excess accumulates to about thirty days, or a little more or less, one month is added and the particular year is made to consist of thirteen months. The extra month is never anything other than an added Adar, and hence an intercalated year has a First Adar and a Second Adar. This month may consist of either twenty-nine or thirty days." Ref-0840, p. 38. "Having noted that the lunar year consists of but about 354 days or approximately 11 1/4 days less than the length of the solar year, the difficulty with merely using a lunar calendar becomes readily apparent. Being shorter than the solar year, the seasons would occur at earlier and earlier dates through the years. As the Jewish feasts unto the Lord were to be regulated according to the harvest of the various crops (Ex. 34:22 etc.), such a departure from the actual season would be totally impractical as the feast days would move "backwards" each year by nearly eleven days in relation to the solar seasons. . . . To offset this effect, the lunar calendar is "solarized" among today's Jews by intercalating (inserting or adding) a month of 29 days (known as either Veadar or Adar II) is added every third, sixth, eighth, eleventh, fourteenth, seventeenth, and nineteenth year of a nineteen year cycle just before the month of Nisan (Abib). The modern Hebrew colloquially refers to the thirteen month year as a "pregnant year" and is the Jewish variant of the Gregorian leap year. By the periodic addition of this thirteenth or leap month seven times in a nineteen year cycle, the correlation of the lunar month and the solar year assured." Ref-0186, p. 111.

calendar - Hebrew - intercalation - none - luni-solar : ☪ "With regard to the Biblical Hebrew calendar, Sir Isaac Newton penned: "All nations, before the just length of the Solar year was known, reckoned months by the course of the moon; and years by the returns of winter and summer, spring and autumn: (Gen. 1:14; 8:22; Censorinus c.19 and 20; Cicero in Verrem. Geminus c.6) and in making Calendars for their Festivals, they reckoned thirty days to a Lunar month, and twelve Lunar months to a year; taking the nearest round numbers: whence came the division of the ecliptic into 360 degrees. So in the time of Noah's flood, when the Moon could not be seen, Noah reckoned thirty days to a month: but if the Moon appeared a day or two before the end of the month, they began the next month with the first day of her appearing: . . . That the Israelites used the Luni-solar year is beyond question. Their months began with their new Moons. Their first month was called Abib, from the earing of Corn in that month.. Their Passover was kept upon the fourteenth day of the first month, the Moon being then in the full: and if the corn was not then ripe enough for offering the first Fruits, the Festival was put off, by adding an intercalary month to the end of the year; and the harvest was got in before the Pentecost, and the other Fruits gathered before the Feast of the seventh month." [Sir Isaac Newton, The Chronology of Ancient Kingdoms Amended, (London: 1728), p. 71.]" Ref-0186, p. 110. "All of this notwithstanding, the luni-solar Biblical year in which the feasts and months were regulated by the revolutions of the moon was adjusted to the solar year, not by astronomical or mathematical calculation, but by direct observation of the state of the crops and the physical appearance of the moon. Thus the months, beginning at the new moon, were lunar but the year, which controlled the condition of the crops, was solar. It was this later feature that kept the calendar from drifting. . . . the resulting system was complete, faultless, and self-adjusting. It required neither periodic correction nor intercalation." Ref-0186, p. 112. "Abib was the time marked by the stage of growth of the grain at the beginning of its ripening process after the stalks had hardened. The first new moon after the full ripe ear would begin the next year. . . . A little known yet equally significant factor assisting the Jews in regulating their calendar was that of the presence of the almond tree which was indigenous to the land of Israel. The Hebrew word for almond is "shaked" which means the "watcher", or "awakener", "alterer" or "to watch". The tree was so named because it is the first to awaken from the dormant sleep or "death" of winter, putting forth its conspicuous white (or possibly roseate) blossoms in profusion around February. . . . From their first sighting, the Jews would be alerted to observe closely the status of the corn (barley, not Indian corn) in the field with relation to the following new moons. Again, as both these occurrences were dependent upon the sun's light and warmth as related to the tilt of the plane of the ecliptic, the year could not drift. Since plant growth and development are controlled by the sun, the Biblical month of "Abib" occurs at the same solar season each year. Accordingly, it should be seen that all the other months are lunar being determined by the first appearing of the new moon, but Abib is solar as its beginning is first determined and governed by the sun. . . . Moreover, although in more recent years the Jews have referred to the intercalary 13th month as Veadar, there is no such designation or even hint of such a concept in Scripture. It is almost certain that the early Hebrews never employed such a concept in their calendar. . . . Indeed, such was totally unnecessary. . . . After seeing the almonds blossom and waiting for the first new moon after this event in which the barley was also fully ripened, the new year would begin automatically. If by the middle or end of Adar the Barley was not at the "Abib" stage of maturity . . . the following new moon would not be declared. Thus the twelfth month, called Adar (Est. 3:7; 9:1), would simply become an extended long month rather than adding a thirteenth." Ref-0186, p. 113.

calendar - Julian : chronology - A.D. 1582 - Gregorian calendar ☆ + "In A.U.C. 691 = 63 B.C. . . . Julius Caesar became pontifex maximus and still followed the previous haphazard practice until the end of 47 B.C. Within this sixteen-year period the calendar months had receded by about 60 days from their customary position within the tropical year. In order to make up the deficiency, and in preparation for a complete reform of the calendar, Caesar extended the length of the year A.U.C. 708 = 46 B.C. to 445 days. For the project he sought the advice from the Alexandrian astronomer Sosigenes and in accordance with his suggestions established (in 45 B.C.) what is known as the Julian calendar. This calendar is still in use, with one small modification, among all Western nations. All dependence upon cycles of the month was abandoned, and the true length of the year was accepted as 365? days. . . . the beginning of the year was transferred to January 1 from March 1 where it had been. What had been the "fifth" month and called Quintilis was now the seventh month and, by vote of the Senate, renamed Julius in honor of Julius Caesar, and the later and former "sixth" month, Sextilis, was moved to eighth place and renamed Augustus in honor of that emperor. . . . The year as just outlined is still one-fourth day short of the requisite 365?-day year, and adjustment was also made for this fact. In the first year of the new calendar (i.e., 45 B.C.) Februarius was given twenty-nine days and the year had 366 days; in the three following years Februarius had twenty-eight days and the year 365 days; and this same pattern was repeated continuously with an added day every fourth year. . . . The small modification later recognized as necessary in the Julian calendar, was instituted by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582. As modern astronomy tells, the true length of the tropical year is not exactly 365? days (= 365 days and 6 hours) but exactly 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46.0 seconds, which makes the Julian year 11 minutes and 14.0 seconds too long. This difference amounts to a little more than 9 days in 1,200 years, so in the Julian calendar the date of the vernal equinox (important for the establishment of the date of Easter in the Christian church), comes earlier and earlier as time goes on. By 1582 it had fallen back to the eleventh of March instead of occurring on the twenty-first, as it did at the time of the Council of Nicea in A.D. 325. Pope Gregory, therefore, took the advice of the distinguished astronomer of his time, Clavius, and ordered the calendar corrected by dropping ten days, so that the day following October 4, 1582, should be called the fifteenth instead of the fifth. After that, century years should be leap years only if they are exactly divisible by 400. Thus 1700, 1800, 1900, 2100, and so on are not leap years, but 1600 and 2000 are. This is the Gregorian calendar and the very precise form of the calendar accepted in most Western nations." Ref-0840, pp. 66-68.

calendar - lunar vs. solar year : Gen. 7:11; Gen. 8:3-4; Gen. 8:13-15; Est. 1:4 ☆ "In modern astronomy the time from one new moon to the next, which is known as the synodic or ordinary month, is determined as 29.530588 days, or 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes 2.8 seconds. . . . A problem arises when the relation of the month to the year is brought into consideration. Twelve months of

29? days each make a year of 354 days and 12 months of 30 days each make a year of 360 days, but the year measured by the sun is in round numbers 365 days in length; thus a lunar year of 360 days is 5 days short and a lunar year of 354 days is 11 days short. These two ways of counting the days of the month are found in the existing story of the flood in Gen. 6:5-8:22. In Gen. 7:11 the flood began in the second month, on the 17th day of the month; in Gen. 8:3-4 the waters had abated at the end of 150 days and the ark came to rest upon the 17th day of the month; the intervening time was exactly 5 months of 150 days, i.e., the months were each 30 days in length. In Gen. 8:13-15 the flood waters were dried from off the earth in the first month, the first day of the month, and in the second month, on the 27th day of the month, the earth was dry and Noah went forth from the ark. Since the flood began in the second month, on the 17th day of the month (Gen. 7:11), this first day of the first month was the beginning of a new year and the 16th day of the ensuing second month was the last day of the first year of the flood and the 17th day of that second month was the first day of the second year of the flood, whereby the 27th day of this same second month was the 11th day of the second year of the flood, i.e., the flood lasted for one year and 11 days which makes exactly the 11-day difference between a lunar year of 354 days and the solar year of 365 days." It is a question that is worth asking for this reason: I know large numbers of people who when they use the term 'hyper'-Calvinist generally mean Calvinist. In other words, they do not know what a hyper-Calvinist is; let me tell you what a hyper-Calvinist is. A hyper-Calvinist is one who says that the offer of salvation is only made to the redeemed, and that no preacher of the Gospel should preach Christ and offer salvation to all and sundry. That is a hyper-Calvinist. A hyper-Calvinist regards a man who offers salvation or who proclaims salvation to all as a dangerous person. For what it is worth, there is a society in London at the moment that has described me as a dangerous Arminian, because I preach Christ to all and offer salvation to all. When Paul, for example, writes to the Corinthians, his letter is to be acknowledged as possessing divine authority (1 Cor. 14:37). This letter had the authority from the moment he wrote it, yet it could not be referred to as canonical until it was received in a list of accepted writings formed sometime later. At a later time it was accepted as canonical because of its inherent authority. A book first has divine authority based on its inspiration, and then attains canonicity due to its general acceptance as a divine product. No church council by its decrees can make the books of the Bible authoritative. The books of the Bible possess their own authority and, indeed, had this authority long before there were any councils of the church." Ref-0236, p. 153. "One thing must be emphatically stated. The New Testament books did not become authoritative for the Church because they were formally included in a canonical list; on the contrary, the Church included them in her canon because she recognized their innate worth and generally apostolic authority, direct or indirect. The first ecclesiastical councils to classify the canonical books were both held in North Africa -- at Hippo Regius in 393 and at Carthage in 397 -- but what these councils did was not to impose something new upon the Christian communities but to codify what was already the general practice of those communities." Council of Carthage in A.D. 397 accepted all NT books including the Apocrypha. Council of Trent in A.D. 1546 reaffirmed NT canon and made proclamations discouraging the reformation. "While the 'canon' of scripture means the list of books accepted as holy scripture, the other sense of 'canon' -- rule or standard -- has rubbed off on this one, so that the 'canon' of scripture is understood to be the list of books which are acknowledged to be, in a unique sense, the rule of belief and practice." Ref-0073, p. 18. "When Josephus speaks of twenty-two books [The total of 22 may have been arranged so as to correspond with the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet.], he probably refers to exactly the same documents as the twenty-four of the traditional Jewish reckoning, Ruth being counted as an appendix to Judges and Lamentations to Jeremiah." Ref-0073, p. 33. "If the teaching of the prophets and apostles is the foundation, this must have had authority before the church began to exist. Groundless, too, is their subtle objection that, although the church took its beginning here, the writings to be attributed to the prophets and apostles nevertheless remain in doubt until decided by the church. For if the Christian church was form the beginning founded upon the writings of the prophets and the preaching of the apostles, wherever this doctrine is found, the acceptance of it -- without which the church itself would never have existed -- must certainly have preceded the church. It is utterly vain, then, to pretend that the power of judging Scripture so lies with the church that its certainty depends upon churchly assent. Thus, while the church receives and gives it seal of approval to the Scriptures, it does not thereby ender authentic what is otherwise doubtful or controversial." -- Calvin, Ref-0791, p. 105.

canon - Jewish - Josephus : ☉ "Josephus . . . speaks of twenty-two inspired books (the number corresponding to the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet). This number is arrived at by putting together as one book each of the following: Judges and Ruth; 1 and 2 Samuel; 1 and 2 Kings; 1 and 2 Chronicles; Ezra and Nehemiah; Jeremiah and Lamentations; and the twelve minor prophets." Ref-0060, p. 170. "The number of books looked upon as having divine authorship is carefully limited to twenty-two. By joining Ruth to Judges and Lamentations to Jeremiah, and remembering that the Jews enumerated their books differently, the twenty-two books mentioned by Josephus are the same as the thirty-nine books in our Bible today. . . . The time covered in these books is expressly limited. Josephus believed that the canon extended from Moses to Artaxerxes (464-424 B.C.). This corresponds with the Jewish belief that prophetic inspiration ceased from Malachi, who apparently was a contemporary of Ezra and Nehemiah. This was the period of Artaxerxes. Others indeed wrote later, but their writings are not on a par with the earlier writings. In other words, according to Josephus, the canon is closed." Ref-0236, p. 155. "For we have not an innumerable multitude of books among us, disagreeing from and contradicting one another [as the Greeks have], but only twenty-two books, which contain the records of all the past times; which are justly believed to be divine; (39) and of them five belong to Moses, which contain his laws and the traditions of the origin of mankind till his death. This interval of time was little short of three thousand years; (40) but as to the time from the death of Moses till the reign of Artaxerxes, king of Persia, who reigned after Xerxes, the prophets, who were after Moses, wrote down what was done in their times in thirteen books. The remaining four books contain hymns to God, and precepts for the conduct of human life. (41) It is true, our history hath been written since Artaxerxes very particularly, but hath not been esteemed of the like authority with the former by our forefathers, because there hath not been an exact succession of prophets since that time; (42) and how firmly we have given credit to those books of our own nation, is evident by what we do; for during so many ages as have already passed, no one has been so bold as either to add anything to them, to take anything from them, or to make any change in them; but it becomes natural to all Jews, immediately and from their very birth, to esteem those books to contain divine doctrines, and to persist in them, and, if occasion be, willingly to die for them. (43) For it is no new thing for our captives, many of them in number, and frequently in time, to be seen to endure racks and deaths of all kinds upon the theatres, that they may not be obliged to say one word against our laws and the records that contain them; . . ." Ref-0411, Apion 1.8 (38-43). "The Hebrew Old Testament was the starting point for Intertestamental Judaism. The Pentateuch held a special place as unquestioned authority. By the end of the [intertestamental] period all thirty-nine books of the Hebrew canon were regarded as the Holy Word of God." Ref-1200, p. 30.

canon - New Testament - earliest list : ☉ "The first official document which prescribes the twenty-seven books of our New Testament as alone canonical is Athanasius's Easter letter for the year 367, but the process was not everywhere complete until at least a century and a half later." Ref-0075, p. 232, quoting J.N.D. Kelly, Early Christian Doctrines, pp. 59-60 canon - New Testament - Tyndale : ☉ + "Tyndale largely expands Luther; but he equally largely cuts him. In losing Luther's final pages, he ignores the celebrated last page of all, present in all Luther's Wittenberg editions until 1534, setting out 'which are the correct and most vital books of the New Testament'. These, according to Luther, are the Gospel of John and his first Epistle, Paul's Epistles, especially Romans, Galatians and Ephesians, and the first Epistle of Peter. Tyndale is not interested in a two-tier New Testament and may well have been glad once in Worms to abandon Peter Quentell's Lutheran table whereby the Gospels and everything else -- Hebrews, James, Jude and Revelation -- is to be set aside, un-numbered and literally printed apart. . . . He understands that you cannot shoose which bits of it to have. His life was dedicated to the English reformers' proposition that the words of the Bible, and especially the 'hard places' as they were called, could only be interpreted by the Bible itself, taken whole." Ref-0230, p. 120.

canon - Old Testament - earliest : ☉ ". . . a completed canon of the Hebrew Scriptures is evident from the testimony of the 'Prologue of Ecclesiasticus' (c. 132 B.C.), Jesus, Philo, and Josephus well before A.D. 100. Furthermore, there is evidence that inspired books were added to the canon immediately as they were written. Hence, the Old Testament canon was actually completed when the last book was written and added to it by the fourth century B.C." Ref-0075, p. 237. "Post--A.D. 70 rabbinic discussion assume that the Old Testament canon was already well established; only the Song of Songs and Ecclesiastes were questioned." Ref-1200, p. 137-138.

canon - Old Testament - reliability : ☉ "The work of collating MSS and noting variants reached its apex at the end of the 18th cent in the prodigious collations of B. Kennicott and J. B. de Rossi. With the help of assistants Kennicott noted variants from the consonantal text of more than 600 MSS and 52 printed Bibles, while de Rossi and his staff surveyed an even larger field, recording variants from 1475 MSS and editions. The chief result of this enormous investment of time, energy, and money was to verify the negative though important conclusion that most of the variants encountered in the MT MSS are inconsequential and do not affect the interpretation of the text. . . . The phenomenon of the MT is unique in the field of biblical textual criticism. No other stream of scribal transmission, in either the OT or NT, manifests such remarkable uniformity. Intense study of the MT MSS since the late 18th cent has shown that only a limited number of consonantal variants of substance can be found in the entire tradition. When this observation is seen to hold true not only for the principal MSS of the ben Asher tradition but also for the numerous text specimens of the Cairo Genizah antedating those MSS, the phenomenon is truly extraordinary and bears witness to a genuinely conservative and cautious scribal tradition. . . . As noted earlier, the DSS attest a Masoretic-type text, and this fact has contributed significantly to the new appreciation for the MT as an archaic text. The case is well illustrated by 1Qisab. This MS attests not more than a dozen significant variants from the MT, and only two or three of these may be considered preferable to the MT. At the same time many readings in the DSS are at variance with the MT. How are such variants judged? Close scrutiny shows that many of the attested variants are simply scribal errors without text-critical merit (for a sampling of such errors see WÄ%rthwein, pp. 106-108). A number remain, however, which are variants of substance, i.e., they offer a consonantal text which yields a meaning different from that of the MT." S. K. Soderlund, TEXT AND MSS OF THE NT, Ref-0385 pp. 4:805-814, p. 4:810-812. ". . . it must be conceded that on the basis of both its unrivaled antiquity as well as its unprecedented unbroken continuous narrative, a natural predilection in favor of the Hebrew Text apart from philosophic views must be seen as intellectually justifiable. Despite all assessments to the contrary, the undeniable fact is that it is simply by far the best most complete record available to the extent that all other records of antiquity, mutilated and fragmented as they often are, fall far below it in analytical worth." canon - Roman Catholicism - late : ☉ + "The Roman See did not express its opinion on the question of the canon until the Council of Florence (1439-1443) when efforts were made to re-unify the Western and eastern churches. But the first time in the history of the Church that Rome dogmatically and officially defined the content of the canon as an article of faith was 1546 at the Council of Trent. This was over fifteen hundred years after the death of Christ. Rome's criticisms of Protestantism are self-destructive because the Western Church existed for fifteen hundred years before Rome actually did what Rome claims is absolutely necessary to have a certain scriptural authority in the Church." God calls the expanse sky and this is verified when we read in verse 20 that birds fly through it, but it must also include the space above the atmosphere because Genesis 1:14, 15, and 17, says the expanse contains at least the sun, the moon and the planets. . . . In a previous paper I suggested that the 'waters above' are in a halo around the solar system, locked up in the form of frozen ices, dirty comets and other large chunks of frozen material." John Hartnett, The 'waters above', Ref-0784, 20(1) 2006, 93:93, p. 93. D. In the case of John 8:11, the woman is also excused on the basis of following the law of Moses. (Notice in John 8:10 Jesus' emphasis on the lack of witnesses. Here is an excellent example where Jesus fulfills the law of Moses, but in the spirit of the law of Christ.) In cases such as 1Cor. 6:9-10, no such appeal can be made -- capital punishment was not enforced for the sins categorized here. Yet Rom. 13:4 implies that the state enforces capital punishment for some crimes, even after the cross. Without a clear understanding of dispensations, it is difficult to explain why we enforce capital punishment for murder, yet no longer stone adulterers or children who curse their parents. Capital punishment appears to be an attribute of the millennial kingdom (Isa. 11:4; Rev. 20:8-9).

This South African diamond was formed some 200 km deep in the mantle, and because of the great strength of the bonds in diamond, the hardest substance known, contamination is simply not a possibility. The diamond's carbon-dated "age" of less than 58,000 years is thus an upper limit for the age of the whole earth." Ref-0232, p. 387

"Perhaps the value of the radiocarbon method for the dating of ancient remains is best estimated by reviewing the method's assumptions. In view of the above discussion we may say that: if the intensity of cosmic rays has remained at its present level for the past 20,000 years or more; and; and if the strength of the magnetic field has remained constant over the span of time being dated; and if the decay rate of carbon-14 can be shown to have been constant over the span of time being dated; and if equilibrium in the reservoir was reached, and has stayed constant for a period of at least 20,000 to 30,000 years; and if the sample was not contaminated while living by other carbonates; and if the sample was not contaminated by C¹⁴ atoms from other materials of different age after it died; and if the oceans have remained at relatively the same depth during the time of measurement; and if the oceans have remained at relatively the same temperature over the period from which the measurement is being taken; then radiocarbon dates back one half-life (5730) years may be comparatively correct. These assumptions must be proven correct before the radiocarbon dating method can be fully trusted--a task which to us presently appears insuperable." Ref-0819, pp 219-220.

cessationism : Lam. 2:9; Dan. 9:24; Zec. 12:3; Zec. 13:2; 1Cor. 13:8 ☪ That the gifts will cease is clearly taught -- the disagreement is over when? "The cessation of the gifts of apostleship and prophecy is not based upon 1Cor. 13:8-11, since that is dealing with the cessation of the gifts only with the Rapture of the Church." Ref-0067, Summer 2000, Questions and Answers. "The 'perfect' is not the completion of Scripture, since there is still the operation of those two gifts [knowledge and prophecy] and will be in the future kingdom (cf. Joel 2:28; Acts 2:17; Rev. 11:3). The Scriptures do not allow us to see 'face to face' or have perfect knowledge as God does (v. 12). The "perfect" is not the rapture of the church or the second coming of Christ, since the kingdom to follow these events will have an abundance of preachers and teachers (cf. Is. 29:18; 32:3,4; Joel 2:28; Rev. 11:3). The perfect must be the eternal state, when we in glory see God face to face (Rev. 22:4) and have full knowledge in the eternal new heavens and new earth. . . . Paul uses a different word for the end of the gift of languages, thus indicating it will 'cease' by itself, as it did at the end of the apostolic age." Ref-0089, n. 1Cor. 13:8-10 "If the voice of the verb here is significant, then Paul is saying either that tongues will cut themselves off (direct middle) or, more likely, cease of their own accord, i.e., 'die out' without an intervening agent (indirect middle). . . . The implication may be that tongues were to have 'died out' on their own before the perfect comes. . . . The dominant opinion among NT scholars today, however, is that παύονται is not an indirect middle. The argument is that παύω in the future is deponent, and that the change in verbs is merely stylistic. If so, then this text makes no comment about tongues ceasing on their own, apart from the intervention of 'the perfect.' There are three arguments against the deponent view however. First if παύονται is deponent, then the second principle part (future form) should not occur in the active voice in Hellenistic Greek. But it does, and it does so frequently. Hence, the verb cannot be considered deponent. . . . But this is not to say that the middle voice in 1Cor. 13:8 proves that tongues already ceased! This verse does not specifically address when tongues would cease, although it is given a terminus ad quem: when the perfect comes." Ref-0129, p. 422. "One of the first direct references to the early-church belief regarding the cessation of the prophetic gifts is in the Muratorian Fragment, which most modern scholars now date around A.D. 170. This work contains the oldest existing list of the canonically accepted NT books. . . . The work refers to both apostles and prophets, stating explicitly that the number of prophets "is complete," indicating an end to prophetic expression." F. David Farnell, "The Montanist Crisis: A Key to Refuting Third-Wave Concepts of NT Prophecy", Ref-0164, 14/2 (Fall 2003) 235-262, pp. 258-259. "The context of 1 Corinthians 12-14 discusses the nature and regulations of spiritual gifts bestowed in the Church Age by God the Holy Spirit. These, by definition, were not bestowed prior to the advent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, Ad 33. Thus prophecy in the New Testament was somewhat different from prophecy in the Old Testament. Whatever the dynamics of prophecy were in the Old Testament, it was not a spiritual gift of the same order as in the New Testament." This scenario is false and misleading because all events in the material world are subject to the laws of physics. Chance cannot violate the laws of physics. cheek - turn other : Lam. 3:30; Isa. 50:6; Mtt. 5:39; Luke 6:29 ☩ D. Martyn Lloyd-Jones observes that any valid interpretation of Mtt. 5:39-40 must reconcile the following additional passages: Mtt. 18:15-17, seeking justice with a brother; John 18:22-23, Jesus points out the unjust action of striking him without him having done evil; Acts 16:37, Paul asserts his Roman citizenship. "How do we reconcile these things? Our Lord her in the Sermon on the Mount seems to be saying that invariably you must turn the other cheek, or if ever you are sued for your coat you must throw in your cloak as well. But He Himself, when He is smitten on the face, does not turn the other cheek, but registers a protest. And the apostle Paul insisted upon the magistrate coming down to release him. If we accept the original principle, there is no difficulty at all in reconciling the two sets of statements. It can be done in this way. These instances are not examples and illustrations of either our Lord or the apostle insisting upon personal rights. What our Lord did was to rebuke the breaking of the law and His protest was made in order to uphold the law. He said to these men, in effect: 'You know by striking me like this you are breaking the law.' He did not say: 'Why do you insult me?' He did not lose His temper or take it as a personal affront. He did not become angry, or show concern about Himself. But He was concerned to remind these men of the dignity and honour of the law. And the apostle Paul did exactly the same thing." Ref-0170, pp. 284-285. "Because an assault involves slapping someone on the left cheek, slapping them on the right cheek involves merely an insult." This implies a close analogy between the two appearances, but there is one key difference: The cherubim in Eden face outward in order to ward off attempts at re-entry. But in the Holy of Holies, the cherubim stationed atop the Mercy Seat of the Ark face inward toward the place where God's presence was manifested between their wings. Ref-0096, p. 96. See free will predestination - of God "According to the divine prerogative, an individual is sovereignly chosen by God to receive His gracious provision of salvation through Christ by imparting a new nature that gives a person the ability to respond by faith to His Word as convicted and spiritually illuminated by the Holy Spirit." John Baze, Doctrinal Statement, Original Word Ministries, p. 7. "Man is a fallen creature, with his mind in a state of enmity towards God. He is totally unable to save himself and to reunite himself with God. Everyone would be lost if God had not elected some for salvation and that unconditionally. It is only through Christ's death that it is possible for these people to be saved, and they would not see or accept that salvation if God through His irresistible grace in the Holy Spirit had not opened their eyes and persuaded them (not forced them) to accept the offer. And even after that, it is God who sustains them and keeps them from falling. Their salvation, therefore, is sure because it depends, not on them and their ability, but on God's grace. The church is a collection of the elect." Martyn Lloyd-Jones, Ref-0935, p. 195. "Divine sovereignty as it concerns individuals shows that salvation is altogether of grace. The sovereign will of God has chosen certain people to salvation. This is not a truth, he [Lloyd-Jones] stressed, for unbelievers but for those who are already believers. He then put to them a series of verses 'to study later', namely, Acts 13:48 . . . Romans 11:5-6; 1 Corinthians 1:26-29; Ephesians 1:3-5; 2 Thessalonians 2:13; 2 Timothy 1:9; 1 Peter 1:2; Romans 8:28-29 and 9:1-24; and Matthew 11:25-26. The meaning of these verses, he argued, is confirmed by other negative statements: no man can save himself, he must be re-born (John 3:3); no man can come to Christ 'except the Father draw him' (John 4:4 and Matt 16:17); no carnal mind can be 'subject to the law of God' (Rom. 8:7); no natural man can 'receive the things of the Spirit of God' (1 Cor. 2:14), etc. Such negatives complement the affirmatives." Ref-0935, p. 243. "In this connection there is an important distinction to be observed between the sovereign purpose of God and His desires. For specific and worthy reasons, God, as any other being, may purpose to do more or less than He desires. His desire is evidently toward the whole world (John 3:16), but His purpose is as clearly revealed to be toward the elect. In the important passage, "who would have all men to be saved" (1 Tim. 2:4, R.V.), this distinction is seen in that the passive rather than the active form of the verb save is used." Ref-0195, p. 3:199.

Mal 3:6). For this reason we love the modern State of Israel, we weep over it, we desire to proclaim to it "the glory of our great God and Savior, Jesus Christ" (Tit. 2:13), and yet we also anticipate that time when the Lord Jesus will be welcomed by the joyful exclamation of Israel, "Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord" (Matt 23:39)." Christianity - ragged : ☪ + "Biblical history reveals that God's ways are often more ragged around the edges than we might wish. In the Old Covenant, we see the Spirit working through broken institutions, illegitimate priesthoods, and lonely Elijahs.

The Sanhedrin of Christ's time presented delicious institutional unity and pomp, but the Spirit happened to be working through a locust-eating prophet and a band of fishermen. In this light, the various, widely publicized departures of many Evangelicals to Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy have the distinct aroma of youthful haste and short-term zeal. The Sanhedrin was far better organized than the fishermen, and it had a grand liturgy, an authoritative line of oral tradition, and a succession of leaders. In a healthy church, those forms are good and holy. But to have turned to the Sanhedrin at that time would have been to embrace apostasy. Truth, beauty, and goodness were with the fishermen." In the East, 6 January, known as Epiphany, was favoured as the anniversary of Christ's birth and baptism. The Western date was introduced into the East by John Chrysostom near the end of the fourth century. Subsequently the birth of Christ was celebrated by both East and West on 25 December. Christology - heretical views : ☪ "The Lord's humanity was complete, in contrast to Apollinarianism, which taught that the divine Logos took the place of a human spirit in the man Jesus. The Lord Jesus was completely a man -- body, soul, and spirit. Yes, Christ is God, but He is also man -- He is both. His humanity was real and permanent, as against various forms of Docetism. The Lord's divine and human natures remained unchanged and unmixed, each fulfilling its role according to its proper laws, in contrast with Eutychianism, which taught that the Incarnation produced a third nature, a kind of deified humanity in which the properties of true human nature are lost. The Lord's human and divine natures were united in one person, in contrast with Nestorianism, which taught that Jesus had two personalities or was two persons." David J. According to Luke 3:1, the activity of John the Baptist which immediately preceded the commencement of our Lord's public ministry, is dated in 'the fifteenth year of Tiberius Caesar'. Now, Tiberius became emperor in August, A.D. 14, and according to the method of computation current in Syria, which Luke would have followed, his fifteenth year commenced in September or October, A.D. 27. The fourth Gospel mentions three Passovers after this time; the third Passover from that date would be the passover of A.D. 30, at which it is probably on other grounds that the crucifixion took place. First, in the light of new evidence since Anderson's day, the 445 B.C. date is not acceptable for Artaxerxes' twentieth year. . . Second, the A.D. 32 date for the crucifixion is untenable. It would mean that Christ was crucified on either a Sunday or Monday. In fact, Anderson realizes the dilemma and he has to do mathematical gymnastics to arrive at a Friday crucifixion. This makes one immediately suspect. Actually there is no good evidence for an A.D. 32 crucifixion date." Ref-0044, p. 137. "One point more, however, claims attention. Numerous writers, some of them eminent, have discussed this question as though nothing more were needed in fixing the date of the Passion than to find a year, within certain limits, in which the paschal moon was full upon a Friday. But this betrays strange forgetfulness of the intricacies of the problem. True it is that if the system by which to-day the Jewish year is settled had been in force eighteen centuries ago, the whole controversy might turn upon the week date of the Passover in a given year; but on account of our ignorance of the embolismal system then in use, no weight whatever can be attached to it." Ref-0762, p. 99. "Indeed, the only thing reasonably certain upon the matter is that the Passover did not fall upon the days assigned to it by writers whose calculations respecting it are made with strict astronomical accuracy, for the Mishna affords the clearest proof that the beginning of the month was not determined by the true new moon, but by the first appearance of her disc; and though in a climate like that of Palestine this would seldom be delayed by causes which would operate in murkier latitudes, it doubtless sometimes happened "that neither sun nor stars for many days appeared." These considerations justify the statement that in any year whatever the 15th Nisan may have fallen on a Friday." Ref-0762, p. 101.

[\[http://www.bethlehemstar.net/faq.htm\]](http://www.bethlehemstar.net/faq.htm) accessed 20111116. Issues to consider regarding the Star of Bethlehem presentation by <http://www.bethlehemstar.net> : 1) Why would retrograde motion of Jupiter near Regulus be seen as significant by the Magi prior to Christ's birth? 2) How often does that occur on average?; 3) Revelation 12 was not yet written at the time of the Magi (although Numbers 24:17 was). Therefore, the imagery of the sun in Virgo with the moon under her feet would not have held special significance to the Magi. 4) A lunar eclipse on the day of crucifixion precludes a solar eclipse -- the most likely explanation for the darkness at the crucifixion -- as Larson himself points out. 4) Larson's interpretation of why Peter cites Joel on Pentecost (as if Joel had all been fulfilled and it was known to his listeners) is strained at best. The astronomical signs which Joel predicts cannot be easily construed as having been seen as significant by people at the time of Jesus' crucifixion. Moreover, the book of Revelation written in approximately A.D. 95 predicts yet future fulfillment of Joel's prophecy, including parallel passages such as Armageddon (Rev. 16 cf. Joel 3) and the Lord's army (Rev. 9 cf. Joel 3). A key question I would like to see answered: how often do Jupiter and Venus come into conjunction in the west -- which is supposed to constitute the key sign which sends the Magi toward Jerusalem?

chronology - A.D. 1582 - Gregorian calendar

☪ "Lunar calendars were widely used in the earliest times. The interval between one new moon and the next is 29.53 days and there are 12 lunar cycles in a solar year. But the match is not exact -- the lunar year is 354 days long which is 11.5 days shorter than the solar year. To correct this confusion, the first Roman emperor, Julius Caesar, in 45 B.C., following the advice of the Greek astronomer Sosigenes, standardized the calendar across his empire to a solar year of 365 days, with an extra "leap day" every fourth year. This "Julian calendar" remained in use for the next 1,500 years. The problem popped up again during the Renaissance, and fueled a renewed interest in cosmology. The Julian year, it turned out, was 11 minutes and 14 seconds longer than the solar year. This may not seem to be much of a difference, but over a period of 1,500 years it accumulated to the point where the spring equinox was 10 days too early. So in 1582, Pope Gregory XIII issued a decree dropping 10 days from the calendar and he instituted a new system, called the Gregorian calendar, in which century years divisible by 400 should be leap years but other century years should be common years. Thus, 1600 and 2000 were leap years, but 1700, 1800, and 1900 were common years. This calendar is the one we use today." Ref-0814, p. 35.

"Judah began with accession-year system, both for its own kings and its synchronisms with Israel. At a time of alliance and intermarriage with Israel, the system of Israel was adopted by Judah and was used through four reigns, after which Judah returned to its original system of reckoning. Regnal years in Judah began with the month of Tishri. In Israel the nonaccession-year system was used for the length of reign in Israel and the synchronisms with Judah. When Judah shifted back to accession-year system, Israel also adopted that method. Regnal years in Israel began with the month of Nisan. In both Judah and Israel a number of coregencies occurred, and in Israel there were two instances of rival reigns." Ref-0839, p. 21.

"Israel began with nonaccession-year system and later shifted to accession-year reckoning. Judah began with the accession-year method. Later both nations simultaneously shifted to accession-year reckoning and followed it to the end." Ref-0839, p. 23. "The methods used by Israel and Judah in the reckoning of the reigns of their kings would thus be as follows: Israel at the time of the schism followed the nonaccession-year system and continued its use till the close of the ninth century B.C. when under Jehoash a shift was made to the accession-year system which continued to be used to the close of Israel's history. Judah at the time of the schism used the accession-year system and continued its use to the middle of the ninth century; from Jehoram to Joash reigns are reckoned according to the nonaccession-year system; and from Amaziah, at about the beginning of the eighth century, to the close of Judah's history the accession-year system was again in use. At the time of the schisms, Israel and Judah were thus using different systems of chronological reckoning. Israel the nonaccession-year system and Judah the accession-year method; and from the middle of the ninth century to the close of their respective histories both nations used the same method--the nonaccession-year system to the beginning of the eighth century and the accession-year system from then to the end." chronology - accession-year reckoning : ☪

"Two systems of reckoning were used for the Hebrew kings, accession-year reckoning (postdating), and non-accession year reckoning (antedating). Since in the latter system the year in which a ruler began is termed his first official year, that year is counted twice, for it is also the last year of the previous ruler. Thus in a country where this system is used one year must always be deducted from the official total of every reign in order to secure actual years. Totals according to accession-year reckoning, however, equal actual totals. Judah used accession-year reckoning from Rehoboam to Jehoshaphat, non-accession year reckoning from Jehoram to Joash, and accession-year reckoning again from Amaziah to Zedekiah. Israel used nonaccession-year reckoning from Jeroboam to Jehoahaz, and accession-year reckoning from Jehoash to Hoshea." Ref-0839, p. 14.

The ability to so do would set the Holy writings of the Christian faith in bold relief, totally above and apart from those of other world religions. Neither Islam's Koran, the pantheistic Vedas, Upanishads and Bhagavad-Gita of the Hindoos, the Eightfold Path of Buddhism, nor the Analects of Confucius, etc. possesses any revelatory text that would allow similar formalistic

Ref-0186, p. iv. "The modern school of Biblical chronology has attempted to establish its chronology by examining the Biblical record for a synchronistic point of contact between Israel and the Assyrian, Babylonian or Egyptian records. Assuming the chronologies of these kingdoms to be established, at least at the points of contact, the foreign kingdom's date is assigned at the synchronous encounter to the Scriptural event. However, such procedure is founded on the fallacious presupposition and attending methodology that the Assyrian Eponym Canon, the royal inscriptions of the Assyrian and Babylonian records and eclipse identification with a subsequent date assignment are sources of absolute and accurate chronology." Ref-0186, p. 6. "The fragment of a tablet giving a list of the Assyrian Limmus or eponyms for the years 858-847 B.C., further years which were originally on the tablet have been broken away. The Assyrians named their years after high officials in cycles, beginning with the king, each office holder being designated Limmu for the year in question. . . . The first line, separated from what follows by a horizontal ruling, is damaged at the beginning and end, but (with restoration in brackets) reads ?[Reign] of Shalmaneser son of Ashurnasirpal . . . ' referring to Shalmaneser III (858-824 B.C.) . . . Shalmaneser was Limmu for the first time in 857 B.C., and this is listed in the second line below the ruling, where he appears as 'Shalmaneser, king of Assyria'. The two following lines for the years 856 and 855 B.C., indicate that the Limmuship was next held by the men designated respectively . . . amēlu'urtānu . . . amēlu'ra' bšāqē . . . According to the Old Testament, the holders of these two offices in 701 B.C. appeared, together with the Rabsharis . . . before the walls of Jerusalem, in local command of the army of Sennacherib (2K. 18:17)." Ref-0843, p. 66. "This might be true if somehow we knew that the Assyrian list were complete and without error. To the contrary, at least two clear contradictions are known to exist. These are (1) the addition on one of the main four lists (Ca3) of the name Balatu at the year B.C. 787 and (2) another name (Nabu-shar-usur) which is out of sequence when compared to the other three lists. Other eponym difficulties will be disclosed in a subsequent section within this chapter. All these problems are merely ignored or glossed over in almost all the pertinent literature. . . . The problem is then, that at such places of apparent disagreement the trend in modern scholarship for the past 150 years has been to accept these profane, secular materials -- especially that of the chronology - B.C. 0004 - Christ - birth - Anderson : ☪ "Fynes Clinton sums up his discussion of the matter thus: "The nativity was not more than about eighteen months before the death of Herod, nor less than five or six. The death of Herod was either in the spring of B.C. 4, or the spring of B.C. 3. The earliest possible date then for the nativity is the autumn of B.C. 6 (U.C. 748), eighteen months before the death of Herod in B.C. 4. The latest will be the autumn of B.C. 4 (U.C.

Assyrian Eponym List -- as correct. This data is then imposed upon the Biblical record and where there are discrepancies, the biblical record is over-ruled and forced to fit the secular outline by the arbitrary invention of many non-Biblical co-regencies. . . . The net result of all this that some have reduced the actual length of the Kingdom of Judah's existence by 30 years, and as much as 44 (E. R. Thiele) and even as much as 53 years (W. F. Albright)." Ref-0186, p. 117. "The undeniable reality is that the history of Assyria and Babylonia, although sometimes giving detailed dates, exists only in a mutilated condition with no continuous chronology. This fact cannot be overstated." Ref-0186, p. 154. "Thus, it has been demonstrated that the Assyrian Eponym Canon is fraught with uncertainties and is not the solid unquestioned foundation upon which to base all other chronologies as is published and proclaimed by today's scholars in nearly all quarters." Ref-0186, p. 156. "Pertaining to the subject, Dr. Thiele candidly admits: "Every Assyriologist knows that Assyrian inscriptions are not always reliable in all details. The account given in one place may vary from that found in another place. An achievement of one king may be claimed by his successor. The specific details of a victory reported in one year may grow in magnitude and splendor in the reports of succeeding years. The fact that Sargon claimed to have captured Samaria does not prove that he did so." [Thiele, The Mysterious Numbers of the Hebrew Kings, op. cit., p. 137.] Is it not most incongruous that in light of so explicit an admission, the eminent Doctor along with nearly all modern scholars not only follows the Assyrian data to the near exclusion of all others, but wholeheartedly endorses its chronological implications allowing possible no more error than that of a single year? Does not this contradict all logic and common sense?" Ref-0186, p. 157. ". . . it is affirmed by most modern scholars that as the Assyrian Eponym List confirms the Assyrian part of the Canon of Ptolemy, the validity of the rest of the Canon should be accepted with complete confidence and trust. This may be true, but as Beecher and Anstey pointed out as far back as A.D. 1907 and 1913 respectively, wherever the Assyrian list of eponyms confirms the Assyrian part of the Canon of Ptolemy, it confirms also the Biblical record! Strangely, the world of scholarship seems unable to perceive this fact." Ref-0186, p. 158.

750), about six months before his death, assumed to be in spring B.C. 3." . . . Clinton wrote in ignorance of what Zumpt has since brought to light respecting the census of Quirinus. The introduction of this new element into the consideration of the question, enables us with absolute confidence, adopting Clinton's dictum, to assign the death of Herod to the month Adar of B.C. 3, and the nativity to the autumn of B.C. 4. That the least uncertainty should prevail respecting the time of an event of such transcendent interest to mankind is a fact of strange significance. But whatever doubt there may be as to the birth-date of the Son of God, it is due to no omission in the sacred page if equal doubt be felt as to the epoch of His ministry on earth. There is not in the whole of Scripture a more definite chronological statement than that contained in the opening verses of the third chapter of St. Luke. First, there is a direct reference to the restoration of the city (Ne. 2:3,5) and of the city gates and walls (Ne. 2:3,8). Second, Artaxerxes wrote a letter to Asaph to give materials to be used specifically for the walls (Dan. 2:8). Third, the Book of Nehemiah and Ezra 4:7-23 indicate that certainly the restoration of the walls was done in the most distressing circumstances, as predicted by Daniel (Dan. 9:25). Fourth, no later decrees were given by the Persian kings pertaining to the rebuilding of Jerusalem." Ref-0044, p. 126. "The actual rebuilding of the city was first carried out some decades later by the priest Ezra, the governor Nehemiah, and the prophet Malachi. Their activity set in with the decree of the Persian king Artaxerxes I Longimanus (Arthasastha), in the seventh year of his reign (465-424), regarding the political reorganization of Palestine, and therefore in the year 457 B.C. (Ezra 7:7,25). The beginning of Ezra's activity is thus the beginning of the seventy year-weeks. If we add to this year 457 the foretold sixty-nine year-weeks, that is 483 years, we come to the year 26/27 A.D., that is, to the exact year in which, according to Luke 3:1-2, shortly after John the Baptist, Christ began to proclaim the message of the heavenly kingdom." "A very interesting account of the reason for the 243-year shortfall between the Jewish calendar and Ussher's date was written by Floyd Nolen Jones and given in Appendix G of The Annals of the World by Ussher, pages 931-934. The Jewish people (of which I am one) obtained their current date from the Book of the Order of the World, the Seder Olam Rabbah, compiled by Rabbi Yose ben Halafta [died A.D. 160]. The main discrepancy was the 164 year period that was deliberately left out of the Persian Empire in order to make the Daniel 9:25 prophecy point to Simon bar Kokhba instead of Jesus of Nazareth. The prophecy of Daniel 9:25 so perfectly pointed to Christ that the only way to get around that prophecy was to change their national chronology. In Appendix G of Annals, Floyd Nolen Jones actually gives the year 2003 as being the Jewish year 5763. It's truly amazing what lengths people will go to in order to avoid the Saviour." The Birth of the Prince, and King only by right but not yet by enthronement over the "House of Jacob" was the ad quem. Such was the close of the 69 Weeks, or 483 years, in the year of the decree of Caesar Augustus to enroll the world, 30 years before the 15th regnal year of Tiberius, and according to our chronology A.U.C. 747, or 748, or 749; according to the Bible, A.D. 1." I am convinced that the latter position is correct and that Daniel's prayer for 'no procrastination' was answered immediately and was made effective in the 1st year of Cyrus. One of the arguments I set forth was the fact that the building of the city, the temple, the streets, etc. all commenced from this 1st year of Cyrus by the authorisation of one all-inclusive decree, and it was not necessary for there to be a further, separate decree 80-82 years later. ". . . the Babylon Chronicle for the years 605-595 BC, describes the fall of Jerusalem to Nebuchadnezzar in 597 BC, the so-called "second deportation," the first being in 605 B.C. when Daniel and his companions were taken to Babylon (Dan. 1:1-5). The tablet was found in Babylon and purchased by the British Museum in the 19th century. The section pertaining to the fall of Jerusalem reads, 'Year 7 [597 BC] in Kislew the king of Babylonia [Nebuchadnezzar] called out his army and marched to Hattu [the west]. He set his camp against the city of Judah and on the second Adar [March 16] he took the city and captured the king [Jehoiachin]. He appointed a king of his choosing there [Zedekiah], took heavy tribute and returned to Babylon' (Millard 1997:468). The Bible describes the same events in some detail. When Nebuchadnezzar besieged and captured Jerusalem in 597 BC, Jehoiachin was on the throne. He took Jehoiachin, the royal family and important men in the kingdom to Babylon. He then placed Jehoiachin's uncle, Mattaniah, on Judah's throne and changed his name to Zedekiah (2K. 24:11-17). Jehoiachin was a young man of 18 when he became king of Judah. He reigned but three months before being carried off to Babylon, where he lived out the rest of his days (2K. 24:8, 12, 15; 25:27-30). Four tablets found in Nebuchadnezzar's palace name Jehoiachin and his family as among those who were receiving rations from the king (Weidner 1939; Wiseman 1985:81-82)." Bryant G. chronology - B.C. 0606 - Daniel - 1st deportation to Babylon - Jones : Jer. 25:1; Dan. 1:1; Dan. 1:5; Dan. 1:18-20; Dan. 2:1 ☪ ". . . it is concluded that the data demands both an invasion and a deportation by Nebuchadnezzar in the year before that King began to reign, that is, the year prior to Carchemish. The fact is that Daniel Chapter two is contextually after the final testing of Daniel, and chapter one states that the examination took place during the third year of Daniel's deportation (Dan. 1:5,18). Furthermore, when this is compared to Jeremiah 25:1, which states that Nebuchadnezzar's first year of reign was Jehoiakim's fourth, it demands the conclusion that the third year of Daniel's deportation was the second year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign . . . It follows then that Daniel 1:1 does not conflict with Jeremiah 25:1 as is often claimed. Observe that Daniel 1:1 does not say that the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim is the first year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign. As illustrated, such would be impossible from the data in chapter one when compared to Dan. 2:1 which is said to occur in Nebuchadnezzar's second year of dominion. Moreover, Daniel 1:1 is merely a statement of identification, i.e., the Nebuchadnezzar who came and besieged Jerusalem in Jehoiakim's third year is the same man who became sole Rex the following year (Jer. 25:1)." The "army of Egypt" is surely the expeditionary force of Pharaoh Necho II (609-595), mentioned also in 2K. 23:29 and 2Chr. 35:21, which King Josiah tried vainly to oppose at Megiddo." Ref-0840, p. 252. "the problem arises over the . . . word "against" as rendered by the king james translators. the new king james version gives . . . "went to the aid of" . . . however, the old 1560 a.d. geneva bible along with all the old english translations prior to a.d. 1611 such as wycliffe's, coverdale's, matthew's, the great bible, the bishop bible, etc., as well as the american standard, and amplified are among those whose reading is "against" in agreement with the authorized king james bible. the highly touted new american standard compromises stating simply "pharaoh neco king of egypt went up to the king of assyria to the river euphrates" and thus one way or the other perverts the scripture. . . . this alteration in wording is not at all the result of a different translation of the hebrew word "?al". actually the hebrew text has been rejected by most scholars as corrupt. the change . . . is based totally upon a conjectured restoration of a portion of the historical records of babylon. thus, an alteration has been made in the biblical text based upon the assumption that some other nation's historical writings are correct, true and have no "scribal blunders" or mis-stated facts rather than the god-inspired hebrew scriptures. . . . the portion of the babylonian chronicles (chronicle 3:58-68) has been interpreted by albert kirk grayson such that 61f reads: 'fear of the enemy overcame ashur-uballit (ii) and the army of eg[gypt which] had come up [to help him] and they aban[doned] the city . . . ' . . . indeed, does 3:66-67 really state that the egyptian army united with ashur-uballit's assyrian forces against the babylonian army? when taken alone, the truthful reply must be declared as "no, they do not so state". wiseman underscores this fact in his work by adding a question mark with in the bracket, viz. "eg[gypt(?)]" . . . thus, taking account josephus' statement along with the aforementioned babylonian chronicle record, the ii kings 23:29 passage is seen to refer to neco's going up to join the beleaguered remnant of the assyrian army which had been driven out to only a small corner of the kingdom and thereby engage nabopolassar, the new possessor of the title "king of assyria", and his allies near carchemish on the euphrates and haran. keil and delitzsch acknowledge this as a viable solution . . . finally, it has been shown that there is no legitimate reason to reject either the hebrew or the babylonian accounts of this incident. the alternation of the hebrew text from "against" to "to the aid of" the king of assyria by the nkjv, niv, rsv, neb, etc. is totally unwarranted and unnecessary. the hebrew record must not be altered; and even more especially, it must not be so capriciously changed over the latest often mutilated or misunderstood archaeological discoveries, etc." ref-0186, p. 192-197. "As in most languages, Hebrew prepositions have a variety of possible meanings. At a time when the OT was the primary source for ancient Near Eastern history, the KJV of 2 Kings 23:29 translated the Hebrew preposition al as "against," although it can also mean "alongside of" or "on behalf of." Thus it appears that Pharaoh Neco went to fight "against" the king of Assyria but that Josiah interfered and was killed. The question arose, why would Josiah try to prevent someone from fighting his enemy, the king of Assyria? From the Babylonian Chronicles we learn that the Egyptian army had come to help the Assyrian king. Thus Neco had come not "against" him but alongside of or on behalf of him. Modern translations reflect this new understanding of Josiah's interference." H. L. Willmington, The Babylonian Chronicles, Ref-0850, p. 893.

The problem is that since Moses led Israel from Egypt following the death of the king from whom he fled (i.e. Rameses), the exodus would have had to occur under Merneptah. However, Merneptah claims to have attacked Israel in Canaan in his fifth year leaving only five years between the escape from Egypt until Israel was safely ensconced in Canaan. "The date of the Exodus can be accurately calculated since the Bible mentions in 1K. 6:1 that the fourth year of Solomon's reign was 'the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel had come out of the land of Egypt.' Surprisingly, there is scholarly agreement about the dates of Solomon's reign, placing his fourth year in the 960s BC. Subtracting 480 years takes us back to a date for the Exodus in the 1440s BC. Another Biblical reference used to date the Exodus is found in Judges, where Jephthah tells the Ammonites that Israel had been in the land for 300 years (Jdg. 11:26). Again, there is acceptance among the experts that Jephthah's victory over the Ammonites took place around 1100 BC. This would place the arrival of the Israelites in Canaan near 1400 BC, precisely 40 years after the Exodus." Mario Seiglie, "The Exodus Controversy", Ref-0066, 16.2 (2003), p. 38. There is! The Amarna Tablets (c.1400 B.C.) discovered in A.D. 1886 refer to an incursion by the "Habiru" during this very period which J.W. Jack declares is entomologically equatable with the Hebrews [J.W. Jack. The Date of the Exodus, (Edinburgh: 1925), pp. 119-141.] . . . Although not as compelling as the preceding, there is also an illusion [sic] to Israel in the Egyptian Monuments which is deserving of consideration. The black granite Merneptah Stele (Israel Stele) located in the Cairo Museum relates a triumphal account of Pharaoh Merneptah, 13th son and successor of Rameses II, who reigned about 1224-1214 B.C. Speaking of his conquest of Canaan in the spring of his fifth year, Merneptah says: 'Plundered is the Canaan with every evil. Carried off is Ascalon; Seized upon is Gezer; Yanoam is made as that which does not exist; Israel is laid waste, his seed is not; . . .' The current author is persuaded that a proper understanding of this inscription substantiates a 15th century Exodus. The fact that Merneptah refers to Israel by name as a nation bears witness that they have been in the land for an extended period of time prior to this invasion, certainly longer than the days of Merneptah's father, Rameses II." Ref-0186, pp. 53-54. "The . . . It almost certainly is not the oldest reference to the Israelites in Egyptian texts, which is the subject of a future paper now being written by the Egyptologist Charles Aling." Clyde E. There are to main periods which have been suggested as fitting best the evidence for this event -- one at the end of the Late Bronze Age I, and the other at the end of the Late Bronze Age II. A 13th-century date has been favored by most of the scholarly world, with either a low date of ca. 1220 B.C. (cf. Petrie 1911:53) or a high date of 1280 BC. (cf. Albright 1957:256). However, a 15th-century-BC date is preferred by other scholars. These scholars, too, hold either to a high date of ca. 1470 B.C. (cf. Bimson 1981: 135) or a low date of ca. 1445 B.C. (cf. Jack 1925: 199). I have opted for the 15th-century "low date," as modified to ca. 1450 B.C. by W. H. Shea (1982: 230-38). The dates found throughout my article are based on this date for the Exodus." chronology - bible - factors : 1K. 1:34; 1K. 16:21-22; 2K. 15:5; 1Chr. 23:1 Ref-0186 "1. There is evidence from Jewish writings that the New Year might be reckoned from the spring month of Nisan, and other evidence that it might be measured from the fall month of Tishri. An unbiased approach would consider both these options. 2. The field of Egyptology yields evidence that sovereigns, during their lifetime, occasionally invested their son with the royal office, thus forming a coregency. The years of the son's reign might be counted from the year he became coregent instead of from the first year of his sole reign. There is some prima facie evidence in the Scriptures for coregencies (1K. 1:34; 2K. 15:5; 1Chr. 23:1).

An inductive approach should consider the possibility of coregencies, and the possibility that the years of a king could be measured either from the beginning of a coregency or from the beginning of a sole reign. 3. The field of Egyptology demonstrates the existence of rival reigns -- reigns from which the years of the pharaohs cannot be added together because two pharaohs were ruling simultaneously from different capitals. Such a phenomenon is reported in the Bible for the reigns of Tibni and Omri (1K. 16:21-22). 4. Two ways existed for reckoning the first year of a king's reign -- whether that year was reckoned as year one of his reign, or whether it was reckoned as his "accession" or "zero" year. The two possibilities are called the non-accession and accession methods, respectively. Since there is evidence for both usages in the ancient Near East, a proper methodology that starts from observations should not rule out either possibility for the kings of Judah and Israel. 5. The final source of evidence for the inductive method would be the texts of Kings, Chronicles, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel that give chronological data for the kingdom period. These texts (in the MT) should be accepted as raw data (observations) unless they can be shown to be self-contradictory or contradictory to established external dates." Rodger C. ☪ “Let me say without hesitation that the areas of greatest strength and certainty are precisely those areas where in the past the greatest difficulties and uncertainties were found. These are in the period of the divided monarchy for which there are four separate chronological yardsticks, all seemingly at constant odds with each other and with the years of contemporary history. It was long felt that these seemingly contradictory lines of measurement must be in error--one giving the years of the kings of Judah, another the years of the rulers of Israel, a third the synchronistic years of Israel with Judah, and the fourth the synchronisms of Judah with Israel. . . . When the nature of biblical chronological yardsticks is once understood, the four instruments of measurement for the period of the divided monarchy are of the highest value in providing a sound chronology for the rulers involved. Like a jigsaw puzzle, these numbers fit together only at certain precise points and only in line with certain basic principles of chronological procedure.” Ref-0839, pp. 20-21 “This problem is made readily apparent when we sum the length of the reigns of the Kings of Israel beginning at the reign of Jeroboam (the son of Nebat), through its collapse in the ninth year of Hoshea . . . These reigns total 241 years, 7 months and 7 days. If we then total the length of the reigns of the Kings of Judah for the same period of reign, that is from Solomon’s son Rehoboam through the 6th year of Hezekiah (which was the 9th year of Hoshea, 2K. 18:10), we obtain 261 years as the length of the span -- a difference of nearly 20 years. . . . From the earliest works, there have been offered two, and only two, possible solutions to the paradox. Either: 1. The chronologist accepts Israel’s 241 plus years as the correct length of the period and adjusts off the nearly 20 years of Judah by assuming periods of co-regencies, whether the Scriptures actually say this to be the case or not. . . . 2. Or the chronologist accepts the 261 years as the length of this span of time by using Judah as the standard. He then “hangs” Israel from this standard, the 241 years being “stretched” by the insertion or addition of a period of years for one or more interregna. . . . As is true in the instances concerning the six to eight co-regencies proposed by various proponents who have accepted Israel as the criterion from which to work, no actual mention of the term “interregnum” appears in the Holy Writ.” Ref-0186, p. 115.

All of Ezekiel’s dates are referenced to the year of Jehoiachin’s deportation (the second, the first having been in 606 when Daniel etc. were carried away, Dan. 1:1-6) which took place in B.C. 597. This historical happening is designated Scripturally as “the captivity” (Eze. 1:2; cp. 33:21). That is, Ezekiel’s date are all referenced to the year of “the captivity” (Zedekiah’s accession year), not from Zedekiah’s official regnal years. (Cp. Eze. 1:1-2; 40:1 and 33:21 with 32:1 and note the “12th” year which cannot be Zedekiah’s as, according to 2K. 24:18, he reigned only 11 years.). The year labeled “the captivity” is one year preceding Zedekiah’s regnal years. chronology - factors : ☪ “In working out the chronology of a nation, a primary requisite is that the chronological procedure of that nation be understood. The following items must be definitely established: (1) the year from which a king began to count the years of his reign--whether from the time of his actual accession, from the following year, or from some other time; (2) the time of the calendar year when a king began to count his reign; (3) the method according to which a scribe of one nation reckoned the years of a king of a neighboring state, whether according to the system used in his nation or according to that of the neighbor; (4) whether or not the nation made use of coregencies, whether or not several rival rulers might have been reigning at the same time, and whether interregna occurred; (5) whether during the period under review a uniform system was followed, or whether variations took place; and, finally, (6) some absolute date during the period in question from which the years can be figured backward and forward so that the full chronological pattern might be secured.” Ref-0839, p. 43. “The vital question concerning the chronological scheme set forth in these pages is whether or not it is the true arrangement of reigns of the Hebrew kings. . . . At the least this research shows that such a restoration is possible. However, we must accept the premise of an original reckoning of reigns in Israel according to the nonaccession-year system with a later shift to the accession-year method; of the early use in Judah of accession-year reckoning, a shift to the nonaccession-year system, and then a return to the original accession-year method; of the need to begin the regnal year in Israel with Nisan and with Tishri in Judah; of the existence of a number of coregencies, and of the fact that at some late date--long after the original records of the kings had been set in order and when the true arrangement of the reigns had been forgotten--certain synchronisms in 2 Kings 17 and 18 were introduced by some late hand twelve years out of harmony with the original pattern of reigns. When all this is understood, we see that it is possible to set forth an arrangement of reigns for the Hebrew kings in which there are both internal harmony and agreement with contemporary history.” Ref-0839, p. 205.

It will be noticed that none of Josephus' variations is the same as any in the Septuagint. . . . None of the variations of Josephus is an improvement over any datum in the Masoretic Text. The inaccuracy of his pattern is proved by its divergence from the years of contemporary chronology all the way along the line." Ref-0839, pp. 210-211.

chronology - kings - accession year : ☪ "Customarily, the kings of Judah used accession dating while those of Israel most often chose the non-accession method. Judah adopted the non-accession method when Jehoshaphat's son, Jehoram, married Athaliah, whose parents were Ahab, the wicked King of Israel, and Jezebel, the depraved Sidonian princess. When Athaliah's influence was broken, Judah returned to the accession method." Ref-0186, p. 135.

This latter statement becomes most important in fixing regnal years. If these three be prudently heeded it will be found that there was not a single interregnum during the entire span of the Kingdom of Judah's existence, only one co-regency -- that being Jehoram with his father Jehoshaphat as the Text clearly relates (2K. 8:16) -- and three short pro-rex periods (Jehoram before becoming co-rex, Ahaziah, and Jotham)." Ref-0186, p. 137. ". . . it must be acknowledged that some would also claim a co-regency (hence an overlap) for Uzziah and his son Jotham (2Chr. 26:21). However, a most careful examination of the wording in these Scriptures discloses otherwise, i.e.: Jotham "Began to reign" verses "was over the kings house, governing the people". The marked contrast between the two statements reveals that Jotham held only a pro-rex post at this time as 2Chr. 36:23 confirms . . . This verse unmistakably states that Jotham did not begin to "reign" until his father died, hence he did not bear the title of "King" when Uzziah became a leper." Ref-0186, p. 140.

way of contrast, the books of Jeremiah, Haggai, Zechariah, Kings, and Chronicles -- having been composed from within the land of Israel -- all use Nisan years for regnal dating Hebrew monarchs as well as for the kings of Babylon and Persia. Thus when Daniel was living in Babylon or Persia and was Prime Minister, his writing reflected their fall (Tishri) dating method whereas Jeremiah, who was living in Jerusalem, used the Spring (Nisan) method. Therefore, a king's first regnal year using one method could be his second year by the other method. However, no error or contradiction would actually exist." Ref-0186, p. 129. ". . . with the exception of the final Monarch of the Kingdom of Israel, Hoshea. chronology - kings - regnal years - Tishri :

Ne. 1:1; Ne. 2:1 ☪ "Moreover, the encountered inconsistencies in the Hebrew Text follow a clear pattern which, when taken into consideration, will allow the chronology to successfully synchronize all the data. This pattern may be seen in that the Biblical authors who were writing from outside the land of Israel, such as Daniel, Ezra, and Nehemiah referenced the regnal years differently from those writing from inside the land during the same period. An example of this is evidenced by Nehemiah's speaking of his being at the Persian palace at Shushan (Susa) in the month of Chisleu (the Hebrew 9th month, about December) in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes. He goes on to record that the month of Nisan (spring) that followed was still in the same twentieth year of that selfsame Persian Monarch; thus he is referencing by Tishri reckoning for the month of Nisan following the Chisleu of the twentieth year which would have been the twenty-first year if Nisan-to-Nisan counting had been invoked (Ne. 1:1, cp. 2:1). Of course, it is also possible that Nehemiah so wrote because the Persians actually did use that Tishri-to-Tishri procedure. This is confirmed by a double-dated papyri written during the same century as Nehemiah by the Jews of Elephantine. On the papyri the reigns of the Persian kings were dated by the Tishri-to-Tishri method." Ref-0186, pp. 128-129.

After twelve years of examining numerous arguments, date placement, regnal data, ancient inscriptions, royal annals, eclipse calculations etc., this researcher has concluded that any such assignment is not realistic of any chronology of prolonged duration. . . . It must be remembered that chronology is a branch of historical science; hence, it is constantly subject to revision." Ref-0186, p. 21. "The fact that [the application of the 390 years of Eze. 4:5-9] from a contextual standpoint was not understood as defining exactly the same boundaries by all of these dedicated Biblically conservative men serves to underscore that which has been formerly mentioned, namely, the limitations involved in such an undertaking as computing a chronology of the Old Testament." church - activities - distraction : ☪ + "To bridge the gap with those outside, Sandfields for some years had maintained various activities, including football, musical evenings, a dramatic society, and a 'Brotherhood' on Saturday nights, although with small success, as we have seen. At Dr. Lloyd-Jones' induction, the former pastor, T. J. Lewis, after referring to the fact that he had been unable to reverse the non-church going habit, advised the newcomer that 'he used to go into the streets round about their church and found he could always minister to about six times as many people as he had in his church'. There were others in Sandfields who seemed to think that the best hope lay in the area of children's work: 'Our work amongst the children is capable of great expansion,' E. T. Rees reported to the Forward Movement headquarters in 1926: 'If we had the teachers, a Sunday School of 500 juniors would be obtained within a month.' In the event, Dr. Lloyd-Jones had nothing to say about any new programme. To the surprise of the church secretary he seemed to be exclusively interested in the purely 'traditional' part of church life, which consisted of the regular Sunday Services . . . , a prayer meeting on Mondays and a mid-week meeting on Wednesdays. Everything else could go, and thus those activities particularly designed to attract the outsiders soon came to an end. The demise of the dramatic society posed a practical problem, namely what to do with the wooden stage which occupied a part of the church hall? 'You can heat the church with it,' the new minister told the Committee." Ref-0933, pp. 134-135.

church - attendance - decline : ☪ + "The Forward Mission church building at Sandfields, opened in the year that the First World War broke out, with seating for 400, only had some 70 seats occupied on Sunday mornings, with rather more at night. In Calvinistic Methodism as a whole, with 1,497 churches, an increase of only 353 people was reported in 1926, with Sunday School attendance falling in the same period by 1,169. Throughout much of Britain conditions were similar. In 1925 the Wesleyan Methodists and the Congregationalists both reported losses in Sunday School attendance of well over 100,000 since 1905, the Wesleyans losing 14,000 in 1924-25 alone. It was no wonder, then, that such subjects as 'The Lost Confidence of Nonconformity' often occupied the correspondence columns of The British Weekly. Reactions to this situation were manifold. A number in Nonconformity sought to arrest the drift by a change in church services. There were those, for instance, who, critical of the plainness of congregational worship, looked for some kind of liturgy, with choir, anthem, and organ given a major role. Others, believing that people would not come to church 'to be preached at', wished to turn the sermon into an address 'relevant' to the time, or into an essay replete with many allusions to authors, poets and novelists." Ref-0933, pp. 132-133. "People complain about the dwindling congregations and how the churches are going down. Why are people ceasing to attend places of worship? Why is it, that last Sunday night I noticed that, while the places of worship in Cardiff were only sparsely attended, the trains coming from Porthcawl and other sea-side places were packed out. Why did these people spend their day at the seaside and in other places rather than in the House of God worshipping? Well, the answer is perfectly plain. They obviously prefer to be at the sea-side and feel that they get more benefit there than they do in their chapels or churches. . . . What I feel like saying to these trippers is this: If you honestly believe . . . that you derived greater benefit by spending your day in the country than you do by attending a place of worship, well then, go to the country. Don't come here if you honestly feel that you could do better elsewhere. Unless you feel that something is being offered and given to you here which no other institution can offer or equal, well then, in the name of Heaven, go out into the country or to the sea-side. The church of Christ is a church of believers, an association of people banded together by a common belief and a common love. You don't believe? Well, above all, do not pretend that you do, go to the country and the sea side. All I ask of you is, be consistent. When someone dies in your family, do not come to ask the church in which you do not believe to come to bury him. Go to the sea-side for consolation. . . ." Ref-0933, p. 138. "Instead, however, we provide so called "sporting parsons", men of whom the world can say that they are "good sports" -- whatever that may mean. And what it does so often mean is that they are men who believe that you can get men to come to chapel and church by playing football and other games with them. "I'll fraternise with these men," says the minister. "I'll get them to like me and to see that I'm not so different from them after all, and then they'll come to listen to my sermons." And he tries it, but thank God, he almost invariably fails, as he richly deserves. The man who only comes to church or chapel because he likes the minister as a man is of no value at all, and the minister who attempts to get men there by means of that subterfuge is for the time being guilty of lowering the standard of the truth which he claims to believe. For this gospel is the gospel of salvation propounded by the Son of God himself. We must not hawk it about the world, or offer special inducements and attractions, as if we were shopkeepers announcing an exception bargain sale. . . ." Ref-0933, p. 142. "The modern church was bypassing her primary need. She was adopting 'methods of big business and advertising' instead of praying for a visitation of God. As the Belfast press reported his words: 'The Church has never tried so hard to deal with the situation as she has tried in this century. We have never had so many organizations, we have never worked so hard, but we are not touching the situation.'" Martyn Lloyd-Jones, Ref-0935, p. 371.

To obey God may very well threaten our ministry, our security, our hopes and dreams, not to mention wreaking havoc and strife among the people we love and have devoted our lives to serve. But to disobey God due to our fears and apprehensions is to dishonor Him and abandon the field of spiritual warfare at precisely the wrong moment. . . . Many a pastor has found himself marginalized, or even removed from his ministry, for daring to obey the Word in relation to a family member of a well-connected church leader." Gary Gilley, Ref-1217, pp. 211,218. ". . . people often wonder whether it is scriptural to critique the public and published works (books, sermons, etc.), of another believer without first approaching that believer on the basis of Matthew 18:15-20 and Galatians 6:1-4. Some find it quite offensive for believers to be examining publicly the writings and statements of another believer. They consider this a personal attack. What is often missed is that there is a vast difference between private/personal sin and public sine including false teaching which is offered to the church at large. In the case of the former, the Lord wants us to go privately to the individual first (as the passages above command) to attempt to resolve the differences and/or confront sin and restore that individual. In the case of public sin and/or false teaching, that sin must be addressed publicly. I believe the principle is that the sin is to be addressed within the sphere of knowledge. Paul, for example, rebuked Peter publicly in Galatians 2 because his sin was known to all. Jesus, similarly, did not take Peter aside when the Lord called him "Satan" and told him to get behind Him. The reason is clear; Peter's sin was not a private one, but heard by the other disciples.

"As a side note, I am sometimes asked if I have spoken to those whose works and views I critique. The answer is that, I have often made attempts to do so but rarely have ever received a response. It should be remembered that many of these authors and leaders have attained mega-star status and are virtually unapproachable by normal people. They receive hundreds, maybe thousands of e-mails, letters and messages daily. They are often removed beyond the bounds of private interaction." Gary Gilley, Ref-1217, pp. 221-222.

☺ + "First it is important to point out that the words "separation of church and state" are not found anywhere in the US Constitution, the Bill of Rights, or even the Declaration of Independence. That phrase comes from a letter written by Thomas Jefferson to the Danbury Baptist Association. The "wall of separation between church and state" that Jefferson referred to in his letter was clearly meant to protect religious freedom and prevent government from attempting to take away our God-given unalienable rights. So how did the phrase "separation of church and state" become a part of our vocabulary? On June 25, 1962 in Engel vs. Vitale the US Supreme Court used the "separation of church and state" argument as its basis for banning prayer in public schools. Their decision marked the turning point in the interpretation of the First Amendment. The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment reads, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." In 1962 the US Supreme Court ignored 170 years of history, legal precedent, and the clear intent of First Amendment, by interpreting that amendment to prohibit religious activities in public settings. The 1962 ruling was the first case in Supreme Court history that did not cite any previous precedents or legal cases in making its decision. Within a year of the court's ruling

Bible reading, religious classes, and religious instruction in public schools were also declared unconstitutional. "The Doctrine of Judicial Oligarchy," K-House eNews, April 26, 2005. "To this day in Canada, questions linking education and religion remain matters of public debate. More Canadians than Americans have acknowledged that education is never value-neutral and more have been willing to grant provincial funding for schools desired by children's parents, even if the schools are religious." Ref-0958, pp. 259-260. "Reliance on Jefferson's letter to the Danbury Baptist Association is equally flawed, being both misplaced, and grossly misinterpreted. As Justice Rehnquist aptly pointed out in the dissenting opinion in Wallace vs. Jaffree, Jefferson and his letter are "a less than ideal source . . . as to the meaning of the Religion Clauses" first, because Jefferson was in France during the writing and passage of the Amendment and, thus, entirely uninvolved in [the] process and, second, because the letter itself was written 14 years after the Establishment Clause was enacted. . . . Thomas Jefferson himself, as President, negotiated and received Senate approval for a treaty with the Kaskaskia Indians which provided for the support of a Catholic priest, and the building of a church, both maintained through Federal funds." Rachael J. Denhollander, "Restoring the Foundations", Ref-0784, 25(1) 2011, 104:110, p. 106. "James Madison, the Founding Father who drafted, proposed, and debated the First Amendment unequivocally stated that the meaning of the Establishment Clause was that "Congress should not establish a religion and enforce the legal observation of it by law, nor compel men to worship God in any manner contrary to their conscience." He further explained that the Amendment was in response to concerns expressed during state conventions to ratify the Constitution that Congress might rely on the Necessary and Proper Clause to establish a national religion." Rachael J. Denhollander, "Restoring the Foundations", Ref-0784, 25(1) 2011, 104:110, p. 108.

Well then, you ask, why are the church members, why do they pretend to believe? The answer is, that they are afraid to be honest with themselves, afraid of what their parents and friends would say of them if they got up and said that they couldn't honestly say that Christ meant anything to them. I do not know what your experience is, my friends, but as for myself, I shall feel much more ashamed to all eternity for the occasions on which I say that I believed in Christ when in fact I did not, than for the occasions when I said honestly that I could not truthfully say that I did believe. If the church of Christ on earth could but get rid of the parasites who only believe that they ought to believe in Christ, she would, I am certain, count once more in the world as she did in her early days, and as she has always done during times of spiritual awakening. I ask you therefore tonight, and shall go on asking you and myself, the same question. Do you know what you know about the gospel? Do you question yourself about your belief and make sure of yourself?" Ref-0933, pp. 136-137. "The discussion of that April Friday evening in 1944, and Mary-Carson's contribution to it, merited more space . . . The question proposed was 'How can we again fill the galleries?' and the course of the discussion which ensued soon revealed that there were a number who had more sympathy with what Westminster had been in former days and who doubted whether the plain services now established, with forty-five minute (or longer) sermons and not even an organ voluntary, would ever bring back the numbers which once crowded the building. In later years Mary-Carson saw more fully the significance of the differences expressed that evening and recalled, "The question was admitted for discussion, and members of the group began making suggestions along the lines of more music, livelier music, special musical numbers, shorter sermons, sermons not so deep, more variety in the services, etc. I was listening to all this with mounting consternation, and when, in response to the idea that the church members could help fill the galleries by inviting others to the services, someone said that such invited visitors would not return a second time if they did not enjoy the service, I was finally constrained to raise my hand and request the floor. I do not recall my exact words, but I presented myself as one who had come among them as a stranger, had come a second time, like everything I saw and heard, and was obviously continuing to come. I said that for my part, no changes whatsoever were needed to keep me coming. Dr. L-J smilingly thanked me for 'the first kind words I've heard this evening!' He then rose and asked the group what they would say if he told them he knew a way to ensure that every seat in the Chapel would be filled on the following Lord's Day. He assured them that he did, in fact, know how this could be accomplished. 'Tell us, tell us!', they said, and 'Let's do it!'. 'It's very simple', he said. 'Simply put a notice in the Saturday edition of The Times that I shall appear in the pulpit the next day wearing a bathing costume!'. This was followed, of course, by a period of shocked silence. He then went on to expound the biblical basis for proper worship, using as counterpoint the error, then just beginning to be prevalent, of introduction various forms of entertainment into the worship service as a means of enticing people to attend.'" circumcision - Timothy : Acts 16:3; 1Cor. 9:20 ☪ Although circumcision is not obligatory for Gentiles (Acts 15), Timothy having a Jewish mother (Acts 16:1) was circumcised in accordance with the Abrahamic covenant so as not to inhibit his ministry among the Jews. Notice in the very next verse (Acts 16:4) they are issuing the apostolic decree of the Jerusalem council which stated that circumcision of Gentiles for purposes of keeping the law for salvation was unnecessary. Here we see that Timothy was circumcised because of his Jewish background and in order to avoid inhibiting the spread of the gospel among Jewish non-believers. Unlike the Mosaic Covenant, the Abrahamic Covenant is permanent and so circumcision of Jewish males is not abrogated.

Colossians - written to : Col. 1:1; Col. 4:16 ☉ “the status of this ‘letter from Laodicea’ is not quite clear to the reader today. . . Was it a letter originating from Laodicea, or was it a letter sent by Paul to the Laodicean church, which the Colossians were to procure ‘from Laodicea’? The latter is more probable. If the reference is to a letter composed by Paul, have we any other information about it? From time to time it has been identified with what we know as the epistle to the Ephesians (the oldest form of which seems to contain no indication of the addressees’ whereabouts or identity).” Ref-0073, pp. 237-238

Columbus - Christopher - evangelization : ☉ + “Columbus’s very first entry in the diary that recorded his journey to America in 1492 expressed the hope that he could make contact with the native peoples in order to find out “the manner in which may be undertaken their conversion to our Holy Faith.” On his second journey in 1493 Columbus took with him Catholic friars whom he hoped could convert the Indians that he had seen on the first voyage. To the Spanish monarchs, Columbus insisted that profits from his voyages be used to restore Christian control over Jerusalem. And he had a very high sense of divine calling. In a lengthy manuscript penned after his third voyage, A Book of Prophecies, Columbus recorded the many passages from Scripture that he felt related to his mission to the East Indies: “neither reason nor mathematics,” he wrote in his manuscript, “nor world maps were profitable to me; rather the prophecy of Isaiah was completely fulfilled” (i.e., Isa. 46:11 -- “the man that executeth my counsel from a far country”).” Ref-0958, pp. 11-12.

Columbus - Christopher - Jewish? : ☉ + “There is circumstantial evidence, but no absolute proof, that Christopher Columbus was himself a marrano. . . he was born in Genoa of Spanish parents and that ‘Colombo’ and its variants ‘Palombo’ and ‘Golomb’ are Jewish names. In addition, Columbus placed a strange cipher at the top of all his letters, and enjoined his sone always to do the same. This cipher bears a strong resemblance to the Hebrew initials for ‘In God’s name,’ with which religious Jews would always preface a document. . . It is also known that Columbus mixed with Jews and marranos; that his expeditions were funded by marranos; and that he took several ‘New Christians’ on his voyages. . .” Ref-0152, p. 79.

Corinthian - epistle : 1Cor. 5:9 ☉ "There are two possibilities for identifying the book to which Paul refers with an existing book of the Bible. First, he may be referring to part of the present 2 Corinthians (e.g., chapters 10-13), which was put together with another part of his Corinthian correspondence at a later time. Second Corinthians chapters 1-9 is definitely different in tone from the rest of the present book (chapters 10-13), which could indicate that it was originally written on a different occasion. Second, there is also the possibility that Paul is referring to the present 1 Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 5:9, that is, to the very book he was then writing. It is true that he uses the aorist tense here, which could be translated 'I wrote,' thus identifying some previous letter. But the aorist tense could refer to the book at hand. Such a device is called an 'epistolary aorist,' because it refers to the very epistle in which it is being used. . . Hence, Paul could be saying something like this: 'I am now decisively writing to you.'" Ref-0075, pp. 215-216

Corinthians - carnal : 1Cor. 1:1; 2Cor. 1:1 ☪
 "The Church in Corinth was one of the most carnal churches of the first century world of which we have record. In this Church, there existed Christians following men instead of Christ (1 Corinthians 1:10-17), worldly wisdom (1:18-2:16), divisions (chapter 3), sexual immorality (chapters 6), incest (chapter 5), lawsuits among believers (chapter 6), drunkenness at the Lord's table (chapter 11), misuse of spiritual gifts (chapters 12-14) and false doctrine that included a denial of the resurrection (chapter 15)." cosmic microwave background radiation :
 ☪ + "The cosmic microwave background radiation (CMBR) is widely touted as the definitive proof of the big-bang model, but this is not necessarily so. In 1926, Sir Arthur Eddington argued that because everything is constantly bathed in distant starlight, interstellar space would have a black body temperature of about 3 degrees kelvin (3 K). George Gamow predicted that the afterglow of the big bang would be 5 K, which he revised upward to 50 K in 1961. The CMBR was measured in 1964 by Penzias and Wilson to be 2.7 K. So, is Penzias and Wilson's result a confirmation of the Eddington prediction or the Gamow prediction? We suggest it confirms the Eddington prediction, but big bangers have shouted louder, adjusted their model, and taken it as their own." Ref-0814, p. 127.

counsel - by Scripture : Ex. 18:16 ☪ "He [Lloyd-Jones] views this confusion of spiritual with psychological as serious because the psychological and the biblical approach towards helping an individual are fundamentally different. Psychology teaches a person how to look within and how to analyse one's mind and motives. It assumes that the primary need is to possess a knowledge of oneself. According to Scripture this is entirely ineffective in dealing with spiritual problems because the starting point has to be knowledge about God. The only practical way to provide help for the individual is, therefore, by means of teaching or doctrine, and because that teaching is the same for all he regarded the whole idea that every person needs a spiritual advisor as entirely fallacious." counsel - woman by lone man - danger : ☪ + "A pastor should also be cautious not to rescue the wrong "damsel in distress." The gesture can be quite flattering to his deserving wife, but an emotional "rescue" from a pastor in a counseling (or other) setting of a vulnerable and/or carnal woman can lead to inappropriate attachments, attraction, and eventual moral failure. Whenever a woman, without her husband present, requires or even requests help or support from a pastor, the pastor's wife or another counselor should be present and actively involved. It is never the role of a pastor to meet the emotional needs of a woman aside from those of his own wife. Women, especially those who do not have a fulfilling marriage, can become emotionally attached to a pastor or other church leaders." Charlene Pelfrey, Ref-1217, p. 263.

covenant - Abrahamic - distinct from Mosaic : Deu. 5:2-3; Rom. 4:13-16; Gal. 3:17-19 ☪
 "The Mosaic covenant reaches its summit in the Crucifixion (Gal. 2:19-20; 3:13), the Abrahamic covenant in the Resurrection (Heb. 11:19; Rom. 4:17,19,23-25). But they both belong together. For the sinner is to be redeemed, and to this end renewal and new birth are needful. But the new birth has man's conversion as a presupposition, and conversion is twofold; a turning from and a turning to, a NO to oneself, and a YES to God, or, as the New Testament puts it, Repentance and Faith." Ref-0197, p. 122. In Deuteronomy 5:2, Moses distinguishes the covenant at Sinai ("made with us") from the Abrahamic covenant ("made with our fathers").

In Gal. 3:20 Paul appears to be emphasizing the contrast between a man-made covenant (which mediates between two parties) and the Abrahamic covenant which Abraham did not participate in. Unlike the giving of the Mosaic Law where Moses mediated between God and the Israelites, with the Abrahamic covenant God was both the promise-giver and the mediator.

covenant - Adamic? : Hos. 6:7 ☉ + An Adamic covenant might be in view in Hos. 6:7 if "men" should be rendered by the transliteration "Adam." Or the passage may merely be comparing the disobedience of Adam with Israel's disobedience to her covenant. "How can one criticize the covenants of redemption, works, and grace as being unbiblical and artificial when one refers likewise to, for example, an Adamic covenant and an Edenic covenant, when nothing is ever so called in Scripture?" Christopher Cone, Hermeneutical Ramifications of Applying the New Covenant to the Church: An Appeal to Consistency, Ref-0785, 5:24, p. 9. "Though Hosea 6:7 may be best understood to reference Adam directly (it could reference men in general, as in the KJV), the passage references the severity of offense by way of analogy and does not provide explicit evidence that God made a covenant with Adam. If one were to affirm that such a covenant was made, there would be difficulty in demonstrating that location and content with specificity." In other words, it is important to understand that the Abrahamic covenant finds its fulfillment in the new covenant, notwithstanding the intervening, temporal Mosaic covenant. The Abrahamic covenant promised the land, and the intervening Mosaic covenant involved temporal association with the land, yet the new covenant declares consummate fulfillment of that promise to Abraham with its specific references to the land, and not some extrapolated abstract universalism. In particular, the new covenant describes Israel's return to the land from dispersion as "the land that I gave to your forefathers" (Jer. 31:38-40; Ezek 11:17; 36:24,28)." Ref-1263, p. 226

Ref-1263, p. 224 "Preaching during 1964-5, prior to the 1967 Six Day War, he was repetitive in this vein, even denying any relationship in this passage to the Second Coming. But one wonders if there was an adjustment in perspective by 1980, shortly before his passing in 1981. He said when interviewed by Carl Henry for Christianity Today, "To me 1967, the year that the Jews occupied all of Jerusalem, was very crucial. Luke 21:43 is one of the most significant prophetic verses: 'Jerusalem,' it reads, 'shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled.' It seems to me that that took place in 1967--something crucially important that had not occurred in 2,000 years. Luke 21:43 is one fixed point. But I am equally impressed by Romans 11 which speaks of a great spiritual return among the Jews before the end time. While this seems to be developing, even something even more spectacular may be indicated." Ref-1263, p. 224n4 "Arguing from the absence of the term "land" in Roman 9-11 is a dubious argument from silence. One might just as well argue against the validity of repentance from the absence of the term in the Gospel of John, or against the importance of love from the term's absence in the Acts of the Apostles. To suggest that though boldly confessing, "I too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin" (Rom. 11:1), the apostle still disavows any attachment to the land is ludicrous." Practically every one of the Major and Minor prophets mention in some form the hope of future possession of the land. All of them were written after Solomon's day. . . The original promises of the land involved (1) possession of the land, (2) permanent possession, (3) and occupying the land. Even in Solomon's day at the height of his kingdom the land was not all possessed. At best it was placed under tribute as. . . [1K. 4:21] indicates. Certainly all must agree that possession was not permanent. Further at no time was all the land actually occupied by Israel." Ref-0081, pp. 178-179. An example which ignores this obvious problem and asserts fulfillment is: "Joshua 21:43-45 explicitly declares that all the land that God promised Israel was given to them. . . God fulfilled the promises He made to Abraham." Ref-0189, p. 27. Some have interpreted

'permanent occupation' of the land to be fulfilled by the bones of the Patriarch which are buried there -- which hardly does justice to the character of God. Also -- if the promiser were fulfilled during Solomon's reign as some suppose, then why do post-Solomonic prophets expound it to be yet future? "several of these restoration passages speak of a restoration in which the ten tribes of the north are reunited with the two tribes of the south (la. 11:12; Jer. 3:18; 23:5-8; 31:27; Eze. 37:15-23; Hos. 1:11; Zec. 10:6), and this did not happen under the three previous returns from exile (Kaiser 1992: 105-07; idem 1998: 2016; Jelinek 1998: 242)." Ref-0697, p. 107. See especially Ref-0697, pp. 107-109. Hebrews 4:8 implies that promises associated with the land were not fulfilled in the days of Joshua. "Additionally, Kaiser brings a formidable challenge: 'While the sheer multiplicity of texts from almost every one of the prophets is staggering, a few evangelicals insist that this pledge to restore Israel to her land was fulfilled when Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah led their respective returns from the Babylonian Exile. But if the postexilic returns to the land fulfilled this promised restoration predicted by the prophets, why then did Zechariah continue to announce a still future return (Zec. 10:8-12) in words that were peppered with the phrases and formulas of such prophecies as Isaiah 11:11 and Jeremiah 50:19?" "Genesis 15:21 mentions the Canaanites and the Jebusites among the peoples whose lands the Israelites would possess. According to the OT, the Israelites did not fully possess the lands of the Canaanites and Jebusites during the lifetime of Joshua. Joshua himself interpreted the Genesis 15 promise as requiring the driving out of all these inhabitants (Josh 3:10). Judges 1:21 reveals that such did not happen prior to Joshua's death. Indeed, the Israelites continued to live in the midst of all the peoples God listed in Genesis 15 (see Judg 3:5). It wasn't until the time of David that the Jebusites were finally evicted from their stronghold at Zion (2 Sam 5:7-9). Though the Levites and Ezra in Heh. 9:8 seem to state that God had fulfilled the promise made to Abraham in Gen. 15:18-21, the context and the remainder of Scripture must be brought to bear on that statement." William D. Barrick, "New Covenant Theology and the Old Testament Covenants", Ref-0164, Volume 18 Number 2 Fall 2007, 165:180, p. 172. "There are four different attitudes toward these prophetic announcements concerning the return of Israel to Palestine. One is that these prophecies were all fulfilled in the return of the Jews under Ezra and subsequent decades. This, however, is contradicted by three facts: The Jews that returned under Ezra, and later leaders, did not come from the four quarters of the earth an from all the nations of the earth, but only from Babylon and Persia. Isaiah 11:11 speaks clearly of a return that is designated as a second one, and there has been no second one up to this century. Finally, the passages we have been discussing which predict a return insist that when this takes place, Israel will be planted in the land forever. She was not so planted with the return under Ezra. Another theory proposed is that God is through with Israel and that in her rejection of Christ she forfeited all expectations of being specially dealt with by the Lord at any future time. The answer to this is that Israel's apostasy and disobedience are foreseen by the very prophets who also speak of a time to come when Israel will turn from disobedience and accept her Messiah. A third theory is that these prophecies are fulfilled in the history of the church. This principle of interpretation is called spiritualizing and leads to a chaotic, confused suggestion as to what these phrases mean when they speak of the land and Jerusalem and agricultural richness, and especially the reign of David their king over Jerusalem. The church is not a body of people originally belonging to God and now being brought back to him, but is made up of lost sinners. They never knew God and are brought out of their spiritual death to newness of life. This newness of life can never be identified with a migration to Palestine." Ref-1163, pp. 38-39. "I believe that the sons of Abraham are to re-inherit Palestine, and that the forfeited fertility will yet return to that land; that the wilderness and the solitary places shall be glad for them, and the desert will rejoice and blossom as the rose. [H. Bonar, "The Jew," The Quarterly Journal of Prophecy (July, 1870): 211]" Ref-1263, p. 10. "That the land of Israel has distinct eschatological importance is indicated by [Jonathan] Edwards' consideration of its strategic location: . . . "And it is the more evident, that the Jews will return to their own land again, because they never have yet possessed one quarter of that land, which was so often promised them, from the Red Sea to the river Euphrates (Exod. 23:31; Gen. 15:18; Deut. 11:24; Josh. 1:4). Indeed, it was partly fulfilled in Solomon's time, when he governed all within those bounds for a short time; but so short, that it is not to be thought that this is all the fulfillment of the promise that is to be. And besides, that was not a fulfillment of the promise, because they did not possess it, though they made the nations of it tributary." Ref-1263, p. 336

To me at least, the language of Luke 22:2, made as it was with those who were to become "foundations" of the church (see Eph.2:20), and repeated imperturbably by Paul in I Corinthians 11:25; when taken with the argument in Hebrews, decisively shows that Jesus, "the Mediator of the New Covenant", made the New Covenant with the Church! If one is expecting to find that truth in Jeremiah or Ezekiel then one is not a dispensationalist. Those prophets did not envisage "the Body of Christ" so they did not write about the relationship of the New Covenant to the Church. Does this necessitate two separate new covenants? No indeed! It means only that the same new covenant was given to the Church as shall be given to Israel. The New Covenant promises to Israel are not the New Covenant promises to the Church. . . . That the Church does bear a relationship to the Abrahamic Covenant is certain. Paul, in fact, shows this by quoting Genesis 12:3 ("in you [Abram] all the families of the earth will be blessed") in Galatians 3:8, using it as a basis for his doctrine of our justification! But if the Church is related to the Abrahamic Covenant (at least via Gen. 12:3), how does the Church gain access to this promise? There is no mechanism within the Abrahamic Covenant that can deliver its provisions to the rightful recipients, whether Israel or the Church. And that is where the New Covenant comes in! . . . We ought not to speak of the New Covenant as revealed in the OT as possessing discrete blessings which are absent from the Abrahamic Covenant. There simply is no way into those blessings without the New Covenant. And it is the same for the Church. The same New Covenant is needed for the Church to enter into its blessings (e.g. Gal. 3:6-9)." Paul Henebury, More Thoughts About Biblical Covenants, Vox Veritatus, November 2010, Issue 11. See covenant - new - with Israel.

Other fathers who also proclaim the newness of the New Covenant include Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Augustine. covenant - new - with Israel : Gen. 12:3; Jer. 31:31; 2Cor. 3:6 ☪ "To say that "Church saints have a covenantal relationship with God" by way of the new covenant demands either that one identify a passage in which God directly made a new covenant (and consequently an old one) with the church or that one relinquishes the superiority of consistency in applying literal grammatical-historical hermeneutics . . ." Christopher Cone, Hermeneutical Ramifications of Applying the New Covenant to the Church: An Appeal to Consistency, Ref-0785, 5:24, p. 9. "While it is wholly appropriate to say that the church partakes of spiritual blessings, why the need to connect the spiritual blessings to the new covenant? The Abrahamic covenant promises blessing for those who are not Abraham's physical descendants (Gen. 12:3). Likewise, the ministry of the Holy Spirit to Gentiles is promised outside the context of the new covenant (Gen. 12:3; Isa. 11:10; cf. Gen. 15:6 and John 3:5; Isa. 42:7; 49:6, etc.). It should also be noted that the regeneration stated in Jeremiah 31 is not only related to forgiveness of sins, but also to the planting of Israel in the land (v. 33), the writing of God's law on the heart (v. 33), and the needlessness of any further teaching about God (v. 34). None of these things are ever said to accompany the regeneration of church age believers. Additionally, the sins to be forgiven in the new covenant are "their" sins (note in v. 34, the third person plural pronominal suffix; la'avonam. Following standard rules of grammar one must look for the antecedent to which the third person plural refers. It is they who also broke the old covenant: the house of Israel and the house of Judah." George Gunn, Second Corinthians 3:6 and the Church's Relationship to the New Covenant, Ref-0785, 25:46, pp. 26-27. "With reference to the new covenant, 2 Corinthians 3:6 may be viewed in two possible ways. The expression "new covenant" expresses either the content of Paul's message, or it expresses the manner in which Paul conducted his ministry. Having examined various exegetical/hermeneutical issues, the studied opinion may be that Paul was not describing the content of his message, but rather the manner in which he conducted his ministry. Ultimately, the chief exegetical/hermeneutical issue questions whether the expression διακόνοϋσ καινη'ς διαθήκησ represents an objective genitive or a genitive of description. A consideration of the referent of ημᾶς, the context of the statement, the use/non-use of the article, the theological viewpoint of the author and recipients and the way in which Paul referred to the Old Testament lead, it seems, to the conclusion that Paul's point was that his ministry is a "new-covenant-like ministry," not that he was administering the new covenant. Reference was to the style of his ministry, rather than to the doctrinal content of the new covenant. Thus, this verse does not support any kind of realized eschatology, or church participation in the new covenant." Eze. 34:25). This covenant consisted in the fact that God imposed upon the nations of the earth the obligation not to hurt Israel or destroy it, and was one consequence of the favour of Jehovah towards His people. Through the abrogation of this covenant Israel is delivered up to the nations, that they may be able to deal with Israel again in the manner depicted in v. 5." Keil, Carl Friedrich, and Franz Delitzsch. Commentary on the Old Testament, Zec. 11:8-11. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 2002. "The covenant which is broken is not the Abrahamic covenant or any of Israel's unconditional covenants, but rather an indirect covenant with the nations of the earth that exists because of God's direct, unconditional covenants with Israel. The breaking of the staff, even Beauty indicates that in keeping Israel secure from every potential foe the grace of God will be suspended; and the nations will be permitted to come into the land to devastate and conquer Israel. During the time that Israel was in fellowship with Him, God restrained all the people so that none could do violence to Israel. The breaking of Beauty suspends that restraint, and now all the people may do whatever they will to Israel." KJV Bible Commentary, Zec. 11:10. Nashville: Thomas Nelson, 1997, c1994.

covenant theology - concepts : ☩ + "Helm defines the essence of Covenant Theology around four interrelated concepts: the eternal covenant of redemption between the Father and the Son, the federal headship of Adam, the unity of the covenant of grace, and justification by faith." Willem VanGemenen, "Systems of Continuity," Ref-0199, p. 44. "Covenant theology holds to two or three theological covenants. They believe there is a Covenant of Works (between God and Adam), a Covenant of Grace (between God and the elect, some say all of fallen humanity), and possibly a Covenant of Redemption (among the Members of the Godhead). None of these are found in the Bible. Concerning the Covenant of Works, Hodge states directly that it "does not rest upon any express declaration of the Scriptures." Charles Ray, "Systematic Theology and Premillennialism", Ref-0055, Vol. 8 No. 24, August, 2004, 165:191, p. 168. "The Father covenanted to grant the Son to be the Head and Redeemer of the elect, and the Son covenanted to provide redemption for the elect by becoming incarnated in human flesh and dying a substitutionary death for them. According to Covenant Theology, a covenant of works was establishing between the triune God and Adam between creation and the fall of mankind. God required Adam's implicit and perfect obedience. Adam was placed on temporary probation to determine if he would voluntarily subject his will to God's will. God promised eternal life (not natural life) to Adam and his descendants in return for Adam's perfect obedience. But because God appointed Adam to be representative head of the human race, he and his descendants would be penalized with death, "including physical, spiritual, and eternal death," if he disobeyed God. Covenant Theology also maintains that God established a covenant of grace because Adam broke the covenant of works. Louis Berkhof defined the covenant of grace as "that gracious agreement between the offended God and the offending but elect sinner, in which God promises salvation through faith in Christ, and the sinner accepts this believingly, promising a life of faith and obedience." Thus God is the first party of the covenant of grace. Covenant theologians claim the second party is either (1) the sinner, (2) the elect, (3) the elect sinner in Christ, or (4) believers and their seed. Some Covenant theologians believe the covenant of grace was established immediately after Adam's fall, while others claim it was not established until God's covenant with Abraham. Once established, it continues throughout time as the unifying principle of history." Renald E. Showers, "Covenant Theology: What's in it for Israel?", Ref-0057, January/February 2005, 11:13, pp. 11-12. "Covenant theologians find two (sometimes three) Covenants which, they believe, govern all of God's dealings with men. The first of these (in logical order) is the "Covenant of Redemption" - the agreement reached in eternity between the first two persons of the Trinity to provide salvation for sinners. This covenant is the optional third in the system. The second is the so-called "Covenant of Works" which teaches that God entered into covenanted relations with Adam in the Garden of Eden. The third (and the most important to the system) is the "Covenant of Grace". This is basically the covenant which God made with fallen man after Adam's sin." Paul Martin Henebury "The Eschatology of Covenant Theology", Ref-0785 Volume 10 No. 30, September 2006, 5:16, p. 5. "The basic tenet of covenant theology is that God has operated under several covenants. Theologians disagree on whether there are two covenants or three, with the three-covenant position being dominant. The three covenants are said to be Redemption, Works, and Grace. The first covenant was made in eternity between God the Father and God the Son, with the Father appointing the Son to be the Head and Redeemer of the elect, while the Son agreed to "make amends for the sin of Adam and of those whom the Father had given him." The second covenant, the Covenant of Works, was between God and Adam. God made Adam the representative of all humanity, so that Adam's actions were on behalf of all his descendants. In this covenant God required "perfect obedience" as a condition for granting eternal life to Adam and his descendants. Adam failed to uphold his end of the covenant, resulting in the physical and spiritual death of humanity. Because of this God then established the Covenant of Grace. Covenant theologians debate with whom God made this final covenant; some say sinners as a whole, others say elect sinners, while still others say it included believers and their successive descendants." covenant theology - dispensations - view of :

☪ + "Covenant theology organizes the history of the world in terms of covenants. It maintains that all God's relations to human beings are to be understood in terms of two covenants, the covenant of works made with Adam before the Fall, and the covenant of grace, made through Christ with all who are to believe. The covenant of grace was administered differently in the different dispensations (Westminster Confession 7.4) but is substantially the same in all. Covenant theology has always allowed for a diversity of administration of the one covenant of grace. This diversity accounted in large part for the diversity of epochs in biblical history. But the emphasis was undeniably on the unity of one covenant of grace." Ref-0191, p. 40.

Ref-0104, p. 34. "After Calvin's death in 1564, Holland gradually became the center of Calvinistic theological activity. . . . Theological tension was high in Holland following the Synod of Dort (1619) . . . particularly against the teaching of double predestination (the decrees of election and reprobation). It was at this time that Cocceius advanced his theory concerning the Covenant of Grace and the Covenant of Works, in which he soft-pedaled the doctrine of predestination. . . . This teaching, of course, was rejected by the Reformed Church. . . . [Then] Witsius introduced his idea of a third covenant (later known as the Covenant of Redemption) which concerned God's saving purpose before the foundation of the earth. The Reformed theologians were quick to see the possibility of reconciling the doctrine of the eternal decrees with this new idea set forth by Witsius [in 1695]. Therefore, the Reformed Church did an about face and embraced the theory of the covenant." Clarence E. The covenant of grace extends from man's fall to the new creation and is divided into two administrations: the OT and the NT. creation - bara vs. asa : Gen. 1:1; Ex. 20:11; Ne. 9:6 ☪ “The verb bara (?to create) expresses better than any other verb the idea of an absolute creation, or creation ex nihilo. The qal stem of this verb is employed exclusively in the Old Testament for God’s activity. . . Two other verbs figure prominently in the creation narratives. One is asa, meaning essentially ‘to do or make.’ This verb appears to be interchangeable with bara, a conclusion which many writers reject but for which the evidence is overwhelming. For example, Genesis 1:1 states that God created (bara) the heavens and the earth, while Exodus 20:11 and Nehemiah 9:6 note that He made (asa) the heavens and the earth. An even clearer example is found in [Gen. 1:21] and [Gen. 1:25]. . .” Ref-0180, p. 40. “The word translated by the English word “made” [in Ex. 20:11] is ʾāsā. Since it is the word “created” (bārā) which is used in Genesis 1:1 to describe the creation of the universe, it has been contended by gap theorists that the action spoken of in Genesis 1:1 and the action of Exodus 20:11 are to distinct and widely separated events, the original one represented by bārā’ and related in Genesis 1:1, and a “re-making” or recreation represented by ʾāsā and related in Exodus 20:11” Ref-0819, p. 53. “Koehler and Baumgartner are more specific in equating ʾāsā with bārā’ (to create). Some instances which they list are Genesis 1:7, Job 41:25; Isaiah 57:16, and Jeremiah 31:16.” Ref-0819, p. 56. “The meanings of ʾāsā in the lexicon of Brown, Driver, and Briggs have been enumerated. under the second main set of meanings, number 1b, they list: “make . . . often of God’s making (creating).” The following passages are given as samples of this usage: Gen. 1:7,16,25; 3:1; Ne. 9:6. Another lexicon [KB, Lexicon, p. 740] suggests that other instances in which ʾāsā is equal to the idea of creating are: Isa. 57:16; Jer. 31:16.” Ref-0819, p. 63. “Further references listed in the lexicon of Brown, Driver, and Briggs under this particular meaning of ʾāsā are: Job 9:9; Proverbs 8:26 (cf. Psalm 95:5); Psalm 100:3 (cf. Gen. 1:27).” Ref-0819, p. 63-64. “Another argument in favor of the interchangeable usage of ʾāsā and bārā’ is their employment in the same verses or passages with reference to the same action: . . . Gen. 1:11,12 . . . Gen. 1:21,25 . . . Gen. 1:26,27 . . . Gen. 2:2,3,4 . . . It is characteristic of Hebrew, particularly of poetry, to employ two or more verbs in the same passage to refer to the same action. A thought is stated in one phrase, and then repeated in other words in the next phrase. This is known as “synonymous parallelism.” Since parallelism can be observed both in prose and poetry, examples of both are given below. . . . Gen. 2:4 . . . Ex. 34:10 . . . Isa. 41:20 . . . Isa. 43:7 . . . Isa. 45:7” Ref-0819, pp. 65-72.

creation - ex-nihilo : Ex. 20:11; Ps. 33:6; 2Pe. 3:5 ☪ Alternate view: some observe that the work pattern is not compared to ex-nihilo creation -- something which man cannot do. They interpret Ex. 20:11 as indicating that six days were spent fashioning existing material already created ex-nihilo in Gen. 1:1. “The biblical account of cration differs in three crucial respects from the views of all ancient philosophies. First, the world had a beginning and is therefore not eternal. Second, the universe is utterly dependent on God, but He is not dependent on it. Third, God made the universe out of nothing, not out of preexistent material.” David J. Mtt. 27:29 (stephanos); Mark 15:17 (stephanos); John 19:2 (,5 stephanos); Heb. 2:7 (,9 stephanoo); Rev. 14:14 (stephanos); Rev. 12:3 (diadema); Rev. 13:1 (diadema) ☉
In the gospels, stephanos -- a victor's crown (as opposed to a diadema) -- is applied to Christ by his mockers. Since they are mocking him, this may be inconclusive as evidence that stephanos can apply to Christ. However, in Rev. 14:14 it is worn by "One like the Son of Man" which most take as a clear reference to Christ. Therefore, the use of stephanos rather than diadema in Rev. 6:2 cannot be used to conclusively argue that the rider on the white horse is not Christ. Other sound reasons exist besides the distinction between stephanos vs. diadema. Also note that diadema is applied to the red dragon Ref. 12:3 and the beast from the sea Rev. 13:1

crucifixion - offense : Isa. 53:4; 1Cor. 1:23; 1Cor. 2:2; Gal. 5:11 ☪ "[P]agan ridicule can be seen in a graffito scratched on a stone in a guardroom on Palatine Hill near the Circus Maximus in Rome. The graffito shows the figure of a man with the head of an ass hanging on a cross. Just below the cross, another man is shown raising his hand in a gesture of adoration. The inscription reads, 'Alexamenos worships his god.' This comparison of Christ to an ass, so repulsive to believers today, vividly illustrates pagan contempt toward the crucified Christ whom Paul proclaimed" Donald E. Green, "The Folly of the Cross," Ref-0164, 15/1 (Spring 2004) 59-69, p. 64. "Humanly speaking, these cultural attitudes towards crucifixion presented a formidable obstacle to the spread of the gospel in the first century. Jews and Gentiles alike viewed the crucified with extreme contempt and scorn. A crucified man was a societal reject, but a crucified god was a contradiction in terms. Nevertheless, the centerpiece of Paul's message was "Christ crucified." A starker contrast with prevailing societal thought could scarcely be drawn. . . . In other words, the spiritual offense of the cross actually worked to make some Jews go astray. Remarkably, the crucifixion -- so essential to eternal life -- actually hindered Jews from coming to saving faith. They simply could not overcome their preconceived notions about the significance of crucifixion. As one writer puts it, "He who is placed there for faith Himself becomes an obstacle to faith." The very content of Paul's message caused Jews to turn away. . . . The gospel called them to surrender to the very one they considered "smitten of God and afflicted" (Isa. 53:4)." Donald E. Green, "The Folly of the Cross," Ref-0164, 15/1 (Spring 2004) 59-69, p. 66. "[T]hough the Jews had to abandon their notions of a curse being upon the crucified, the Gentiles had to abandon their associations of weakness and contempt before they could believe in Christ. It was simply preposterous to suggest that this crucifixion was the focal point of the redemption of mankind. Hengel writers, "To believe that the one pre-existent Son of the one true God, the mediator at creation and the redeemer of the world, had appeared in very recent times in out-of-the-way Galilee as a member of the obscure people of the Jews, and even worse, had died the death of a common criminal on the cross, could only be regarded as a sign of madness. The real gods of Greece and Rome could be distinguished from moral men by the very fact that they were immortal -- they had absolutely nothing in common with the . . . one who . . . was bound in the most ignominious fashion and executed in a shameful way." Donald E. Green, "The Folly of the Cross," Ref-0164, 15/1 (Spring 2004) 59-69, p. 67. "When evaluation 1 Cor. 1:23, the expositor is struck by the lack of modern analogies to crucifixion, at least in American Society. The haze of time has obscured the repulsive connotations of crucifixion. Modern executions provide no comparison, because they occur behind penitentiary walls, away from public scrutiny. Consequently, a crucified Savior does not sting today's ears as it did in the first century. . . . On a broader scale, this verse shows the church of Jesus Christ that it must return to cultural confrontation with its gospel preaching instead of pursuing cultural accommodation. "Christ crucified" was not a "seeker-friendly" message in the first century. It was an absurd obscenity to Gentiles and a scandalous oxymoron to Jews. The gospel guaranteed offense. The modern church would do well to reflect on that example. Its efforts to remove the offense of the cross flatly contradict the apostolic pattern. Paul did not meet the expectations or desires of his audience. Rather, he honored God by preaching the message entrusted to him. In so doing, he gave the culture what it needed -- the transforming power of Jesus Christ leading to salvation -- and God was pleased through such seeming foolishness to save those who believed." ❖ Question: Mark 14:12 says, 'And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the Passover, his disciples said unto him, where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the Passover?' Later that night he was betrayed. So how could Jesus be the Messiah the Lamb, if He was not crucified until a day after the Passover lamb was slain? Mark 15:1 says, 'in the morning,' so it had to be the next day, a day after the Passover, that Jesus was slain. Answer: I have answered that question in previous newsletters (the most recent being in June 2000) and in my books, but will do so here briefly once more. The Jewish day begins at sunset, thus it begins with night, followed by morning, and the following afternoon is called the evening. The day 'when they killed the Passover,' 14 Nisan, began after sunset Wednesday. That night the last supper was eaten. The Passover lamb was not slain until the following afternoon in the evening of 14 Nisan (Ex. 12:6), before sunset marked the beginning of 15. Then the lamb would be roasted and that night (v 8), after sunset and thus 15 Nisan, it would be eaten. The fifteenth was the first day of the seven-day feast of the Passover and unleavened bread and was a 'high sabbath.' Thus John states that when Jesus was on the cross 'it was the preparation of the Passover [i.e., the lambs were being slain],' and explains further, 'The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation [of the Passover], that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day (for that sabbath day was an high day), besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.' In A.D. 32 when Jesus was crucified, the high Sabbath went from Thursday evening to Friday evening, followed by the weekly sabbath from Friday evening to Saturday evening, so the women could not get to the grav [truncated in error!]" "There is considerable ground for believing that certain religious groups (including our Lord and His disciples) followed a different calendar from that by which the chief priests regulated the temple services. While the chief priests and those who followed their reckoning at the Passover on Friday evening, when Jesus was already dead (John 18:28; 19:14), He and His disciples appear to have eaten it twenty-four hours earlier." Ref-0239, pp. 54-55. Arnold Fruchtenbaum mentions two passover sacrifices; one on the evening of Passover by the people and the other the next day at 9 AM by the high priest and 24 other priests within the temple compound. "The testimony of the first three Gospels is united, that the Last Supper was eaten at the Jewish Passover. The attempt to prove that it was an anticipatory celebration, without the paschal sacrifice, though made with the best of motives, is utterly futile. "Now on the first day of unleavened bread" (St. Matthew declares), "the disciples came to Jesus, saying, Where wilt thou that we make ready for Thee to eat the Passover?" It was the proposal not of the Lord, but of the disciples, who, with the knowledge of the day and of the rites pertaining to it, turned to the Master for instructions. With yet greater definiteness St. Mark narrates that this took place on the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the Passover. And the language of St. Luke is, if possible, more unequivocal still: "Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the Passover must be killed" But it is confidently asserted that the testimony of St. John is just as clear and unambiguous that the crucifixion took place upon the very day and, it is sometimes urged, at the very hour of the paschal sacrifice. Many an eminent writer may be cited to support this view, and the controversy waged in its defence is endless. But no plea for deference to great names can be tolerated for a moment when the point at issue is the integrity of Holy Writ; and despite the erudition that has been exhausted to prove that the Gospels are here at hopeless variance, none who have learned to prize them as a Divine revelation will be surprised to find that the main difficulty depends entirely on prevailing ignorance respecting Jewish ordinances and the law of Moses. These writers one and all confound the Paschal Supper with the festival which followed it, and to which it lent its name. The supper was a memorial of the redemption of the firstborn of Israel on the night before the Exodus; the feast was the anniversary of their actual deliverance from the house of bondage. The supper was not a part of the feast; it was morally the basis on which the feast was founded, just as the Feast of Tabernacles was based on the great sin-offering of the day of expiation which preceded it. But in the same way that the Feast of Weeks came to be commonly designated Pentecost, the feast of Unleavened Bread was popularly called the Passover. That title was common to the supper and the feast, and included both; but the intelligent Jew would never confound the two; and if he spoke emphatically of the feast of the Passover, he would thereby mark the festival to the exclusion of the supper. No words can possibly express more clearly this distinction than those afforded by the Pentateuch in the final promulgation of the Law: "In the fourteenth day of the first month is the Passover of the Lord; and in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast." [Numb. 28:16, 17. Compare Exod. 12:14-17, and Lev. 23:5, 6, and mark that in the enumeration of the feasts in the twenty-third chapter of Exodus, the Passover (i.e., the Paschal Supper) is omitted altogether.] . . . the Lord's injunction to the traitor was understood to mean, "Buy what we have need of against the feast." [John 13:29] The feast day was a Sabbath, when trading was unlawful, and it would seem that the needed supply for the festival was still procurable far on in the preceding night; for another of the errors with which this controversy abounds is the assumption that the Jewish day was invariably reckoned . . . beginning in the evening. [Such, for instance, was the day of atonement (Lev. 23:32) and also the weekly Sabbath. But though the Passover was eaten between six o'clock and midnight, this period was designated in the law, not the beginning of the 15th Nisan, but the evening or night of the 14th (compare Exod. 12:6-8, and Lev. 23:5). The 15th, or feast day, was reckoned, doubtless, from six o'clock the following morning, for, according to the Mishna (Treatise Berachoth), the day began at six o'clock a. m. These writers would have us believe that the disciples supposed that they were there and then eating the Passover, and yet that they imagined Judas was despatched to buy what was needed for the Passover!]" Ref-0762, p. 107-110. There is considerably more on this in Ref-0762 in relation to other objections to Anderson's explanation. "The argument in proof that the death of Christ was on the very day the paschal lamb was killed, has gained a fictitious interest and value from the seeming fitness of the synchronism this involves. But a closer investigation of the subject, combined with a broader view of the Mosaic types, will dissipate the force of this conclusion." Ref-0762, p. 115. "The midnight agony in Gethsemane was thus the great antitype of that midnight scene in Egypt when the destroying angel Flashed through the land. And as His death was the fulfilment of His people's deliverance, so it took place upon the anniversary of "that selfsame day that the Lord did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies." [Exod. 12:51. The Passover of the yearly celebration was but a memorial of the Passover in Egypt, which was the true type. It was killed, moreover, not at the hour of the Lord's death, but after that hour, between the ninth and the eleventh hour (Josephus, Wars, 6, 9, 3). "The elucidation of the doctrine of types, now entirely neglected, is an important problem for future theologians." This dictum of Hengstenberg's [Christology (Arnold's Ed.), ? 765] may still be recorded as a deserved reproach upon theology, and much that has been written in this controversy might be quoted to prove its truth. The day of the crucifixion was the anniversary not only of the Exodus, but also of the promise to Abraham (comp. Exod. 12:41). The day of the resurrection was the anniversary of the crossing of the Red Sea, and again of the resting of the Ark on Ararat (Gen. 8:4). Nisan, which had been the seventh month, became the first month at the Exodus. (See Exod. 12:2; cf. Ordo. Sac., ? 299.) On the 17th Nisan the renewed earth emerged from the waters of the flood; the redeemed people emerged from the waters of the sea; and the Lord Jesus rose from the dead." Ref-0762, p. 118. ". . . In conclusion, one sees that any theory which makes the Last Supper not the Passover meal, does not give a satisfactory identification of the meal. Again, considering all the evidence, it seems to be best to accept the Last Supper as having been a Passover meal." Ref-0044, pp. 76-80.

That there was a change in the standard length of a cubit is noted in 2 Chronicles 3:3 (Ezekiel 40:5; 43:13). A general approximation sets the Old Testament "cubit" at about 17.5 inches (44.5 centimeters). 27:24-25 ☛ + "Israel must, indeed, be dumb if one asks them today: Tell me, pray: How can it be that the Eternal sent the fathers out of their land into captivity in Babylon for only seventy years, on account of all the abominations and idolatry by which they for centuries defiled the Holy Land: -- and now Israel has been dispersed among all peoples for over eighteen hundred years, and Jerusalem, the city of the great King, is trodden down by the nations until this day? What, then, is the great and terrible blood-guiltiness which perpetually prevents you from dwelling in peace in the land of your fathers? -- But Israel is not willing to know! And yet it is precisely its sin against its Messiah that is indeed the root of Israel's misery." Ref-0197, pp. 118-119. "His blood be on us and on our children," was their terrible, impious cry before the judgment-seat of Pilate, and for eighteen centuries their judgment has been meted out to them, to reach its appalling climax on the advent of the "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." Jer. 36:30; Mtt. 1:6; Mtt. 1:11; Luke 3:31 ☛

The blood curse (Jer. 22:30; 36:30) was on Jeconiah (Mtt. 1:11) in the line of Solomon leading to Joseph (Mtt. 1:6) and was not passed to Jesus since Joseph was not His biological father. Mary's lineage comes through a different son of David: Nathan (Luke 3:31) and is not affected by the blood curse on Jeconiah. "As a matter of historical fact, Jehoiachin was not 'childless.' After being carried away to Babylon, he had a son through whom the family line finally culminated in Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary (Mtt. 1:12-16). But our Lord Jesus Christ was not the 'seed' of Joseph; He was the seed of Mary, who was descended from David through Nathan (Luke 3:31), not through Solomon. Hence, it is correct to say that Jehoiachin was to be written 'childless,' that is, in the genealogical register of the royal family line." Ref-0183, p. 126. ". . . no contradiction exists, though many so claim, as Jehoiachim's son Jeconiah (Coniah) did not sit on David's sovereign throne but only upon the vassal throne under King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. Also observe that the above verses do not say Jeconiah was to have no children at all. In fact, they speak of his having "seed" and they are listed in 1Chr. 3:16-18 and Mtt. 1:12-13. Rather, Jeremiah 22:30 says to count him childless in the sense that none of his offspring would ever sit on the sovereign throne of his ancestor (father) David. This was fulfilled as his successor on the chattel throne of Nebuchadnezzar was his uncle Zedekiah, not his son Shealtiel (Jer. 37:1)." Ref-0186, p. 41. However, Jeremiah refers to Zedekiah, although not Jeconiah's son, as the "king who sits on the throne of David" (Jer. 29:16). Hippolytus has another view: "'O earth, hear the word of the Lord. Write this man, a man excommunicate; for no man of his seed shall prosper (grow up), sitting upon the throne of David, ruling any more in Judah.'" Hippolytus on Daniel, Ref-0541, p. 178.

Settled south of the second cataract of the Nile. "We suggest that Sumerian Kish, the first city established in Mesopotamia after the Flood, took its name from the man known in the Bible as Cush. The first kingdom established after the Flood was Kish, and the name "Kish" appears often on clay tablets. The early post-Flood Sumerian king lists (not found in the Bible) say that ??kingship descended from heaven to Kish" after the Flood. (The Hebrew name "Cush," much later, was moved to present-day Ethiopia as migrations look place from Mesopotamia to other places.)" David P. Ref-0016, Feb 1998. 10, Ref-0001, p. 429. "Having stationed the bulk of his army near the passage of the river where it enters Babylon, and again having stationed another division beyond the city, where the river makes its exit, he gave order to his forces to enter the city as soon as they should see the stream fordable. . . he himself marched away with the ineffective part of his army; and having come to the lake, Cyrus did the same with respect to the river and the lake as the queen of the Babylonians had done; for having diverted the river, by means of a canal, into the lake, which was before a swamp, he made the ancient channel fordable by the sinking of the river. . . It is related by the people who inhabited this city, that. . . those of the Babylonians who inhabited the centre knew nothing of the capture (for it happened to be a festival); but they were dancing at the time, and enjoying themselves, till they received certain information of the truth." Cyrus - reads Isaiah : Isa. 44:28; Dan. 6:28 ☪ Isaiah wrote 140 years before the temple was demolished. Ref-0026 11.1.2. "1. (1) In the first year of the reign of Cyrus, a which was the seventieth from the day that our people were removed out of their own land into Babylon, God commiserated the captivity and calamity of these poor people, according as he had foretold to them by Jeremiah the prophet, before the destruction of the city, (2) that after they has served Nebuchadnezzar and his posterity, and after they had undergone that servitude seventy years, he would restore them again to the land of their fathers, and they should build their temple, and enjoy their ancient prosperity; and these things God did afford them; (3) for he stirred up the mind of Cyrus, and made him write this throughout all Asia:"Thus saith Cyrus the King:?"Since God Almighty hath appointed me to be king of the habitable earth, I believe that he is that God which the nation of the Israelites worship; (4) for indeed he foretold my name by the prophets; and that I should build him a house at Jerusalem, in the country of Judea." 2. (5) This was known to Cyrus by his reading the book which Isaiah left behind him of his prophecies; for this prophet said that God had spoken thus to him in a secret vision:?"My will is, that Cyrus, whom I have appointed to be king over many and great nations, send back my people to their own land, and build my temple." (6) This was foretold by Isaiah one hundred and forty years before the temple was demolished. Accordingly, when Cyrus read this, and admired the divine power, an earnest desire and ambition seized upon him to fulfill what was so written; so he called for the most eminent Jews that were in Babylon, and said to them, that he gave them leave to go back to their own country, and to rebuild their city Jerusalem, and the temple of God. . ." year of king Cyrus. Critics have seized upon this as another inaccuracy because, according to Daniel 10:1, the revelation was given to Daniel in the third year of Cyrus. The large discussion that this has provoked is much ado about nothing. Obviously to Daniel, the important point was that his ministry spanned the entire Babylonian empire, and he was still alive when Cyrus came on the scene. The passage does not say nor necessarily imply that Daniel did not continue after the first year of Cyrus -- which, as a matter of fact he did." Ref-0005, pp. 42-43. Also -- Daniel could have "continued" until the first year of Cyrus in an official office, but received the vision of chapter 10 after that time.

Daniel's seventy sevens - gap : Dan. 9:25-27; Rom. 11:1 ☉ "[The Puritans] had for a long time taught the future conversion of the Jews, as evidenced in the annotations of Romans 11 in the 1560 edition of the Geneva Bible. . . in the seventeenth century, Moses Wall sought to persuade the English Parliament to readmit Jews to England. He provided eight reasons for doing this, one of which was that God's covenant with the descendants of Abraham is not canceled; rather it is suspended and will begin to operate again in the last days. One is almost startled by a sort of 'postponement theory' at such an early date!" Ref-0031, p. 145. "In the third century Hippolytus placed 'the final week at the end of the world and divides it into the period of Elijah and the period of Antichrist so that during the first three and a half years the knowledge of God is established. . . during the other three years under the Antichrist the sacrifice and offering shall cease. But when Christ shall come and slay the Wicked One by the breath of his mouth, desolation shall hold say till the end.' (Jerome's Commentary on Daniel, 400 A.D.)." Ref-0049, p. 109. "This Hippolytus, a famed church father, was a disciple of Irenaeus, who was in turn a follower of Polycarp, the personal disciple of John the Apostle." Ref-0049, p. 133. The following is Dr. Randall Price's explanation and defense of a gap preceding the final week of Daniel's famous prophecy . . . "The sixty-ninth week has already been set off as a distinct unit comprised of the seven and sixty-two weeks. This would imply in itself that the events of the seventieth week are to be treated separately. Further, the events in verse 26-'the cutting off of Messiah,' and of the 'people of the prince' -- are stated to occur after the sixty-nine weeks. If this was intended to occur in the seventieth week, the text would have read here 'during' or 'in the midst of' (cf. Daniel's use of hetzi, 'in the middle of,' v. 27). This language implies that these events precede the seventieth week but do not immediately follow the sixty-ninth. Therefore, a temporal interval separates the two. It is also important to note that the opening word of verse 27 (higbbir, 'confirm') is prefixed by the waw consecutive, a grammatical connective that indicates a close consequential relationship to a preceding verb. This use indicates that the events of verse 27 are subsequent to those of verse 26. Furthermore, the very language of these two verses, first speaking of 'the prince [nagid, 'leader'] who is to come' (v. 26), and then of that prince that later comes (the 'he' of v. 27), implies that a separation of time exists between these events." Ref-0078, p. 86. "In the very passage involved, Daniel 9:24-27, it is indicated that there would be a time interval. The anointed one, or the Messiah, is cut off after the sixty-ninth week, but not in the seventieth. Such a circumstance could be true only if there were a time interval between these two periods." Ref-0081, p. 228. "When Knowles deals with the next major contributors -- Irenaeus (130-200) and his disciple Hippolytus (170-236) -- he describes their views as 'undoubtedly the forerunners of the modern dispensational interpreters of the Seventy Weeks.' Knowles draws the following conclusion about Irenaeus and Hippolytus: ? . . . we may say that Irenaeus presented the seed of an idea that found its full growth in the writings of Hippolytus. In the works of these fathers, we can find most of the basic concepts of the modern futuristic view of the seventieth week of Daniel ix. That they were dependent to some extent upon earlier material is no doubt true. Certainly we can see the influence of pre-Christian Jewish exegesis at times, but, by and large, we must regard them as the founders of the school of interpretation, and in this lies their significance for the history of exegesis.' In fact, Hippolytus refers to a gap or, in his words, 'division,' multiple times. . . . LeRoy Froom grudgingly admits that 'Hippolytus. . . arbitrarily separates by a chronological gap from the preceding sixty-nine weeks, placing it just before the end of the world.' . . . Eusebius (270-340), . . . teaches a historical view, but he places a gap of time between the sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks." Thomas Ice, "The 70 Weeks of Daniel", Ref-0209, pp. 350-352. "The completion of the first seven weeks is apparently related to the temple, for Clement stated, "That the temple accordingly was built in seven weeks, is evident; for it is written in Esdras." The sixty-two weeks then lead up to the first advent of Christ, but for Clement the final week encompasses both Nero's erection of an "abomination" in Jerusalem as well as the destruction of the city and temple in Vespasian's reign. Although Clement's interpretation is essentially messianic-historical, his associating the final week with the events of A.D. 70 is significant. As Adler has noted, "Moreover, by establishing a chronology of the seventy weeks that comprehended both Christ's advent as well as the destruction of the temple, he is the first to posit what becomes conventional in later interpretations: a presumed hiatus between the first 69 weeks, and the final week." Darius - identity of king of Media : Ezra 6:2; Dan. 5:31 ☪ Josephus, Ref-0026 X, ch.11. "It is my conviction that Gubaru, the governor of Babylon and the region beyond the river, appears in the book of Daniel as Darius the Mede, the monarch who took charge of the Chaldean kingdom immediately following the death of Belshazzar. . . this identification is the only one which satisfactorily harmonizes the various lines of evidence which we find in the book of Daniel and in the contemporary cuneiform records." -- John C. Whitcomb, "Darius the Mede," 24 as cited in Ref-0001, p. 429. "Whitcomb distinguishes Gubaru from Ugbaru, both of whom are called Gobryas in some translations of the Nabonidus Chronical. Whitcomb holds that Ugbaru, identified previously as the governor of Gutium in the Nabonidus Chronical, led the army of Cyrus into Babylon and died less than a month later. Gubaru, however, is identified by Whitcomb as Darius the Mede, a king of Babylon under the authority of Cyrus." Ref-0005, p. 133. "The third view, held by conservative scholar. D.J. Wiseman, has simplicity in its favor. It claims that Darius the Mede is another name of Cyrus the Persian. This is based upon a translation of Dan. 6:28 which the Aramiac permits to read 'Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, even the reign of Cyrus the

Persian.'" Ref-0005, p. 134. "Ezra records that in the reign of Darius Hystaspis the Jews presented a petition to the King, in which they recited Cyrus' decree authorising the rebuilding of their Temple. The wording of the petition clearly indicates that, to the knowledge of the Jewish leaders, the decree in question had been filed in the house of the archives in Babylon. But the search there made for it proved fruitless, and it was ultimately found in Ecbatana (or Achmetha: Ezra 6:2). How, then, could a State paper of this kind have been transferred to the Median capital? The only reasonable explanation of this extraordinary fact completes the proof that the vassal king whom Daniel calls Darius was the Median general, Gobryas (or Gubaru), who led the army of Cyrus to Babylon. . . . He had governed Media as Viceroy when that country was reduced to the status of a province; and to any one accustomed to deal with evidence, the inference will seem natural that, for some reason or other, he was sent back to his provincial throne, and that, in returning to Ecbatana, he carried with him the archives of his brief reign in Babylon." David - age fighting Goliath : Gen. 34:19; 1S. 2:17; 2S. 14:21; 2S. 18:5; 2S. 18:12; 2S. 18:29; 2S. 18:32; 1S. 17:42 ☪ "While the term נָעָר stresses David's inexperience, it does not require or suggest that he was a pre-teen. Had this been the case, it would be hard to explain the relevance of Saul's promise to the victor of his daughter's hand in marriage in 1S. 17:25; 18:17-19. . . . The term נָעָר (young man) frequently appears as a contrastive term for זָקֵן (old man), as in Gen. 19:4 and Ex. 10:9. It can even refer to an infant (Ex. 2:6; 1S. 1:22). It is also, however, regularly used to refer to young men, whether married or not, perhaps with the restriction that these individuals be childless or at least have some kind of dependent status. For example, the soon-to-be married Shechem is called a נָעָר (young man) in Gen. 34:19; the sexually immoral and perhaps married, but as yet childless sons of Eli are so termed in 1S. 2:17; and the married, but as yet childless Absalom is so termed in 2S. 14:21; 18:5, 12, 29, 32." David - age in relation to Saul and Jonathan : 1S. 20:30-31; 1S. 23:16-17 ☪ "Therefore, Jonathan's age must exceed that of David's by at least around twenty-eight years. Whereas the Scriptural data permits neither a precise calculation of Saul's birth year nor his age, judging from Jonathan's age it may be reckoned that he was approximately fifty years older than David. . . . How different, how beautiful and moving the story becomes in the proper chronological setting. Jonathan, heir to his father's throne (1S. 20:30-31), forsakes the crown submitting himself to the will of God (1S. 23:16-17) and to the much younger David. The man who has long awaited his day to rule gives up a kingdom for the love of a youthful friend and duty to God. Contrariwise, how much darker Saul's demon oppressed hounding of David must be viewed. As a mere youth, his life was sought by the aging yet most powerful male authority figure on earth -- the King." have sat on his throne, but only one of his descendants ever sits on the right hand of God's throne in heaven. That descendant is Jesus Christ (Ps. 110:1; Heb. 8:1; 12:2). Second, David's throne was not established before his lifetime (2S. 7:16-17). By contrast, since God has always ruled over His creation, His throne in heaven was established long before David's throne (Ps. 93:1-2). Third, since God's throne in heaven was established long before David's throne and since God's throne was established forever (Lam. 5:19), then it was not necessary for God to promise to establish David's throne forever (2S. 7:16) if they are the same throne. Fourth, David's throne was on the earth, not in heaven. David and his descendants who sat on his throne exercised an earthly, ruling authority. They never exercised ruling authority in or from heaven. By contrast, as noted earlier, the Bible indicates that God's throne is in heaven. Fifth, the Bible's consistent description of David's throne indicates that it belongs to David. When God talked to David about his throne, God referred to it as 'thy throne' (2S. 7:16; Ps. 89:4; 132:12). When God mentioned David's throne to others, He referred to it as 'his throne' (Ps. 89:29; Jer. 33:21), 'David's throne' (Jer. 13:13), and 'the throne of David' (Jer. 17:25; 22:2, 4, 30). By contrast, the Scriptures' consistent description of the throne in heaven indicates that it belongs to God the Father." Renald Showers, Ref-0057, January/February 2001, p. 30. Second, several Days of the Lord already have occurred in which God demonstrated His sovereign rule by raising up nations to execute His judgement on other nations. For example, He raised up Babylon to judge Egypt and its allies during the 500s B.C. (Jer. 46:2, 10; Eze. 30:3-6). However, the Bible also foretells a future Day of the Lord. . . . The future Day of the Lord has a double sense: It is both broad and narrow. The broad sense refers to an extended time, covering at least the entire seventieth week of Daniel 9 and the Millennium. The narrow sense refers to one specific day -- the day Christ will return to earth in His Second Coming with His angels. . . . Thus E.W. Bullinger said, It is called 'the great and terrible day of the Lord,' as though it were the climax of the whole period known as 'the day of the Lord.'" Renald E. day - one : Gen. 1:5 ☪ “The word ʔechad’ is most probably to be read as a cardinal number (ʔone) as opposed to an ordinal (ʔfirst) in contrast to many translations. Thus it appears that the text is in fact defining what a ‘day’ is in the rest of the creation Week. . . . Concerning the use of the cardinal as opposed to the ordinal in 1:5b, it will be helpful to examine this a little further. For a more detailed examination of echad in Genesis 1:5, the definitive study is that of Andrew Steinmann. After examining echad as an ordinal number in numbering units of time he concludes that it may be used in place of the ordinal rʔishon in only two idioms: namely to ‘designate the day of a month, the other the year of a reign of a king’. . . . when echad is unaccompanied by the article and used adjectively it is reasonable that it be considered as a cardinal (ʔone). Some may challenge this conclusion claiming that it may be an example of ‘denying the antecedent’ but it does seem to have merit. . . . Given that Genesis 1 is describing a sequence of creative acts one would expect to find the first day designated by the ordinal rʔishon. Instead, we find the cardinal form echad. From the preceding overview of lists it would seem clear that this initial appearance of the cardinal form is in fact signifying a cardinal meaning. Furthermore, both echad and yôm are without the article indicating that the expression denotes ‘one day’. . . . In light of the preceding, it is clearly preferable to read 1:5b as defining a yôm for the following sequence of ordinals—namely one cycle of evening and morning, signifying a complete 24-hour day embracing both the period of darkness and the period of light. Having used the cardinal echad to establish that definition of yôm, the chapter then goes on in the expected ordinal sequence.” Francis Humphrey, The meaning of yôm in Genesis 1:1-2:4, Ref-0784, 21(2) 2007, 52:55, pp. 52-54.

day - period : Gen. 19:34; Lev. 23:27; Mtt. 28:1; Mark 1:32; Mark 11:11-12; Mark 16:1; Luke 4:40; Luke 23:56; John 20:1; Acts 4:3 ☪ “Summing up the different reckonings among different people in his time Pliny wrote: The Babylonians count the period between two sunrises, the Athenians that between two sunsets, the Umbrians from midday to midday, the common people everywhere from dawn to dark, the Roman priests and the authorities who fixed the official day, and also the Egyptians and Hipparchus, the period from midnight to midnight. In the Old Testament the earlier practice seems to have been to consider that the day began in the morning. In Gen. 19:34, for example, the “morrow” (ASV) or “next day” (RSV) clearly begins with the morning after the preceding night. The later practice was to count the day as beginning in the evening. . . . (Lev. 23:27). . . . In the New Testament and the Synoptic Gospels and Acts the day seems usually to be considered as beginning in the morning. Mark 11:11 states that Jesus entered Jerusalem, went into the temple, and when he had looked at everything, since it was “now eventide” (ASV) or “already late” (RSV), went out to Bethany with the twelve; verse 12 continues the narrative and tells that on the “morrow” (ASV) or “following day” (RSV) they came back to the city. It is evident that the new day has begun with the morning following the preceding evening. Likewise Mtt. 28:1, Mark 16:1f, and Luke 23:56-24:1 all picture the first day of the week beginning with the dawn following the preceding Sabbath. And Acts 4:3, for an example in that book, tell show Peter and John were put in custody, “until the morrow, for it was already evening,” thus clearly indicating that the new day would begin the next morning. It has been suggested that the counting of the day as beginning with the morning is a continuation of the earlier Old Testament practice already described, and that this usage was maintained in parts of Galilee and was followed by Jesus and the early disciples, which would account for its appearing so frequently in the Synoptic Gospels and Acts. On the other hand, even the common reckoning in the Synoptic Gospels is from the morning, in Mark 1:32 = Luke 4:40, the later Old Testament and Jewish usage of counting the one day as ending and the next as beginning at sunset is plainly reflected in the fact that the people of Capernaum were free to bring the sick to Jesus at sunset when the Sabbath came to an end. As for the Fourth Gospel, in John 20:1 Mary Magdalene comes to the tomb while it is still dark, yet it is already “on the first day of the week.” This can be explained by supposed that the late Old Testament and Jewish usage is in view, according to which the new day had begun at the preceding sunset, or it can be explained equally well by supposing that John is giving the description in terms of the official Roman day which, as Pliny told us, began at midnight. In either case the new day had begun already before sunrise.” Ref-0840, pp. 7-8.

In the New Testament, as in Roman and Egyptian practice, we find four watches of the night: evening, midnight, cockcrow, and morning (Mtt. 24:15; Mark 13:35).” Ref-0840, p. 9. “The night was divided into a series of watches, a watch being the period of time a group of soldiers stood guard before being relieved. It appears that during Old Testament times the Jews used a system of three watches per night. This is the implication of the reference to “the middle watch” in Judges 7:19. During the Roman period, the New Testament Era, there were four watches. The first watch (opse, late) ran roughly from 6:00 to 9:00 P.M.; the second (mesonyktion, midnight) from 9:00 to midnight; the third (alektorophônia, cock crowing) from midnight until 3:00 A.M.; and the fourth watch (prōi, early) from 3:00 to 6:00 A.M. All four of the night watches are mentioned in Mark 13:35.” Ref-1200, p. 261.

But here, and in many other places, the word simply refers to the shared ministry of all believers as servants. This is clear from the following verse in which she is to be received in a manner worthy of the saints -- she holds no special office. Other passages clearly preclude women serving as deacons. “In the Greek language of New Testament times, Koine Greek, there was no special word for deaconess. The first recorded instance of the Greek word, διακονισσα (?deaconess’), appears to be in the nineteenth canon of the First Council of Nicaea (A.D. 325). However, the Greek noun diakonos, although masculine in form is among a select number of second declension nouns that can be either masculine or feminine. Thus the masculine form can apply to women. There is no special feminine form such as diakone”. Ref-0118, p. 116. See deacon - office.

Man’s freedom is the freedom of a creature. Since the will of man is, by nature, finite and limited, would it not of necessity follow that ‘free will’ would, likewise, have to be limited by the state of the will, both as to its creation and its servitude to sin? Surely, and yet, we find so many today who wish to place man’s will above God’s even in the matter of whether Christ’s work on the cross will succeed in its intention! Do we truly wish to turn God into the puppet controlled by the almighty creature by sacrificing His eternal decree on the altar of man’s free will?” James White, The Divine Sovereignty - Human Responsibility Debate (Part Two), Ref-0113, Vol. 24, No. 1, 2002, p. 47. “What does it mean to say that I am free? It means that I am not under constraint. Thus, I am free to do whatever pleases me. But am I free with respect to what pleases me and what does not? To put it differently, I may choose one action over another because it holds more appeal for me. But I am not fully in control of the appeal which each of those actions holds for me. . . . I make all my decisions, but those decisions are in large measure influenced by certain characteristics of mine which I am not capable of altering by my own choice. . . . In that respect my freedom is limited. I do not know whether it is my genes or environmental conditioning which has caused my [preferences], but it is apparent that I cannot by mere force of will alter this characteristic of mine. . . . And here arises the questions: Who set up these factors? The theistic answer is, ‘God did.’ I am free to choose among various options. But my choice will be influenced by who I am. Therefore, my freedom must be understood as my ability to choose among options in light of who I am. And who I am is a result of God’s decision and activity. . . . Is God’s having rendered human decisions and actions certain compatible with human freedom? . . . According to the position we are espousing, the answer to the question, ‘Could the individual have chosen differently?’ is yes, while the answer to the question, ‘But would he have?’ is no. In our understanding, for human freedom to exist, only the first question need be answered in the affirmative.” Ref-0139, pp. 357-359.

dead - spiritually - Canons of Dort : ☪ “The Canons of Dort express the first of the five points of Calvinism, total depravity, this way: Therefore, all people are conceived in sin and are born children of wrath, unfit for any saving good, inclined to evil, dead in their sins, and slaves to sin; without the grace of the regenerating Holy Spirit they are neither willing nor able to return to God, to reform their distorted nature, or even to dispose themselves to such reform. (Article 3, Third Main Point).” Ref-0189, pp. 46-47.

dead - spiritually - dispensationalism : ☪ + “Theologians who are godly and skilled in Scripture studies know that “dead in sins” means just that. This is part and parcel of the issue of Total Depravity. Through the generations almost all dispensationalists have been Calvinists, and they have held tightly to the issues of Depravity, the Sovereignty of God, the inability of man to believe unless the Holy Spirit works, and the doctrines of the absolute Sovereignty and Providence of God! “Deadness” has always been a cardinal belief of those in the Reformed and dispensational camps.” Mal Couch, Dead in Trespasses and Sins, Ref-0055, vol. 9 no. 27 August 2005 225:240, p. 237.

dead - spiritually - Wesleyan : ☪ + “Wesleyans acknowledge that after the Fall persons have been infected by sin, pride, and a rebellious spirit in every part; by their own power and their own will they can choose nothing but sin. Wesley held that there is neither natural knowledge of God nor natural conscience in men and women. When Paul speaks of these two sources of the knowledge of God, for which all are held accountable and because of which any who continue in their sin are condemned, he is speaking of the preventive grace of God at work in drawing all persons to Himself.” Melvin E. Dieter, “The Wesleyan Perspective”, Ref-0238, p. 24.

Results indicated an age of 1,917 years with a two-hundred-year (10 percent) variant, which left the date somewhere between 168 B.C. and A.D. 233. . . . Another means of dating was found in paleography (ancient writing forms) and orthography (spelling), which indicated a date for some of the manuscripts before 100 B.C. . . . W.F. Dead Sea Scrolls - Hebrew Bible : ☪ “The texts discovered and studied appear to represent about five hundred separate documents, about one hundred of them being copies of books of the Hebrew Bible (some books in particular being presented by several copies). A few of these copies are substantially complete, but most are very fragmentary. All the books of the Hebrew Bible are represented among them, with the exception of Esther.” [Ref-0073, pp. 38-29. For a chart relating manuscript copies to OT books, see Ref-0074, p. 80. “Altogether there are about two hundred [scrolls of the Old Testament], but many of these are no more than fragments. According to a recent count, the Book of Psalms is represented in the largest number of manuscripts (36), followed by Deuteronomy (29), Isaiah (21), Exodus (17), Genesis (15), and so on. Of course, these numbers may need to be adjusted, depending on further publications or reassessments.” Ref-0236, p. 135. “Between 223 and 233 copies of the Hebrew Scriptures were discovered and compared with the present text. The only Old Testament book not found was Esther.” Peter Colon, The Dead Sea Scrolls' True Treasure, Ref-0057, January/February 2006, p. 29.

Dead Sea Scrolls - Isaiah : ☪ + Shrine of the Book contains a complete Isaiah scroll from the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Dead Sea Scrolls - Masoretic Text upheld : Isa. 53:3; Isa. 53:7 ☪ “The scrolls give an overwhelming confirmation of the fidelity of the Masoretic Text. Millar Burrows, in his valuable work entitled The Dead Sea Scrolls, writes, ‘It is a matter of wonder that through something like a thousand years the text underwent so little alteration. As I said in my first article on the scroll, Herein lies its chief importance, supporting the fidelity of the Masoretic tradition.” Ref-0075, pp. 366-367, quoting Millar Burrows, The Dead Sea Scrolls, p. 304. “Even though the two copies of Isaiah discovered in Qumran Cave 1. . . were a thousand years earlier than the oldest dated manuscript previously known (A.D. 980), they proved to be word for word identical with our standard Hebrew Bible in more than 95 percent of the text, but in 1QIs^b, (ca. 75 B.C.) the preserved text is almost letter for letter identical with the Leningrad Manuscript. The five percent of variation consisted chiefly of obvious slips of the pen and variations in spelling.” Ref-0001, p. 29. “To be specific, the Isaiah scroll (1Q Isa) from Qumran led the Revised Standard Version translators to make only thirteen changes from the Masoretic Text; eight of those were known from ancient versions, and few of them were significant. More specifically, of the 166 Hebrew words in Isaiah 53 only seventeen Hebrew letters in 1Q Isb differ from the Masoretic Text. Ten letters are a matter of spelling, four are stylistic changes, and the other three compose the word for ‘light’ (add in v. 11), which does not affect the meaning greatly. Furthermore, the word is also found in that verse in the LXX and 1Q Is[a].” Ref-0075, p. 382, quoting Harris, Inspiration and Canonicity, p. 124. “1QIs^a is the usual designation for the great Isaiah Scroll, one of the manuscripts in the first discovery. Dated about 100 B.C. or earlier, it is a complete copy of the Book of Isaiah, except for a few small breaks in the text. For all practical purposes, the text of this ancient scroll reads the same as the standard Massoretic Text printed in current Hebrew Bibles. There are, to be sure, a number of divergent readings represented in it, some of which are worthwhile; but the majority of readings has to do with such things as spelling, grammar, and modifications of vocabulary. Indeed, 1QIs^a may be described as a kind of updating of the text whose older form is still retained in the Massoretic Text.” Ref-0236, p. 136. “Comparing the great Isaiah Manuscript (1QIs^a) with our present Hebrew text, we are able to count thirty-seven variant readings in this chapter. But practically all of these variants are no more than spelling differences. Only three of them are large enough to be reflected in an English translation, and of these not one is significant. These three variants are: “they were calling” instead of “one called to another” (Isa. 53:3); “holy holy,” instead of “holy, holy, holy” (Isa. 53:3); and “sins” for “sin” (Isa. 53:7). In these cases our present text (Massoretic Text) is unquestionably better than that found in the Isaiah Manuscript.” Ref-0236, p. 139. “The [Isaiah 1QIsa^a] scroll, itself a many-generational copy, proved to be identical to the Masoretic Text of Isaiah in more than 95 percent of the text. The 5 percent variation consisted primarily of obvious slips of the pen and spelling alternations. This also proved to be the case for all of the other biblical scrolls among the Dead Sea Scrolls. In fact, about 60 percent of these biblical texts reflect the same text as that in the Masoretic Text. Although interesting deviations and additions do appear and are of great value in understanding the history of the transmission of the biblical text, on the whole the scrolls testify to the exceptional preservation of the biblical text through the centuries and validate the traditional text as the closest witness we have to the original.” Ref-0818, p. 65. “The textual accuracy of the Masoretic--as well as of the Qumran scribes--can be seen by a comparison of text of the Dead Sea Isaiah Scroll (1QIsa^a) with the Masoretic Text. It shows that the two texts are almost identical--only three words are spelled differently. For a book that runs 66 chapters (about 100 pages in our English Bibles), this reveals a remarkable degree of care taken in the textual transmission between the time of the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Masoretic Text.” Ref-0818, p. 200. “The Great Isaiah Scroll contains more than 25% of all the biblical text among the Dead Sea Scrolls. It is almost completely preserved. Virtually every part of all 66 chapters of Isaiah are found in the Great Isaiah Scroll. . . . The scroll demonstrates that your Bible is 99% accurate. We are confirming the Word of God and getting to that 1% of readings that are difficult. The NRSV adopts 85 readings like the “He will see light” reading. The NIV has adopted 22. At this early stage, there are about 100 better readings discovered in the Scrolls that have been proposed for English translations. Some of the bibles that adopt these readings are the RSV, [N]RSV, and NIV. However, there are some that stick to the traditional Hebrew text, like the KJV. Those translations will not adopt the 1% better readings. . . . Scholars who love the Scriptures are not easily convinced to make changes.” John D. Barry, The Great Isaiah Scroll and the Original Bible: An Interview with Dr. Peter Flint, Ref-0066, 23.4 (2010), 110-112, p. 111.

deity - Jesus equal with God : Num. 21:6 (cf. 1Cor. 10:9); Isa. 45:23 (cf. Php. 1:10); Isa. 49:10 (cf. Rev. 7:17); Luke 1:76; Luke 22:69; John 1:1; John 5:18; John 5:23; John 8:58; John 10:30-33; John 10:38; John 12:45; John 14:1; John 14:9; John 19:7; Rom. 9:5; 1Cor. 10:9 (cf. Num. 21:6); Php. 1:10 (cf. Isa. 45:23); Php. 1:19; Php. 2:6; Col. 2:2; 1Ti. 3:16; Heb. 3:1-6; Rev. 7:17 (cf. Isa. 49:10) ☩ "θεος cannot be watered down as in the Jehovah's Witnesses translation "and the Word was a god." Members of that cult note that the word 'God' is anarthrous (lacking the article) in the Greek text. Since John did not write 'the God,' they conclude he meant 'a god.' This translation, however, is erroneous for four reasons, as Harris points out [Cf. Harris, Jesus as God, 57-71]. First, a theological reason: If they took their own translation seriously, the Jehovah's Witnesses would believe in polytheism. . . John's monotheism makes this rendering impossible. The Bible teaches there is one God (Deu. 6:4). A monotheist could apply the singular θεος (?God') only to the Supreme Being and not to an inferior divine being. Second, a literary reason: Elsewhere in John Jesus is called 'God,' and in one of those verses (John 20:28, 'My Lord and my God') the article is used. The argument that John does not call Jesus 'God' is therefore baseless. Third, a grammatical reason: In their discussion of John 1:1 the Jehovah's Witnesses betray their lack of understanding of Greek grammar. In the clause και θεος ην ο λογος the subject, although it follows the verb, is 'the Word' . . . because it has the article. The word 'God' (θεος), which precedes the copulative verb ην, is an anarthrous predicate nominative. In his analysis of predicate nouns in Mark and John, Harner concluded that 'anarthrous predicate nouns preceding the verb may be primarily qualitative in force yet may also have some connotation of definiteness.' Harner's paraphrase is to the point: 'the Word had the same nature as God.' Fourth, a grammatical-theological reason: If John had used the article before θεος in this clause he would have been writing, 'The Son was the Father.' But this would contradict the second clause of verse 1 in which he distinguished the λογος from the Father. Sabellius, an early third-century A.D. heretic, denied the Trinity, . . . he said that 'Father,' 'Son,' and 'Spirit' are different 'modes' that the one person used in different eras. If John followed the view of Jehovah's Witnesses, he would have been saying, like Sabellius, that the Son is the Father." David J. design - intelligent - criticism : ☉ + "Thus, fighting naturalism only in biology will not work. Ignoring the Bible -- especially Genesis -- and its testimony to the cosmic impact of sin and God's judgments at the fall, the flood, and the Tower of Babel, even though arguing for design in living things (and even God's designing activity), will not lead people to the true and living God, but rather away from Him and His holy Word. Nor will fighting naturalism only in biology, while tolerating or even promoting naturalism in geology and astronomy, break the stranglehold of naturalism on science. So the "wedge" of the ID movement is not a wedge (leading to more truth) at all. It is simply a nail, which will not split the log open. It will not lead the scientific establishment to embrace the biblical view of creation, nor will it lead most people to the true God, the Creator who has spoken in only one book, the Bible." Terry Mortenson, "Philosophical Naturalism and the Age of the Earth: Are they Related?," Ref-0164, 15/1 (Spring 2004) 71-92, p. 88. "[T]he ID movement is such a mixture of agnostics and theists of great theological variety that it can never be concerned about the faithfulness to the true God and His Word. As noted earlier, there really is no wedge in [Phillip] Johnson's strategy. It is rather a nail strategy that will not split the log. A vaguely defined intelligent designer (not even necessarily divine) is as far as a Scripture-less approach can reach. Having deliberately ignored the biblical teaching given by the Creator -- especially Genesis -- the ID arguments will not open the door to the true God." Deutero-Isaiah Theory - AGAINST : Isa. 6:1; Isa. 6:10; Isa. 53:1; Isa. 61:1-2; Isa. 65:1-2 (cf. Rom. 10:16 and Rom. 10:20); Luke 4:17-19; John 12:37-41; Rom. 10:16 (cf. Isa. 53:1); Rom. 10:20 (cf. Isa. 65:1-2) ☉ "... John 12:28 ascribes Isaiah 53:1 to Isaiah, and John 12:39-40 ascribes Isaiah 6:10 to Isaiah [again]. ... Jesus Christ assumed Isaiah was the author of the whole book. Jesus was given 'the scroll of the prophet Isaiah' (Luke 4:17-19) which He unrolled and from which he read Isaiah 61:1-2" Martin, John A., Isaiah, Ref-0038, p. 1029. "Given that David lived before the invention of internal vowel letters (matres lectionis) in Hebrew, it is certain that he and his contemporaries would have spelled his name as דָּוִד rather than דָּוִיָּד. Consistent with this assumption, the spelling of דָּוִד appears in a recently discovered ninth century B.C. Aramaic inscription from Tel Dan. . . Reflecting this same early spelling convention, the 'shorter' (defective) spelling דָּוִיָּד appears 669 out of 672 times in Samuel and Kings. on the other hand, the 'full' (plene) spelling, דָּוִיָּד, appears in every one of the 272 occurrences of this name in the post-Exilic books of Chronicles and Ezra-Nehemiah. Ezekiel occupies a mid-point in this transition: 'David' appears twice as דָּוִיָּד (Eze. 37:24-25) and twice as D'wyd (Eze. 34:23-24). In view of this development, it is remarkable that the book of Isaiah consistently spells 'David' using the earlier 'defective' spelling דָּוִיָּד (Isa. 7:2,13; 16:5; 22:9,22; 29:1; 37:35; 38:5; 55:3). This practice is expected for Isaiah 1-39, chapters which are generally attributed to the eighth century B.C. prophet Isaiah. The example in chapter 55, however, is tantalizing, even if it is not decisive, because many modern scholars date Isaiah 40-55 to the late Exilic or post-Exilic period." Gordon P. Hugenberger, Ref-0184, p. 15. Paul attributes both Isa. 53:1 (cited in Rom. 10:16) and Isa. 65:1-2 (cited by Rom. 10:20) to Isaiah. For a discussion on the light the Dead Sea Scrolls shed on this debate, see Ref-0218, pp. 24-25. "Isaianic authorship for the entire book of Isaiah is indicated by Sir 48:17-25. C. Taylor, Schechter's co-editor of The Wisdom of Ben Sira, recognized that "from the end of chapter 48 it was sufficiently obvious that he [Ben Sira] credited one author with the book of Isaiah as a whole." E. J. Young also noted that the Greek text of Ben Sira employs the same Greek word for "comfort" (parakalein) that is used in the LXX of Isa 40:1 and 61:1-2. He also noted that the Hebrew of this passage also uses the same Hebrew word (naham) as the Isaiah passages. Dr. Young found it curious that the alleged "Second Isaiah" was unknown to Ben Sira, especially since this "Second Isaiah" was supposed to be one of the greatest of the prophets, and Ben Sira appears to have studied the prophets closely (see Sir 39:1, 7-8)." Douglas E. Fox, Ben Sira on OT Canon Again: The Date of Daniel, Ref-0845, 49:2, Fall 1987, p. 335. "... many people ask the question, 'Is there a division in the Great Isaiah Scroll between chapters 1-39 and chapters 40-66?' And the answer is: No. There is no division at this point." John D. Barry, The Great Isaiah Scroll and the Original Bible: An Interview with Dr. Peter Flint, Ref-0066, 23.4 (2010), 110-112, p. 111.

Deuteronomy - title : Deu. 1:1; Deu. 17:18 ☉ "Fourth, the charge identifies the document to be copied as "a copy of this Torah" (Deu. 17:18). The translators of the Septuagint sent the history of interpretation of Deuteronomy in a wrong direction in the third century B.C. when they rendered the phrase τὸ δευτερονόμιον τοῦτο, "this second law." This unfortunate rendering is immortalized in the title of the book not only in the Greek version but in all English translations as well, obscuring not only the real meaning of the phrase in this context but also the book's own title, "These are the Words." The word "Deuteronomy" ("Second Law") also clouds the fact that the overriding tone of the book is homiletical, expository, and rhetorical, rather than legal." Daniel I. Block, "The Burden of Leadership: The Mosaic Paradigm of Kingship (Deut. 17:14=20)", Ref-0200, 162 (July-September 2005): 259-78, p. 271.

dew - Baal : Jdg. 6:33-40 ☉ "In several places in Ugaritic texts Baal is identified as the cloud-rider who provides "the dew of heaven." When the Israelites arrived in this land and learned from their Canaanite neighbors how to farm, they learned not only the pragmatics of the planting cycle but also this Canaanite theology. . . . And despite the perspective of the Canaanites to the contrary, the Lord, not Baal, would provide that needed moisture, including both rain and dew (Deu. 11:10-17; 1K. 17:1; Hos. 14:5-8; Hag. 1:10-11). Of course this sets up a competing claim that lies at the heart of scene three in the story of Gideon. The people believes that Baal provided both rain and dew. But the Lord claimed that He provides both rain and dew.” John A. Beck, “Gideon, Dew, and the Narrative-Geographical Shaping of Judges_6:33-40”, Ref-0200, Volume 165 Number 657, January-March 2008, 28:38, pp. 36-37. “In this scene Gideon requested the manipulation of dew on two consecutive evenings; the first would follow more natural expectations building toward the second request which required an unnatural manipulation of dew. Gideon first asked that dew be on a fleece but not on the threshing floor. This request is a natural expectation. Since dew regularly occurred in the evening during this time of the year in this location, it was likely that the fleece would become damp. Since the fleece absorbed water quickly in contrast to the stone threshing floor and since it would evaporate more quickly from the threshing floor than the fleece, this request paralleled natural expectations. This it was not so much the presence of dew but the amount of water in the fleece that captures the reader’s attention. “Gideon rose early the next day; he squeezed the fleece and wrong out the dew--a bowlful of water” (v. 38). The second sign is the culminating moment of the scene marked by an introductory formula and tracking an unnatural manipulation of dew. . . . The details of the second request require that God do something contrary to what would normally be expected. One would expect that the dew would evaporate much more quickly from the threshing floor than from the fleece. But God demonstrated his presence and power by reversing that expectation. . . . The crisis which lies at the heart of the first three scenes concerns Israel’s divided loyalty, offering both the Lord and Baal a seat on the divine throne. The manipulation of dew would be a powerful way for the real deity to stand up and be counted since both Baal and the Lord had claimed the right to provide this moisture so critical to survival in the land.” John A. Beck, “Gideon, Dew, and the Narrative-Geographical Shaping of Judges_6:33-40”, Ref-0200, Volume 165 Number 657, January-March 2008, 28:38, pp. 37-38.

Since the atmosphere of the summer season is rich in moisture but lacks the vertical movement that would produce clouds or rainfall, the summer months in Israel are nearly rain free. The grain is planted so that it can mature during the winter seasons when it rains. But other crops like grapes, figs, pomegranates, and melons mature during the summer months, and so they require dew to reach maturity. Thus dewfall is not just an interesting physical phenomenon in the promised land; it is an essential dimension in

difficulties - bible : ☪ “What causes such contradictions? It is, generally, from not having all the facts. Kenneth Kantzer, one of the founders of Trinity Seminary in Deerfield, Illinois, tells an account of his aunt’s death found in two different newspapers. One newspaper said his aunt was hit by a care while crossing the street and died later that day. Another paper said she was killed when the care in which she was a passenger collided with another vehicle. Both accounts were true. She was hit by a care while crossing the street. Someone put her in his car to take her to the hospital. On the way there was a collision in which she was killed. Not having all the facts can leave us with a misleading feeling that there is a very serious contradiction.” Paul Ferguson, Digging Into the Documents and the Attempting Hijacking of Paradise, Ref-0066, 23.1 (2010), 3:9, p. 8. “. . . remembering B. difficulty - Ahaziah - age at accession : 2K. 8:26; 2Chr. 22:2 ☪ 2Chr. 22:2 gives the age of Ahaziah at his accession as 42, whereas in 2K. 8:26 the age given is 22. Ref-0075, p. 469 (Attributed to copyist error.) “Ahaziah was 22, not 42 when he became sovereign of Judah. That this is the undeniable case may be seen in the simple fact that Jehoram, Ahaziah’s father and predecessor, was 40 years old at the time of his death. . . . For the non Biblicist, the solution is quite simple. The 42 is merely another scribal error where 42 was mistakenly written for 22. . . . A crucial problem with this rationale is that the Hebrew Text does not give numbers. Instead, the words "forty and two years" and "twenty and two years" are written out and the words for "twenty" and "forty" are considerably different. . . . Chronicles recorded an incident and referenced it to the beginning of Asa's dynasty rather than to his actual years of reign. Ahaziah's mother is Athaliah, daughter of Ahab and granddaughter to Omri; hence he is in the direct lineage of both the dynasties of Israel and Judah and moreover is said to be of "the house of Ahab" (2Chr. 22:3-4). . . . Thus the sense of Ahaziah's being "a son of 42 years" in his reigning is seen to refer to his being a son of the dynasty of Omri which was in its 42nd year." Ref-0186, pp. 145-146.

difficulty - angels at tomb of Jesus - one vs. two : Mtt. 28:5; Mark 16:5; Luke 24:4; John 20:12 ☪ Matthew and Mark mention one, Luke and John mention two. ". . . Luke records that two appeared to the three women at their first approach to the empty tomb. John adds that Mary Magdalene came back to the tomb a second time, after Peter and John had been there. It was then that Mary saw and talked to both angels as they sat by the tomb. Matthew indicates that the same angel caused the earthquake, rolled back the stone door, frightened away the guards, and spoke to the three women at their first approach. A careful comparison of the four accounts shows that two angels were involved, although the miracle-working angel was probably the more prominent of the two. There is no demonstrable discrepancy." Ref-0064, pp. 62-63 difficulty - Baasha's 36th year : 1K. 15:33; 1K. 16:6; 1K. 16:8; 1K. 16:23; 2Chr. 16:1 ☪ "The problem encountered here is how Baasha can be said to come up against Asa in the 36th year of that Judaic King's reign (2Chr. 16:1) when other Scripture declares that Baasha died in the 26th year of Asa's regime (1K. 16:6,8, cp. vs. 23)? . . . the Chronicler is referencing the 36 years from the division of the Monarchy at which time the Judaic dynasty, of which Asa belongs, began under Rehoboam. Hence the Hebrew phrase which includes the "reign" of Asa in II Chronicles 16:1 references the kingdom over which Asa had dominion and is to be understood in the sense of "the kingdom of Asa" (Judah) as distinguished from the norther kingdom, not the number of years he had occupied the throne in actual reign. . . . the above interpretation removes the absurdity of Baasha's having invaded Judah ten years after his death (cp. 1K. 15:33)." difficulty - blind men healed - one vs. two : Mtt. 20:30; Mark 10:46; Luke 18:35 ☪ Ref-0064, p. 62. "Concerning the seeming discrepancy of exactly where the two blind men were healed, as any visit to Israel will show, there were two different places named Jericho in the first century. There was the Old Testament Jericho, located where it always was and remains; and there was a New Testament Jericho, built by Herod the Great about five miles from the original. At the time of this particular miracle, Yeshua was moving from north to south, heading for Jerusalem. What this means is that the blind men met Him as He was coming out of Old Jericho and going toward New Jericho. Both gospel statements, then, are true, as it is all a matter of whether the writer was referring to Old or New Jericho." Arnold Fruchtenbaum, Questions and Answers, Ref-0067, Fall 2008, p. 8. difficulty - circumference : 1K. 7:23; 2Chr. 4:2 ☪ Possible answers: 1 - Fractional cubits under 1/2 not used so could be 9.65 cubit diameter = 30.32 cubit circumference or about 10 cubits across and 30 cubits around. 2 - Vessel had a wider brim then circumference of main body. Brim to brim measures 10 cubits whereas outside circumference of vertical sides of main body (narrower below) is 30 cubits. 3 - Common word for circumference is qav, but here the spelling is qaveh (added heh). Marginal note indicates variation or possible error -- also regarded as a remez -- a hint of something deeper. Numeric value of qav is 106, numerical value of qaveh is 111. Ratio is 111/106 = 31.41509433962 cubits. Fifteen times more accurate than 22/7 estimate we use for Pi. Ref-0016, April 1998, p. 6.

According to Jewish law, if there was a dead body in Jerusalem, then the city was to be considered defiled and the morning sacrifice could not be offered. . . . if the corpse was taken and cast into the Valley of Hinnom. . . then the city is cleansed and the Passover can be offered up; later they can return and bury the body. The priests. . . purchased a field in the Valley of Hinnom -- the same place where Judas had 'burst asunder' -- for the purpose of burying strangers. The first person to be buried there was Judas himself. . . . In accordance with the requirements of the law, the field had to be bought posthumously in the name of Judas Iscariot. It is in that sense that Judas 'obtained a field.'" Ref-0011, p. 154.

difficulty - fourteen generations - Matthew's genealogy : Mtt. 1:17 ☪ "There are only forty-one names, and this would leave one set with only thirteen. But does Matthew say he has mentioned forty-two names? He does say (Matt. 1:17) that there are three sets of fourteen and divines them for us himself. . . . The points of division are David and the captivity; in the one case a man, in the other an event. He counts David in each of the first two sets, although Jechoniah is counted only once. But he does not say 'from David to Jechoniah,' but 'from David to the carrying away unto Babylon,' and Josiah is the last name he counts before that event. And so the first name after this same event is Jechoniah. Thus Matthew deliverately counts David in two places to give symmetry to the division, which made an easy help to the memory." Ref-0084, p. 259. "This is in turn probably due to the fact that the Hebrew letters for the name David add up to 14." Ref-0232, p. 292. "David is counted twice as he is the connecting link between the patriarchal line and the royal line to Christ Jesus. David is the last Patriarch (Acts 2:29) and the first sovereign King of the Tribe of Judah. . . . Jechoniah (or Coniah, Jehoiachin, Jechoniah, cp. 2K. 25:27; 1Chr. 3:16; Jer. 22:24-30; 29:1-2; 37:1; 52:31) does not belong in the second group where most place him. The first key in Matthew 1:17 is the word until (or to) "the carrying away into Babylon" which limits the second set of fourteen. The second key in the . . . verse is the word from "the carrying away into Babylon". This "from" sets limits on the third set of fourteen such that when considering the other restricted passages [Mtt. 1:11,12] it may be clearly resolved that Jechoniah is to be counted only in the third group (cp. 2K. 24:8-12; 2Chr. 36). Furthermore, . . . Josiah is the last of the sovereign Kings of David's lineage that sat upon his throne. The point that is being made is that God promised David that his throne and kingdom were to have an enduring and everlasting fulfillment and that the throne of David was a sovereign dominion, not a puppet or vassal of any foreign kingdom (2S. 7; Ps. 89). Whereas it is true that some on the list such as Ahaz, Hezekiah and Manasseh did have periods during their reigns in which they endured subjugation and the paying of tribute to various monarchs of the Assyrian Empire, all enjoyed intervals of sovereign autonomous rule. All of Josiah's sons and his grandson, Jechoniah (Mtt. 1:11, "Jechoniah and his brethren") were vassals to either Egypt or Babylon and not sovereign rulers; thus they do not belong in Matthew's second set." Ref-0186, pp. 40-41. However, Jeremiah refers to Zedekiah, although not Jechoniah's son, as the "king who sits on the throne of David" (Jer. 29:16). The point being that even though Zedekiah's rule is that of a vassal king, he was still deemed to be sitting on the throne of David. "From Abraham to David = 14. From David to Jechonias = 14. From Salathiel to Jesus = 14. [Their sum is 42.] Note that from Mtt. 1:17 David is counted twice, once with the Patriarchs (cp. Acts 2:29!) and again with the Kings." Ref-0186, p. 44. ". . . Matthew 1:17 states that there are fourteen generations "from David until the carrying away into Babylon." . . . but some may still insist that the as the Books of Kings and Chronicles relate that seventeen monarchs ruled over the Kingdom of Judah from David to Josiah, an inaccuracy of some kind must be admitted. . . . However, it must be pointed out that technically speaking, there were but fourteen actual generations between David and Josiah: 1. David; 2. Solomon; 3. Rehoboam; Abijah (reigned 3 years); 4. Asa; 5. Jehoshaphat; 6. Jehoram; Ahaziah (reigned 1 year); 7. Joash; 8. Amaziah; 9. Uzziah; 10. Jotham; 11. Ahaz; 12. Hezekiah; 13. Manasseh; Amon (reigned 2 years); 14. Josiah. Although there were seventeen kings, as shown in the outline above, there reigned for such short terms that it may not properly be said that the duration of their governing or its omission is that of a "generation". Moreover, it actually could be misleading to insist that the interval from David to Josiah was that of seventeen generations whereas it is that of seventeen monarchies." Ref-0186, p. 42.

The Bible says Hezekiah paid him 30 talents of gold and 300 talents of silver. A contradiction? Yes, until it was discovered that 300 talents (by weight) of Palestinian silver equaled 800 talents (by weight) of Assyrian silver. Contradiction? NO. The Bible wasn't in error at all. (See M. difficulty - Jehoahaz - Jehoash : 2K. 13:1; 2K. 13:10 ☪ "The problem arises because Jehoahaz is said to (1) succeed his father Jehu on the throne in the twenty-third year of Joash, King of Judah (2K. 13:1), and (2) reign seventeen years; yet Jehoash is said to have begun reigning in the thirty-seventh year of King Joash of Judah, continuing for sixteen years (2K. 13:10). The enigma is compounded by the fact that Joash is said to have ruled over the southern kingdom forty years, being followed by his son Amaziah in the second year of Jehoash of Israel (2K. 12:1, cp. 2K. 14:1). However contradictory all of this appears, when the triangulation formula is applied and the data diagrammed, the problem is quickly resolved. . . . Jehoahaz installed Jehoash as his viceroy (pro-rex) during the thirty-seventh year of Joash. After a term of nearly 3 years of so functioning, Jehoahaz died leaving the throne to Jehoash who continued sixteen years as sole-rex. The distinction between the positions of viceroy and co-rex is significant in that that a viceroy does not possess the broader authority and powers of a co-regent. A further distinction which naturally follows is that years served in the capacity as co-regent are included along with the years served in the capacity of sole-rex in reckoning the total term of reign whereas the years passed as merely a viceroy (pro-rex) are not." difficulty - Jehoiachin - age at accession : 2K. 24:8; 2Chr. 36:9-10; Mtt. 1:11 ☪ ". . . 2Chr. 36:9 . . . gives the age of Jehoiachin at his accession as eight, whereas in 2K. 24:8 the age given is eighteen." Ref-0064, p. 60. (Attributed to copyist error.) "Jehoiachin was eighteen years of age at his accession and the beginning of his captivity in Babylon (2K. 24:8, cf. 2 Chr. 36:9 where his age is given as eight in most Hebrew manuscripts)." Ref-0839, p. 189. "In fact, three feasible . . . answers are offered . . . the first is that Jehoiachin was actually eighteen years old upon his ascension (2K. 24:8) whereas the II Chronicles 36:9 passage, which literally translates that he was "a son of eight years", is referencing the fact that his dynasty or kingdom had been under Nebuchadnezzar as its suzerain since the fourth year of his father, Jehoiakim (B.C. 605, Jer. 25:1, cp. 2K. 24:1). From that year until Jehoiachin succeeded his father on the throne, an eight year span had elapsed during which he was a vassal crown prince. Thus, upon his accession, the beginning of his reign could be rightly referenced to the time in which Nebuchadnezzar placed the Babylonian yoke upon him and his kingdom, thereby he was "a son of eight years" under Nebuchadnezzar's dominion. . . . A second alternative explanation . . . is that . . . Jehoiakim named or anointed his son to succeed him at an early age (Judaic reckoning) in an attempt to secure the throne through his lineage by way of Jehoiachin (Jeconiah). This would have been done in order to deny the throne to his weak and ineffective younger brother, Zedekiah. The third solution offered, and that preferred by the author in light of that which follows, is that Josiah must have anointed Jehoiachin, his grandson, to succeed him just prior to his encounter with Pharaoh Neco. . . . Realizing that his sons were wicked, godly Josiah must have hoped that his grandson Jehoiachin (Jeconiah) though only eight years old at the time, would turn out better. . . . It is the contention of this writer that Josiah did adopt and name as his legal successor young Jehoiachin (Jeconiah) just prior to departing for his fatal encounter with Neco at Megiddo. Moreover, this scenario enjoys Scriptural corroboration . . . [Mtt. 1:11] . . . Verse eleven asserts that Josiah begat Jeconiah . . . though he was not his son. Although in a larger Biblical sense, it is permissible to speak of "begetting" descendants beyond the generation of one's own offspring, the context of this "begetting" would have occurred at the time of adoption. The truth of this is clearly seen in that which follows: "and his brothers". Now this is indeed very strange, for the allusion is clearly to Josiah's sons and as such, are Jehoiachin's uncles and father -- unless -- unless he had been adopted. Then and only then could it be said that Josiah's sons are Jehoiachin's brothers! Lest there remain any reservations, consider . . . [2Chr. 36:10] . . . Again, how can Zedekiah be Jehoiachin's brother? Only by his being adopted to full sonship. . . . Furthermore, we know that Jehoiachin (Jeconiah) was actually eighteen and not eight when installed to reign as we are informed by the writer of Kings that after reigning only 3 months and 10 days, he and his wives were carried away to Babylon (2K. 24:15)." difficulty - Jeroboam - Amaziah : 2K. 14:1-2; 2K. 14:17; 2K. 14:23; 2K. 15:1-2 ☪ "Another commonly reported contradiction in the Biblical text is that concerning the synchronization involving the reigns of Amaziah and Uzziah (Azariah) of Judah as compared to that of Jeroboam (II) of Israel. This perception arises as a result of Amaziah's being credited with a 29 year rule (2K. 14:1-2) followed by the statement that Jeroboam (II) began his 41 year reign in Amaziah's 15th (2K. 14:23). So far so good, for this precisely fits with the 16th and final year of Jehoash, Jeroboam's father and immediate predecessor. The triangle closes with the testimony that Amaziah of Judah lived 15 years after the death of Jehoash, son of Jehoahaz of Israel (2K. 14:17). As the base is that of 29 years and the two arms of 15 each totals 30, these seemingly antagonistic results simply reveal that a non-accession relationship existed between the regimes of Jehoash and his son Jeroboam (II). . . . however . . . Scripture . . . goes on to add that Uzziah (Azariah) began to reign over the southern kingdom at age sixteen in the 27th year of Jeroboam (II) and continued in his post for fifty-two years (2Ki. 15:1-2). . . . The first and very probably the correct answer is that which has been offered many times in the past . . . Namely, that upon Jehoash's going to face the Syrians in a war in which he overthrew Ben-hadad (III) in three pitched battles and recovered out of his hands the cities which his father (Jehoahaz) had lost to Hazael (Ben-hadad's father), he placed Jeroboam (II) as viceroy (pro-rex) over the government." Here we have a discrepancy in the Masoretic Text that involves what amounts to a decimal point. . . there is nothing to prove that this discrepancy existed in the original manuscripts of Samuel and Chronicles. Gloated over by Strauss and others of his tribe, and dismissed by writers unnumbered either as an enigma or an error, the passage has in recent years been vindicated and explained by the labours of Dr. Zumpt of Berlin. By a strange chance there is a break in the history of this period, for the seven or eight years beginning B.C. 4. The list of the governors of Syria, therefore, fails us, and for the same interval P. Sulpicius Quirinus, the Cyrenius of the Greeks, disappears from history. [The Masoretic text (MT) is the traditional Jewish text of the Hebrew Bible. If, as Mt and LXX agree, Abraham was born when his father was 70 (Gen. 11:26) and left Haran for Canaan when he himself was 75 (Gen. 12:4), then Terah had still 60 years to live. In James Ussher's chronology the statement of Acts 7:4 is reconciled with the MT evidence by the supposition that Terah was 70 when his oldest son was born but was 130 when Abraham was born.]" Ref-0073, p. 54. "The chronological data of Gen. 11:26, 32; 12:4 would suggest that Terah's death took place sixty years after Abraham's departure from Haran. J. Ussher and other chronologers of an earlier day harmonized the present statement of Stephen with the evidence of Genesis by the improbably expedient of supposing that Terah was seventy years old when his oldest son (Haran) was born, and that Abraham was not born until Terah was 130. That Abraham did not leave Haran until his father was dead is asserted also by Philo (On the Migration of Abraham 177), and is implied by the Samaritan Pentateuch, which in Gen. 11:32 gives Terah's age at death as 145, not 205 (MT, LXX). It would follow that Abraham, who left Haran at the age of 75 (Gen. 12:4), did so as soon [as] his father had died. It would be unwarranted to see here evidence of Samaritan influence on Stephen's speech: apart from its recognizably sectarian variants, the Samaritan Pentateuch is basically a popular Palestinian text. Possibly Stephen (or Luke) and Philo relied on a Greek version (no longer extant) which agreed with the Samaritan reading of Gen. 11:32." Ref-0653, pp. 134-135 n. 21. "Others fall into this error due to the fact that Genesis 11:26 says that Terah was 70 years old when he began to beget sons. The verse places Abraham (Abram) first in the list of Terah's three sons, hence they assume without further consideration Abraham to be the firstborn. . . . Albeit Abraham's name is given first, . . . Comparing Genesis 11:32 and 12:4, it may be seen that Abraham was 75 when Terah died at age 205. From this, the fact is firmly established that Terah was 130 years old (205 - 75 = 130) when Abraham was born. This means that although Terah was 70 when he had his first son, that son could not have been Abraham; it had to have been either Nahor or Haran. Moreover, that was one of the main reasons why God had to remove Abraham from Ur. As long as he remained there, he would never become the head of the family clan for by the law of primogeniture, the firstborn son would have so been. Why was Abraham listed first? Because he was the son who received the blessing and the birth right. . . . When speaking of Noah's sons Shem, Ham and Japheth, Shem's name is always mentioned first because he received the birthright and the blessing (Gen. 9:26; Luke 3:36), hence we find the Messiah coming through his lineage. However, Genesis 9:24-25 speaks of Ham as being the youngest son, Gen. 10:21 unmistakably says Japheth was the elder, leaving Shem as the middle son." Ref-0186, pp. 25-26.

difficulty - Zachariah's reign : 2K. 14:1-2; 2K. 14:17; 2K. 14:23-29 Ref-0064 "Uzziah had come to the throne of Judah following 29 years under the government of Amaziah, his father, in the 15th year of the reign of Jeroboam (II) (2K. 14:1-2; cp. 2K. 14:23 and 2K. 14:17 . . .). Jeroboam (II) . . . [held] governmental authority 41 years which would have ended in the 26th year of Uzziah (2K. 14:23-29). The problem arises when the Scriptures continue by saying that Zechariah reigned six months over Israel and was assassinated during the 38th year of Uzziah. This seems to require an interregnum of about eleven and one-half years. . . . Author the author is not certain whether or not the answer originated with Dolen, that analyst has offered the following interesting and attractive solution [Dolen, The Chronology Papers, op. cit., p. 13]: 'Zachariah reigned 6 months and then was killed. . . . in the last 6 months of Azariah's [Uzziah] 38th year . . . This 6 months was the first 6 months of his would be 12th year [of reign]. . . . Note: the total years of Zachariah's reign is not mentioned in the Bible.' (author's brackets). . . . Significantly, an imperceptible clue was uncovered which gives credibility to Dolen's assertion that Zachariah actually ascended the throne of Israel immediately following Jeroboam's death and maintained that position for 12 years unto the 38th year of Uzziah (Azariah), King of Judah. The clue is that the verses describing the time of enthronement of all of the kings mentioned in the proximity of Zachariah's brief account include the single word "began" as in "began to reign" but not so with Zachariah (2K. 12:1; 13:1,10; 14:1 cp. 2Chr. 25:1; 2K. 14:23; 15:1; 15:7, cp. verse 32; 2K. 15:13,17,23,27; 16:1; 17:1; 18:1 etc.)! . . . As can be seen, in stark contrast to all of the other monarchs listed in the above cited Scriptures there is no "began" associated with any of the verses concerning Zachariah's reign. Thus the justified conclusion may be reached that II Kings 15:8 is not speaking of the total length of his regime but rather is merely giving the data for establishing the termination of both his personal reign and that of the Jehuic dynasty (2K. 10:30), which had its prophetic duration fulfilled in Zachariah (2K. 15:12)." So how to explain the stegosaurus glyph? There were no paleontology textbooks 800 years ago to show the ancient carvers what a reconstructed stegosaurus fossil would have looked like. Clearly, the evolutionary history is wrong. Instead, dinosaurs once lived alongside man, just as the Bible says (Gen. 1:24-28, 6:19-20, 8:15-19; Job 40:15-19)." disciple - whom Jesus loved : John 19:26; John 20:2; John 21:7; John 21:20 ☼ "The claim of the Gospel itself is that it was written by an eyewitness. In the last chapter we read of a resurrection appearance of Jesus by the sea of Galilee, at which seven disciples were present, including one who is called 'the disciple whom Jesus loved'. A note at the end of the chapter tells us: 'This is the disciple who testifies of these things and who wrote these things and we know that his testimony is true' (John 21:24). It is not quite clear who are the 'we' who thus add their testimony to the evangelist's veracity; they were probably the group of friends and disciples associated with him where were responsible for the editing and publication of his Gospel. This 'disciple whom Jesus loved' is mentioned also as one of the company at the Last Supper (John 13:23), as being present at the crucifixion (John 19:26), and as an eyewitness, in Peter's company, of the empty tomb on the resurrection morning (John 20:2ff.). Do these passages give us a clue to his identity? According to Mark 14:17, when our Lord arrived at the upper room for the Last Supper, He was accompanied by the twelve apostles, who reclined at the table with Him, and there is no suggestion in the Synoptic Gospels that anyone else was present with Him on that occasion. We conclude therefore, that the 'beloved disciple' was one of the twelve. Now, of the twelve, there were three who were on occasion admitted to more intimate fellowship with the Master -- Peter, James, and John. It was these three, for example, whom he took to keep watch with Him during His vigil in Gethsemane after the Last Supper (Mark 14:33). We should naturally expect that the beloved disciple would be one of the number. He was not Peter, from whom he is emphatically distinguished in John 13:24, 20:2, and 21:20. There remain the two sons of Zebedee, James and John, who were included in the seven of chapter 21. But James was martyred not later than A.D. 44 (Acts 12:2), and therefore there is little likelihood that the saying should go abroad about him which went abroad about the beloved disciple, that he would not die. So we are left with John. Now it is noteworthy that John is not mentioned by name in the fourth Gospel (nor yet is his brother James). It has also been pointed out that while the other evangelists refer to John the Baptist as John the Baptist, the fourth evangelist refers to him simply as John. An author will take care to distinguish two characters in his narrative who bear the same name; he will not be so careful to distinguish one of his characters from himself. The fourth evangelist himself distinguishes Judas Iscariot from Judas 'not Iscariot' (John 14:22). It is significant, therefore, that he does not distinguish John the Baptist from John the apostle, of whom he must have known, though he does not mention him by name." Ref-0239, pp. 44-46. dispensation : Luke 16:2-4; 1Cor. 9:17; Eph. 1:10; Eph. 3:2; Eph. 3:9 (KJV koinonia - fellowship); Col. 1:25 ☪ Greek oikonomia (Strong's g3622) "[By dispensation] [w]e don't mean a way of salvation. We simply mean a distinguishable rule of life or economy. The Stewardship; the economy, the household management; the way God runs His affairs, has changed. The way He deals with people, the way He carries out His sovereign plan has changed. The plan hasn't altered, but the way He works it out, the people He uses and the way it's done, those things have changed, and that's what we mean by a dispensation, (i.e. a distinguishable economy in the outworking of God's purpose)." Robert Lightner, Progressive Dispensationalism, Ref-0055, Vol. 4 No. 11, March 2000, 49-50. "The various forms of the word dispensation appear in the New Testament twenty times. The verb oikonomeo is used once in Luke 16:2, where it is translated 'to be a steward.' The noun oikonomos appears ten times (Luke 12:42; 16:1,3,8; Rom. 16:23; 1Cor. 4:1,2; Gal. 4:2; Titus 1:7; 1 Peter 4:10) and is usually translated 'steward' or 'manager' (but 'treasurer' in Rom. 16:23). The noun oikonomia is used nine times (Luke 16:2,3,4; 1Cor. 9:17; Eph. 1:10; 3:2,9; Col. 1:25; 1Ti. 1:4). In these instances it is translated variously ('stewardship,' 'dispensation,' 'administration,' 'job,' 'commission')." Ref-0056, p. 25. "A concise definition of dispensation is this: A dispensation is a distinguishable economy in the outworking of God's purpose." Ref-0056, p. 28. ". . . oikonomia, from which the English word economy is derived. . . is a combination of two words -- oikos, which means house, and nemo, which means to dispense, manage, or hold sway." Ref-0072, p. 29. "As an example of carelessness by dispensationalists, I would point to the use of oikonomia in Eph 3:2 to establish a rationale for dispensations. Often the dispensationalist says, on the basis of all its uses in the NT, that this word refers to responsibility as a steward, management of a household, a specified time, etc., and then maps all of this onto the concept of 'dispensation.' Not only does this involve illegitimate totality transfer, but I suspect that in context the word refers only to Paul's responsibility, not a plan of the ages. I hope we stop using this argument. It involves poor exegesis and poor lexicography." Karleen, Paul S. Understanding Covenant Theologians. Grace Seminary. If God says no one is righteous and that none seeks on his own to do God's will (and God surely says that), isn't that enough proof? Is God suspect as a potential liar until he runs history through all the dispensations to prove that he was right all along? Moreover, if God is trying to prove this, why seven times over? Wouldn't two or three times do? Or maybe before we can agree, God needs to prove this in all possible economies, and that would surely be more than seven. If this sounds strange, and it does, I suggest that such thinking is utterly wrong-headed." John S. Feinberg, "Systems of Discontinuity," Ref-0199, p. 70.

dispensationalism - antinomian - AGAINST :

☪ + "Dispensationalism is neither antinomian nor entails it." John S. Feinberg, "Systems of Discontinuity," Ref-0199, p. 71. "An approach which eliminates the Mosaic Law as binding authority for Christians is sometimes accused of being 'antinomian' and opening the door to ethical relativity. But two replies to this accusation must be made. First, the position outline here holds that Christians are not under the Mosaic Law, not that they are free from all law. The distinction between the Mosaic Law, which is clearly what the NT writers mean 95 percent of the time when they use the word 'law,' and the theological concept of 'law' needs to be carefully observed. We have seen that the distinction has its roots in the NT, where Paul can distinguish between the Law of Moses and the Law of God (1Cor. 9:20-21). . . Second, in the fear about ethical nihilism, one senses a failure to appreciate the power of God's Spirit operative in the believer. When the 'antinomian' implications of Paul's teaching were raised as an objection against that teaching, Paul responded not by introducing a 'new law' but by pointing to the Spirit (Gal. 5:16ff.) and to union with Christ (Romans 6). . . any approach that substitutes external commands for the Spirit as the basic norm for Christian living runs into serious difficulties with Paul." Douglas J. Moo, "The Law of Moses or the Law of Christ," Ref-0199, p. 218. "Dispensationalism both recognizes and teaches that God has had different Law Codes and when we move from one Law Code to another, and from one dispensation to another, three things happen: Some commandments are repeated; some commandments are discontinued; and, some commandments are new which were not in force previously. So yes, many commandments between the Mosaic Law and the Law of the Messiah, (nine of the ten are repeated, as well as others beyond the ten are repeated), they should not be interpreted as part of the Mosaic Law continuing and should be interpreted that we are now under a new Law Code, the Law of the Messiah, where some commandments are repeated, some commandments are discontinued and some commandments are brand new." divorce - certificate : Deu. 24:1; Mtt. 5:31; Mtt. 19:7; Mark 10:4 ☺ "Christ's words on divorce have to do with Pharisaical interpretations regarding Deuteronomy 24:1, which allowed a man to divorce his wife because of here commission of the "indecent thing." The Hillel school interpreted the "indecent thing" quite liberally even allowing a man to divorce his wife if she burned his food. The Shammai School interpreted "indecent "thing" more strictly as pertaining to adultery. Christ's point was that if a man divorced His wife for an inappropriate reason, his actions forced her to remarry. This remarriage makes her along with the man that she married adulterers. Appropriate reasons for the initial divorce include death (Rom. 7:1-3; 1Cor. 7:39), abandonment (1Cor 7:15,39), and adultery (Mtt. 5:32; 19:9)." DNA - chimps vs. humans : ☺ "These highly selective data-discarding techniques, fueled by Darwinian dogma, lead to the commonly claimed 98 percent similarity in DNA between human and chimp. Based on the reanalysis of DNA similarity estimates using discarded data in leading secular research publications, it is safe to conclude that genome-wide DNA similarity between human and chimpanzee is not more than 81 to 87 percent identical. These numbers are in good agreement with the range of estimates obtained by ICR's independent research. One must keep in mind that the chimpanzee genome is larger than the human genome by at least 8 percent (based on current data). Also, many non-similar regions of DNA between the human and chimpanzee genomes cannot be accurately compared due to high levels of dissimilarity. Therefore, overall genome similarity between human and chimpanzee is most likely lower than 81 percent." Jeffrey Tomkins, Journal Reports Bias in Human-Chimp Studies, [<http://www.icr.org/article/6777/>] doctrine - defection gradual : ☺ + "History affords us notable examples of institutions and denominations that have gone astray. At times it is not easy to perceive how this happened. The trend away from orthodoxy may be slow in movement, gradual in its scope, and almost invisible to the naked eye. When people awaken to what has happened, it is too late. In medicine, thousands of people die unnecessarily because the cancers that kill them have been diagnosed too late. The cancers existed long before the diagnoses, and they grew and spread until the situations, when diagnosed at last, were hopeless. Theological aberration, like cancer, begins as a small and seemingly insignificant blemish, but when it is left to itself it grows and spreads." Ref-1101, p. 185.

doctrine - defection unethical : ☺ + "No one can fault the person who wishes to believe as he chooses. Freedom of religion includes the freedom to be an atheist, an agnostic, or a theist. But ethics requires that when a man no longer believes what he has sworn he believes, he must make that change of belief clear. He has two courses open to him. Either the institution or the church can then change its commitment to those doctrines he no longer believes, or he can demit the institution or the Church. But for anyone to remain mute and to stay in a school or denomination when he disbelieves the standards the institution or church teaches is unethical." Ref-1101, p. 198.

doctrine - historic development : ☺ "There is some evidence that the church has been progressing throughout the centuries of its history through its major areas of doctrine beginning with bibliology and theology proper as in the early centuries of the church, advancing to such subjects as anthropology and hamartiology in the fourth and succeeding centuries, and dealing with soteriology and ecclesiology in the Protestant Reformation. It has been mostly in the last century that eschatology has really come to the fore as an area for scholarly study and debate." John F. Walvoord, The Church in Prophecy (Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan Publishing House, 1964), p. 127. [Italics added.]

doctrine - historic passages misused : Acts 2:1 ☺ + "Without analyzing the specifics, as a general principle I hold that doctrine based on history without the corroboration of apostolic teaching is insecure. History uninterpreted by Scripture may not be made normative, since Scripture does not treat historical data that way and, if such a hermeneutic principle is admitted, the potential abuses are virtually limitless." doctrine - postmodernism downplays : ☺ + "Postmodernists think that the exposed action of combining contradictory terms while smiling and humming a melody that uses terms "love" and "flowers" results in something deeply spiritual. If one is simply postmodern in orientation then every statement, including clear denials of the unchanging truths of historic Christian doctrine, is considered loving, spiritual, and Christian (i.e. defining doctrine down). However, if such denigration of historic Christian doctrine is offensive, then one is considered hateful, irrelevant, unkind, unloving, and unspiritual (i.e. defining doctrine up). Of course, this is just one aspect of the Emerging Church conversation. Is it any surprise that the Apostle Paul, or any biblical author, is not the favorite writer in the "conversation"? Ron J. Documentary Hypothesis promotes the idea that Moses did not write the "books of Moses." Jesus said otherwise. "According to critical scholars, Numbers 6:23-27 should be attributed to the so-called "P source" which is generally dated to the Post-Exilic, or Persian Period. It is obvious that we now have two examples of this text that were written prior to the Babylonian captivity. This makes it impossible to assume that the Priestly Benediction was crystallized during the Post-Exilic period." Gordon Franz, Remember, Archaeology is NOT a Treasure Hunt!, Ref-0066, 18.2 (2005), p. 59. "[T]he basic thrust of what is called the Documentary Hypothesis remains the same: the Pentateuch is divisible into at least four basic sources, each of which can be roughly dated to represent different stages in Israel's (thoroughly naturalistic) religious history. . . . The original Documentary Hypothesis suggested a mere four sources behind the Pentateuch: 1. J, or Jahwist, for an early priest (c. 900 BC) who preferred Jahweh as the divine name, and viewed God in somewhat anthropomorphic terms; 2. E, or Elohist, a slightly later priest who preferred Elohim as the divine name, and viewed God as more transcendent; 3. D, or Deuteronomist, the author of Deuteronomy who fabricated that work at the time of Josiah and presented it as an authentic work of Moses (and of course, it was accepted at once as authoritative by the conveniently, 'enormously naive' Josiah [p. 45]); and 4. P, pr Priestly, a rather sour-minded religionist of very late date who combined J, E and D and added his own touches." James Patrick Holding, Debunking the Documentary Hypothesis, Ref-0691 Vol 19(3) ISSN 1036-2916, 37:40, p. 37. "one of the keystones of the JEDP theory [is] the variation of divine names in the text (Yahweh, Elohim) and particularly Exodus 6:3 . . . which is claimed to prove that earlier uses of Yahweh by Abraham and his contemporaries must have been imposed upon them, so that this is proof of an invented 'Yahwist' text in Genesis. Phelan presents numerous solutions to this issue, all of them helpful; perhaps the most parsimonious is the answer taken from Garrett that the grammar of the verse means it should read, 'Did I not make myself known to them?' -- a reading which by itself literally renders dozens of books by JEDP theorists completely obsolete." James Patrick Holding, Debunking the Documentary Hypothesis, Ref-0691 Vol 19(3) ISSN 1036-2916, 37:40, p. 39. "French physician Jean Astruc developed the original Documentary Hypothesis in 1753, and it went through many different alterations until Karl Graf revised the initial hypothesis in the mid-nineteenth century." Jacob Gaddala, The Cultural Background of the Pentateuch in Defense of Mosaic Authorship, Ref-0785, Volume 15, Number 44, April 2011, 33-40, p. 34.

Domitian - emperor - god : ☪ + "Suetonius (AD 75-ca. 140), in his book Lives of the Caesars, wrote, 'With no less arrogance he began as follows in issuing a circular letter in the name of his procurators, "Our Master and our God bids that this be done" (Dominus et deus noster hoc fieri iubet; 1992: Domitian 13.2[LCL 31:367]). . . . Dio Cassius, in his Roman History, wrote, 'For he even insisted upon being regarded as a god [theos] and took vast pride in being called "master" [despotus] and "god" [theos] . . . These titles were used not merely in speech but also in written documents.' (1995: Epitome of Book 67.5.7 [LCL 176:329])." Gordon Franz, "Propaganda, Power and the Perversion of Biblical Truths: Coins Illustrating The Book of Revelation", Ref-0066, 19.3 (2006), 73:87, p. 75. "Dr. Ernest Janzen, of the University of Toronto, in an article entitled "The Jesus of the Apocalypse Wears the Emperor's Clothes" (1994, see also 1993), provides two lines of evidence from numismatics for Domitian's claim to deity. The first are coins minted in A.D. 83 called the DIVI CAESAR ("divine Caesar") coins (Vagi 1999:329, coins 1160, 1161, 1162). These coins, minted in gold and silver, had the bust of Domitia, the wife of Domitian, on the obverse with the inscription, DIVI CAESAR MATRI and DIVI CAESAR MATER, "mother of the divine Caesar" . . . On the reverse was their infant son who was born in the second consulship of Domitian in A.D. 73 and died in the second year after he became emperor in A.D. 82 . . . He is depicted as naked and seated on a zoned globe with his arm stretched out surrounded by seven stars! . . . The inscription surrounding it says DIVIS CAESAR IMP DOMITIANI F, "the divine Caesar, son of the emperor Domitian." . . . It goes without saying that if he is the son of a god, then his father, Domitian, must be god!" Gordon Franz, "Propaganda, Power and the Perversion of Biblical Truths: Coins Illustrating The Book of Revelation", Ref-0066, 19.3 (2006), 73:87, p. 77. "In 84 Domitian struck reverse type Jupiter holding thunderbolt and spear. The first issue of 85 continued this type but the second issue witnessed the fulmen [thunderbolt] in Domitian's hand. He and Jupiter would "shared" the fulmen for the years 85-6 after which Jupiter remained as a regular type, only without fulmen, persuasive evidence of a developing megalomania which placed the fulmen in Domitian's hand, being clearly patterned after the Jupiter with fulmen type. . . ." "Some final considerations regarding "fulfillment" terminology seem to be in order. We repeat the words of Terry in this connection: "We have already seen that the Bible has its riddles, enigmas, and dark sayings, but whenever they are given the context clearly advises us of the fact. To assume, in the absence of any hint, that we have an enigma, and in the face of explicit statements to the contrary, that any specific prophecy has a double sense, a primary and a secondary meaning, a near and a remote fulfillment, must necessarily introduce an element of uncertainty and confusion into biblical interpretation." Looking at the context of the 14 occurrences of tahash in the Old Testament -- used in reference to the outer covering for the tabernacle (Exodus 25:5; 26:14; 35:7; 35:23; 36:19; 39:34), the covering for the Ark of the Covenant (Numbers 4:6, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 25) and for leather sandals (Ezekiel 16:10) -- it would seem 'badger' is unlikely. A small animal, it has very thin skin. The skins Moses wrote about were to be an external covering over the inner layer of ram skins (dyed red). Ram (sheep) skin is not very waterproof . . . , whereas dugong leather is, making it ideal as a protective covering. Being so thin, badger skins would probably be even more porous than sheep skin and would be difficult to sew into a large covering that would not tear upon handling (the tabernacle was a mobile place of worship). Badger skin/leather would also be a very poor material for making sandals. Dugongs were common in the Gulf of Aqabah until the early 19th century and their skins were traded in ancient times throughout the Middle East. Today, dugongs are still fairly common in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. Further more, there is a Hebrew word for rock-badger or hyrax -- shaphan (שַׁפְּחָן). If these maps are correct, they indicate that the universe is isotropic but not homogeneous. Therefore the evidence would seem to indicate that the cosmological principle is wrong. That means that the universe has a unique centre. And we are somewhere near that centre." Ref-0813, p. 85. "However, creationist physicist Russell Humphreys has pointed out that since we can see these quantized galaxy redshifts in every direction, and at the same discrete intervals, this means that the galaxies must lie on the surfaces of a series of concentric "shells," with each "shell" corresponding to a peak abundance in the redshift distribution. Humphreys further points out that the only way we could see this pattern is if we were at or near the center of it. If we were a long way from the center then the patter would be lost. Thus, our galaxy could well be at or near the center of the universe." Ref-0814, p. 135."The Wilkinson Microwave Anisotropy Probe (WMAP) produced detailed maps of the CMBR, collected in 2002. While some commentators loudly proclaimed that the results confirmed the big-bang theory, there were other observations that didn't fit. For example, when the data is projected onto a sphere, representing the way it was collected (i.e., from every direction in space) then the components of it called the "octopole and quadrupole components" produce a perfect pattern of cosmic north and south poles and a cosmic equator. Dr. Max Tegmark of the University of Pennsylvania, who processed the image, called the result "bizarre." "It could be telling us something about the shape of space on the largest scales. We did not expect this and we cannot yet explain it," he said. If they could only allow the possibility that we might be at or near the center of the universe, then perhaps they could explain it! The fourth line of evidence is the recent large-scale map of the galaxies, known as the Sloan Digital Sky Survey (SDSS). It reveals a picture of the universe completely opposed to the cosmological principle. The galaxies appear to be distributed in concentric shells focused on our galaxy, and they are far more dense close in than farther out. A big-bang universe would not produce concentric shells around our location in the sky, and the density of galaxies should increase, not decrease, as you look back in time -- because the galaxies were supposedly much closer together in the past."  ☉ "The prophets sometimes saw future events not only together, but in expanding their description of these events, they seem occasionally to reverse the time sequence in their record of the vision. An example of this may be seen in Isaiah 65:17-25 . . . It is apparent, therefore, that Isaiah saw together on the screen of prophecy both the Millennial Kingdom and the Eternal Kingdom; but he expands in detail the former because it is the 'nearest coming' event and leaves the latter for fuller description in a later New Testament revelation [Rev. 21:1-8]." Ref-0183, p. 138.

 "Standing above all conceptions of time, the prophets feel free to couch their prophecies in the future tense (cf. Isa. 2), in the present tense (cf. Isa. 9:6), and sometimes even in the past tense (cf. Isa. 53). Moreover, parts of one prophecy may have reverse time sequences. Thus Isaiah 65:17-25 introduces first the new heavens and new earth (eternal state), and then paints a picture of millennial bliss -- whereas the reverse sequence would have been chronologically correct." According to Leen Ritmeyer, there are stones in the wall beside the gate that may well date to the time of Nehemiah, and the inside of the gate contains pillars from the Second Temple period. However, the Golden Gate that people see today was constructed by a fifth-century A.D. Byzantine emperor. It was known to have been in ruins by A.D. 629, when it was rebuilt by Emperor Heraclius. It was first closed by the Arabs in A.D. 810, reopened by the Crusaders in A.D. 1102, and walled up again by the Saracens in A.D. 1197. Apparently it was opened again during reconstruction work done by the Ottoman Turkish Sultan Suleiman the Magnificent, who rebuilt the present-day walls of the Old City. Easter - Acts_12:4 : Acts 12:4 ☉ Regarding the KJV use of the term "Easter" for the Greek word pascha: "Additionally, there is a possible problem if we understand this verse to mean the Jewish Passover. Verse three of this chapter states that Peter was taken during, 'the days of unleavened bread.' The next verse then speaks of Easter in the KJV. If the word is translated Passover we have the Days of Unleavened Bread coming before the Passover. In the Biblical use of the term, Passover came before the Days of unleavened Bread (Exodus 12:1-8,15,19; 13:7; Leviticus 2:11; and Deuteronomy 16:4). Contextually, it would seem that this pascha that followed the Days of Unleavened Bread was not the pascha that preceded the capture of Peter. Instead, it is likely to refer to the Roman celebration of Ostara, hence called Easter." Ref-0086, pp. 185-186

Easter - date : ☉ + "The main concern of the Council of Nicea (AD 325), convened and presided over by the emperor himself, was to overthrow Arianism by defining orthodox Christology. However, a number of less important matters were also discussed. Among these was the question concerning the date of Easter. Constantine treated this in a letter he sent to those not present at Nicea. At a certain point in this letter, he writes, "It was declared to be particularly unworthy for [Easter], the holiest of all festivals, to follow the [calculation] of the Jews, who had soiled their hands with the most fearful of crimes, and whose minds were blinded. . . . We ought not therefore, to have anything in common with the Jews . . . we desire, dearest brethren, to separate ourselves from the detestable company of the Jews . . . Eastern Orthodoxy - tradition : ☉ + ". . . the Eastern Orthodox concept of Scripture and tradition is not identical to the Roman Catholic concept of Scripture and tradition. According to Orthodoxy, tradition is an all-embracing concept which may be seen as the continuing presence of the Holy Spirit in the Church. While Roman Catholicism and Protestantism tend to distinguish between Scripture and tradition, viewing them as separate concepts, Orthodoxy sees Scripture as part of the larger concept of tradition. Tradition is the life of the Holy Spirit within the Church, yet this mystical view does not mean that there are no outward forms of the tradition. Some of the outward forms are the Bible, the seven ecumenical councils, the fathers, the divine liturgy, the canon law and the icons." Ref-0791, pp. 225-226.

ecclesia : ☪ Greek. "To call out of" or "assembly".
ecclesia - Israel in wilderness : Acts 7:38 ecclesia - usage of term : Acts 7:38; Acts 19:39; Acts 19:32; Acts 19:39; Acts 19:41; Heb. 2:12 ☪ "This word [ecclesia] translated church or assembly is found in at least four important meanings in the New Testament. It is used (1) to mean an assembly of people. In this sense it has no special theological meaning. It can refer to Israel as a gathered people in the wilderness (Acts 7:38) or a regular assembly of citizens (Acts 19:39) or a group of people gather for a religious worship (Heb. 2:12). (2) The same word is used for an assembly of Christians in a local church (Acts 8:1,3; 11:22,26) and in the plural for a group of such churches (1Cor. 16:19; Gal. 1:2). Each assembly or church has a local gathering composed of professed Christians. That all in the assembly are not necessarily true believers is clear from the messages to the seven churches of Asia (Rev. 2-3). (3) Ecclesia is also used of the total of professing Christians without reference to locality and is practically parallel in this sense to Christendom (Acts 12:1; Rom. 16:16; 1Cor. 15:9; Gal. 1:13; Rev. 2:1-29, 3:1-22; etc.). The same word is used (4) of the body of Christ, composed of those baptized by the Holy Spirit into the church (1Cor. 12:13). Ecclesia used in this connection becomes a technical word referring to the saints of this age." Ref-0081, p. 225. The term is also used to describe non-believers (ἐκκλησία is used in Acts 19:32, 39, 41, to describe the Diana-worshipping mob of Ephesians). ecclesia - used not of church or believers : Acts 7:38; Acts 19:32; Acts 19:39; Acts 19:41 ☪ In Acts 7:38 Stephen is quoting from the Septuagint which renders the Hebrew term for congregation as ecclesia. This explains the atypical use of ecclesia.

Far from declaring that the God of the Bible is a singular being, the Hebrew word translated 'one' is echad, which means a unity of several becoming one, as when God said the man and woman became 'one [echad] flesh' (Gen. 2:24); when many soldiers became 'one [echad] troop' (2S. 2:25) or when two sticks became 'one [echad] stick' (Eze. 37:17)." Ref-0017, February 2000. "The combination of evening and morning [Gen. 1:5] comprised the unity of echad, or one day. . . There is another Hebrew word which always means an absolute one: yachid. It is used in Genesis 22:2, where it emphasizes Isaac as Abraham's only, unique son. So, if Moses had wanted to emphasize absolute oneness of God, he would have used the term yachid. But he did not use that term for the oneness of Gd. Deuteronomy 6:4 is, therefore, an argument in favor of the plurality of the Godhead since the word for 'God' is plural and, at the same time, it teaches the unity of this plurality of the one God." Ref-0003, Vol. 15(1) 2001, p. 54. "It can be seen that Genesis 12:40 above can be interpreted two ways -- either 430 years that the Israelites were in Egypt, or 430 years for their whole sojourn which started from the time Abraham came to Canaan. . . . the Samaritan Pentateuch and Septuagint speak not of 'lived in Egypt' but 'lived in Egypt and Canaan.' Galatians 3 makes it clear that the 430 years is from when the promise was given to Abraham until the law was given at Sinai." David Down, Ref-0003, 17(2), 2003, p. 71. "In short, the various lines of evidence would seem to indicate that the 430 years should be taken at face value for the Israelite sojourn in Egypt. In any event, it seems to me that the case for this particular reconstruction is tenable and defensible, and that it deserves attention as an alternative to the "short-chronology" interpretation." Paul J. Ray, Jr. "The Duration of the Israel Sojourn in Egypt", Ref-0066, 17.2 (2004):33-44, p. 42. "When the Bible says 430 years it refers to the whole time, beginning with the covenant to Abraham as he entered the land, and when it says 400 years it refers to starting with Abraham's seed. Here are the verses which say 430 years: [Ex. 12:40-41; Gal. 3:17]. . . Here are the references to 400 years: [Gen. 15:13; Acts 7:6]. . . Hebrew scholars say to read the above verses like this: the passage first lists items of seed, stranger, serve, afflict; then it adds the information that all this happened within 400 years. The 400 years applies to all the preceding items, not just to the last one of 'afflict'. In other words, do not connect the last phrase too closely with the next to last; it refers to the whole time. When does the 400 years begin? It begins with Isaac thirty years after Abram entered the land. Abraham was 75 years old when he entered the land and was 100 years old when Isaac was born. That's twenty-five years. And five more years of Isaac's life would make a total of thirty. In Genesis 21 [Gen. 21:8] we find an event that could qualify as changing the count from Abraham to Isaac. It is the weaning of Isaac, upon which they had a great feast, and upon which Abraham cast out Hagar and her son. Weaning children at age five is common in some cultures. The 215 years comes from adding the years the patriarchs were in Canaan (Genesis 12:4, 21:5, 25:26, 47:9) and subtracting that 215 years from the total sojourn of 430 years." Ruth Beechick, Ref-0003, Vol. 15(1) 2001, 60-61. "The figure of 400 years for the oppression of the Israelites is taken from Gen. 15:13. According to Ex. 12:40 (MT) their sojourning in Egypt lasted 430 years, for which 400 might be taken as a round number. But rabbinical exegesis reckoned the 400 years as running from the birth of Isaac to the Exodus. Cf. Paul in Gal. 3:17, where the giving of the law (in the third month after the Exodus) is dated 430 years after the promise to Abraham (Gen. 12:3, 7; 13:15, etc.) This accords with the Samaritan and LXX expansion of Ex. 12:40, which includes in the 430 years the Israelites' sojourning in Canaan as well as in Egypt. The period spent in Egypt would then be considerably shorter; cf. Gen. 15:16, "in the fourth generation they shall come back here." Ref-0653, p. 135 n. 22. "[In Galatians 3:16-17] Paul explains to the Galatians that God's promise made to Abraham has not been abrogated or nullified by the law given to Moses just after the Exodus 430 years later. The 430 years of Exodus 12:40 are therefore interpreted by Paul as being the time span from the receiving of the promise by Abraham until the giving of the law to Moses, and not the period covering the descent of Jacob and his family into Egypt and their descendants' subsequent return in the Exodus. . . . Clearly Stephen [Acts 7:2-4] has interpreted Genesis 12:1-3 as an event that occurred not only prior to Abraham's leaving Haran . . . when he was 75 years old (see Genesis 12:4) but also before he even reached Haran from Chaldea. This interpretation, which we must now accept since Stephen was said to be 'full of faith and the Holy Spirit' (Acts 6:5) and therefore divinely inspired is also one supported by the KJV rendering of the first few words of Genesis 12:1 which read: 'Now the Lord had said unto Abram...' The use of the pluperfect tense here is not followed in modern translations . . . The apostle Paul [Gal. 3:16-17] then makes the point that the law, which was given 430 years later, does not nullify the promise given to Abraham. Paul, therefore, reckons the 430-year time period to begin at Genesis 12:7 when Abraham was 75 years old." Mike Viccary, "Biblical chronology - our times are in His hands", Ref-0784, Volume 21 Number 1, 2007, 62:66, pp. 62-63. "The Samaritan Pentateuch and the Alexandrine copy of the LXX have a slightly different reading at Exodus 12:40 that favour the view taken by Paul in Galatians. According to Torrey, the Samaritan Pentateuch, for example, reads: 'Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, and of their fathers in the land of Canaan and in the land of Egypt, was 430 years.'" Mike Viccary, "Biblical chronology - our times are in His hands", Ref-0784, Volume 21 Number 1, 2007, 62:66, p. 64. "Now the first thing that strikes me in [Genesis 15:13] quoted from the KJV is the switch from singular (thy seed, a stranger) to plural (theirs, them etc.). . . . Although the KJV version is faithful to the original translation, modern versions ignore the fact that the word 'stranger', the verb 'to be', and the word 'seed' are all in the singular, supplying them as plurals instead: . . . I believe that the use of the singular and plural in verse 13, a double statement is intended here. Modern translations give the impression that only Abraham's later descendants are meant here, referring exclusively to those in Egypt. I suggest, however, that the Lord intends us to understand that the 400-year period began with the oppression experienced by Abraham's seed Isaac. Thus the Lord is speaking not only about what will happen to Abraham's seed (his descendant Isaac) but also about what will befall the many descendants that would come later through Isaac and his son Jacob. . . . fixing on the weaning of Isaac as the beginning of the 400 years of oppression is not an arbitrary choice of mine. For while Abraham's great feast was in progress we read in Genesis 21:9 that: 'And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, mocking.' It was at this time, then, that Ishmael (the son of Hagar the Egyptian by Abraham) began to mock Abraham's seed. This event recorded in Genesis 21:9 begins the 400 years of oppression for Abraham's descendants. . . . Indeed Paul in the New Testament interprets this mocking of Isaac by Ishmael as a persecution of Abraham's seed [Gal. 4:28-29] . . . Thus the oppression of Abraham's seed had begun at the time of Isaac's weaning when he was five years old. Four hundred years later, exactly 430 years after Abraham had entered the land of Canaan and was given the promise concerning his seed, (Genesis 12:7) the oppression would end as the Lord set about his deliverance of Israel from Egypt." Mike Viccary, "Biblical chronology - our times are in His hands", Ref-0784, Volume 21 Number 1, 2007, 62:66, pp. 65-66. For a detailed chart of the 215 years in Canaan and 215 years in Egypt, see 2008042501. "The subject of [Ex. 12:40-41] is 'the sons of Israel' . . . or, as the KJV and NKJV render it, 'the children if Israel'. This by definition excludes both Abraham, who was never called 'Israel', and Isaac, who was forbidden by God to enter Egypt (Gen. 26:2). . . . The precise 7430 years, to the very day' in Egypt (Exodus 12:41) is corroborated by the rounded four centuries foreign sojourn foretold to Abraham concerning his descendants. . . . (Gen. 15:13). Stephen too maintains the same four century time frame, declaring that Israel was 'enslaved and mistreated four hundred years' in a foreign country (Acts 7:6-7)." Brenton Minge, "'Short' sojourn comes up short?", Ref-0784, 21(3) 2007, p. 63. "Moses shows [Ex. 3:27-28] by reasonable inference, that the Amramites just after the Exodus number some 2,150 males If this Amram was the same Amram as Moses' father, this means that Moses must have had 7,147 brothers and brother's sons', as Keil and Delitzsch point out. Such a proposition, of course is absurd. . . . But why need there be any 'problems' at all when, as we see from Joseph's line in 1 Chron. 7:22-27, there were all of eleven adult generations of Israel in Egypt, not just the four which Moses' modest abridgement of his own ancestry (later emulated by Ezra in abbreviating his own family tree), might suggest? . . . But it is the sheer inconsistency of the short-sojourn position that makes it even harder to defend. Historically, its advocates are not even agreed among themselves as to how long Israel's time in Egypt actually lasted. The Talmud puts it at 210 years (and elsewhere at 430 years). Nahmanides/Ramban gives the two figures 220 years and 227 years. Josephus says in one part that it was 215 years, and in another

400 years. A footnote to Ramban gives 240 years. Midrash Rabbah says it was 210 years, while those Christians scholars who accept it generally plumb for a 215-year period." Brenton Minge, 215-year sojourn still 'short', Ref-0784, 22(1) 2008, 58:59, p. 58. "Mr. Minge's appeal to statistical problems is vacuous. His appeal to Number 3:27-28 is odd. Whilst an increase from 2 to 2000 would take about 409 years for a growth rate of 1.7% (current growth rates), it is perfectly feasible given a double current population growth rate (~3.5%) to produce 2000 people from 2 originals in 200 years. . . . this type of growth is indeed stupendous if not miraculous as the Genesis promises of increase and the fulfilments recorded elsewhere in the Pentateuch readily demonstrate [Ex. 1:7, 12, 20]." Mike Viccary, Mike Viccary replies., Ref-0784, 22(1) 2008, 60, p. 60. "The two authors, Mike Viccary and David Austin, together make a compelling case for the point of view that the 'Egyptian sojourn' lasted only 215 years. I was curious in another direction, however. We read in Exodus: . . . All those who were descendants of Jacob were seventy persons . . . (Ex. 1:5). So the Lord blessed the descendants of Jacob and the population grew rapidly and filled the land . . . (Ex. 1:12, 20). This whole period of time saw the Israelites multiply so that on the actual day of the Exodus itself, we read: 'Then the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand men on foot, besides children' (Exodus 12:37). It is estimated and widely accepted that, including wives and children, about 2 million people began the Exodus journey out of Egypt. So my curiosity was piqued about the amount of time needed to produce such a population. . . . I assumed that the 70 descendants of Jacob with their wives and children would number 3 x 70 = 210. . . . Finally, as a percentage, we arrive at r [rate of population growth] = 4.26%. This is a trifle high on historically observed growth rates. Some natural growth rates in third world countries have been measured over 3%. Here, however, God said they would be fruitful and increase abundantly, multiple and fill the land. Every effort to control the population growth was overruled by God, so we gather from the biblical text that this was a prolific growth rate, ordained and insisted upon by God. . . . So, in conclusion, the period of 215 years in Egypt with a growth rate of 42.6% is in harmony with the possible range of human reproduction rates (live births minus deaths) to achieve a population of approximately 2 million at the Exodus." Arthur F. Green, Biblical chronology, Ref-0784, 22(1) 2008, 61, p. 61. "A shorter genealogical sequence which can also point to a shorter sojourn is found in Ex. 6:16-20; since it provides the names of the grandfather and father of Moses it may be supposed that it has preserved relatively accurate information. We learn that Kohath (son of Levi [Ex. 6:16] and grandson of Jacob [Gen. 29:34]) was one of those who went down to Egypt [Gen. 46:11], and he lived 133 years (Ex. 6:18); his son was Amram who lived 137 years; Amram's son was Moses (Ex. 6:20) who, when he confronted Pharaoh was 80 years of age (Ex. 7:7). To accord with longer sequences it has been suggested that intermediate names have been omitted (which is of course not unusual in ancient genealogies), and even that only tribe (Levi), clan (Kohath), and family-group (Amram) are given here. As the names stand, however, even though we are not told the age of Kohath when he went down into Egypt, if we suppose that his grandson, Moses, was born 80 years later, and if Moses was 80 years old at the exodus (Ex. 7:7), we have a total of only 160 years for the sojourn in Egypt." Ref-0840, p. 204. "In Ex. 12:40 an actual textual variant in the Septuagint adds several words, so that the statement reads: "The time that the people of Israel dwelt in Egypt and in the land of Canaan was four hundred and thirty years." Pierre Montet supposes that the Alexandrian scholars who prepared the Septuagint might have had access to some lost source such as a complete and authentic Manetho and might have derived the reading in question from that source. However that may be, we have already seen that the Alexandrian-Jewish chronograph, Demetrius (before 200 B.C.), who used the LXX exclusively, understood that there was an exact division of the 430 years into 215 years in Canaan and 215 years in Egypt. The LXX text is apparently reflected also in Gal. 3:17, which makes the 430 years cover the time from the promises to Abraham (Gen. 12:7; 13:15; 17:8; 22:18; 24:7) to the exodus and the giving of the law. Similarly, and perhaps in dependence upon Demetrius, Josephus states in one passage (Ant. 2.318) that the Israelites left Egypt "430 years after the coming of our forefather Abraham to Canaan, Jacob's migration to Egypt having taken place 215 years later." Ref-0840, p. 204. "Now Genesis 50 and Exodus 1 make very clear that as long as Joseph lived, he and his family were well treated; thus the maximum period of hard bondage was 144 years (Joseph's death year minus the year of the Exodus, 1635 - 1491 = 144). Obviously, the minimum length of the affliction was 80 years, the span from the birth of Moses unto the Exodus at which time he was that age (Ex. 2:1-12; cp. 7:7)." Ref-0186, p. 56. "And yet there is more Scripture that supports and demands the "short sojourn". Judah's genealogy confirms and verifies that it was 430 years from the Covenant with Abraham unto the receiving of the Law as his offspring made their way to obtain the land God promised in Genesis 12:7, not 430 years from Jacob and his family's coming to Egypt unto the Law (see Chart 3b and Gal. 3:17). . . . The point is that the entire interlude from the arrival of Judah with the rest of his kindred in Goshen to the Exodus must be spanned by only three lives, Hezron, Caleb and Hur. If, as has been shown, this intervening period is 215 years it would require a scenario whereby beginning with Hezron as an infant (a fact, see Chart 3f) each would be required to father around age 65 at a time when men's life spans had been foreshortened to almost that of the present day. However, if the duration of the dwelling in Egypt had been 430 years instead of the correct 215, a scenario would be required whereby Hezron would have fathered Caleb about age 145, Caleb fathered Hur about 145 and Hur would have been around 140 at the Exodus. Any such scenario is inconsistent with Bible data and thus highly unlikely as during this period other men's life spans were not compatible with such a great age for the begetting of sons. . . . Thus Judah's genealogy is seen to support the 215 year sojourn, but it millitates against its being 430 years as if often wrongly supposed. . . . The problem is that the entire period under analysis must be spanned by only four generations yet . . . it is impossible for a 430 year sojourn in Egypt to be spanned by these four lives." Ref-0186, pp. 57-58. See Egyptian - duration of bondage - part 9.

"Whereas some have complained that "names of generations" could be missing in the Levi, Kohath, Amram to Moses descent, the date contained in Exodus 6:20 is pertinent as it demands four generations." Ref-0186, p. 62.

Egyptian - duration of bondage - part 9 : ☪

Concerning the view that the affliction starts with Ishmael's mocking of Isaac at the weaning (Gen. 21:8), ". . . the explanation is not sufficient for most in that it does not satisfactorily fulfill the Egyptian "affliction" prophecy. Further, it again does not deal with the "servitude" portion of Genesis 15:13 for Isaac did not thereafter serve either the Egyptian bondswoman, her son or any other Egyptian. The author considers the best solution to be that found in the Companion Bible which is to give attention to and recognize the significance of the structure of Genesis 15:13 (cp. Acts 7:6). The text is known as an introversion as shown: | (A) They seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs | (B) and they shall serve them | (B) and they shall afflict them | (A) four hundred years. A and A correspond to the same event and to each other. They define the whole period of the Seed (through Isaac when weaned) sojourning in Canaan and dwelling in Egypt without permanent land holdings in either as being 400 years. B and B likewise correspond to each other but relate to a different even from that of which A and A speak. B and B are parenthetic and only relate to the dwelling, servitude, and affliction in Egypt. . . . Further details concerning the servitude referred in Egypt referred to in clauses B and B in Egypt are given in the verses that follow (Gen. 15:14-16) . . . we see that the key to the entire problem rests in perceiving that the Genesis 15:13 text distinctly states that the 400 year sojourn related only to Abraham's Seed; hence it does not include the 30 additional years of Abraham's own sojourning. Indeed, the 430 years of Exodus 12:40 is 30 years longer than [sic] the 400 years of Genesis 15:13 because it includes the sojourning of Abraham himself as well as that of his Seed. The term "children of Israel" (ex. 12:40) would include Abraham." Ref-0186, pp. 60-61.

This is consistent with a major and common failing on the part of those in church leadership. Rather than inviting church members to maturity in Christ and the independence that comes naturally with that increasing maturity . . . church leaders often invite members to become addicted to the sugar high of entertainment, programs, and the charisma of a dynamic communicator. Not only does this often-applied approach appeal to the leader's ego, but for Machiavelli it is a way to assure that followers will continue to be faithful to that leader. In other words, singularity and authority demands methodology that will maintain the continuance of that authority. . . . The Biblical model is simple indeed. It would appear that mandating a singular or monocratic leadership, or creating a complete distinction between a pastor and an elder or between an overseer and a pastor, represents a shift away from the natural interpretation of Scripture and the simplicity that results, and a shift toward anthropocentric and artificial forms of leadership." The earthquake, wind, and fire (spectacular manifestations) are analogous to Elijah's expectations, but God was not in them - that was not how God was going to bring about His work in His time. God was in the still small voice instead. God's work was to be done a different way which Elijah did not appreciate. Perhaps Elijah will experience the type of revival he desired in his future ministry (Rev. 11:3-7). Notice that Elijah's ministry seems to fade after the Mt. emerging church - Brian McLaren : ☪ + "McLaren claimed: (1) Christ's cross work was not for the purpose of propitiating divine wrath or redemption from sin; it was a nonviolent example for us to follow (pp. 158-59); (2) The second coming of Christ is without biblical warrant "for it leads us to believe that in the end, even God finds it impossible to fix the world apart from violence and coercion [therefore] no one should be surprised when those shaped by this theology behave accordingly" (p. 144). A new heaven and new earth are unnecessary because "good will prevail by peace, love, truth, faithfulness, and courageous endurance of suffering" (p. 146). (3) Original sin is not our problem; McLaren fully believes that unregenerate mankind will be able to change society to conform to God's kingdom (pp. 223, 262, 265). (4) The need for forgiveness and salvation from sin are not on the agenda because most, if not tall, are already citizens of the kingdom by virtue of having been created in the image of God (p. 223). The greatest problems facing mankind have to do with physical concerns of the planet, not spiritual issues (p. 46). (5) Hell is not a literal place of judgment for rebels against God but starts on earth now when we don't live for the kingdom of God, as described by McLaren (p. 146)." Gary E. Gilley, Review of 'Everything must Change' by Brian McLaren, Ref-0785, Volume 14, Number 41, April, 2010, 77:79, p. 78. "McLaren is not a pleasant read, even from a narrative perspective. His prose rambles constantly, and he seems to take one or more eternities to get to a point, only to reveal to the reader at the end that he didn't actually have one. He freely admits that his writings can be frustrating, but it is not for the reasons that he thinks: Not because his ideas are challenging or disturbing, but because he handles Scriptural texts and issues with the same facility that one might handle needle-threading with the disadvantage of a boxing glove." His coming is largely dependent, as we shall later see, upon the establishing of right human relations. [T]he church has hindered . . . and has not helped because of its fanatical zeal to make "Christians" of all peoples and not followers of Christ. Now, right behind them, come emerging church missionaries who say Christianity is a terrible religion, and Christians are out to lunch -- so just become a Christ-follower, and you don't even have to tell anyone about it. In fact, you can still live like you always have. To the many who have suffered persecution and martyrdom over the centuries for being Christians and being courageous enough to call themselves that, we now must believe they suffered and died unnecessarily -- after all, they did not need to confess Jesus as the only way. And they didn't need to renounce their pagan religions." Ref-0812, p. 180. "As emerging church evangelization unfolds, walls that once separated biblical Christianity from pagan religious belief systems are being demolished. Instead of proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ that saves sinners from hell, a new gospel is being preached, and its preachers are wearing interspiritual robes of deception. Jesus proclaimed it is a narrow pathway that leads to heaven, and He is the only door through which to enter -- but on the contrary, the emergent message forsakes the narrow pathway to God for the sake of establishing the kingdom. . . . While taking care of the sick and needy does create opportunities to share the Gospel, emerging spirituality evangelists would silence those who preach Christ openly, calling them too obtrusive. The new evangelization of the emerging church, while it may be in the name of Christ, is against Christ. A bridge has been established that has the potential to unite all religious believes in the name of Christ, by circumventing the Gospel of Jesus Christ." Ref-0812, pp. 184-185.

emerging church - mystery esteemed : ☩ + "Herein is the dilemma of the Emerging Church, the Bible is esteemed for its mystery, not its propositional truth. encryption - Leb Kamai : Jer. 51:1 ☩ NIV: See, I will stir up the spirit of a destroyer against Babylon and the people of Leb Kamai. KJV: Behold, I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the midst of them that rise up against me. . . . "Leb Kamai can literally mean, 'the hearts of those who rise up against me,' as per the KJV translation. Yet the structure of the sentence requires reading it the way the NIV does. For the Jewish sages, this verse never presented a problem since they knew that, on rare occasions, words could be written in a cryptic form. The form of encryption before us is known as atba'sh. . . it simply writes a word in a backward order of the Hebrew alphabet. In other words, the writer will replace an aleph, the first letter in the Hebrew alphabet, with a tav, the last letter in the alphabet; the Bet (the second letter) with the Shin (the second to last letter) and so on. In practice it looks like this: L=k (e) b=s K=d (a) m=i (a) i=m, which amounts to kasdim (and don't worry about the missing vowels because Hebrew does not have them). . . . Instead of an unidentified people, the Hebrew reader sees the word 'Chaldeans' before his eyes. Now the perplexing passage may be read: Behold, I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in Chaldea. . ." Ref-0082, May 2001, p. 15.

All Europe rang with it in the days of Pope Gregory the Great. And at the end of the tenth century the apprehension of it amounted to a general panic. "It was then frequently preached on, and by breathless crowds listened to; the subject of every one's thoughts, every one's conversation." "Under this impression, multitudes innumerable," says Mosheim, "having given their property to monasteries or churches, travelled to Palestine, where they expected Christ to descend to judgment. Others bound themselves by solemn oaths to be serfs to churches or to priests, in hopes of a milder sentence on them as being servants of Christ's servants. In many places buildings were let go to decay, as that of which there would be no need in future. And on occasions of eclipses of sun or moon, the people fled in multitudes for refuge to the caverns and the rocks." Ref-0762, p. 4.

Enoch - no death : Heb. 11:5; Rev. 11:3; Rev. 11:7 ☉ "in the light of Hebrews 11:5, it cannot be that Enoch will die in the future. . . Enoch is clearly said to have been translated, and this involves corruption putting on incorruption and mortality putting on immortality (1Cor. 15:50-58). Since Elijah has already been taken into Heaven, the same is true of him, for no man in his physical state can enter Heaven (1Cor. 15:50). This means that neither Elijah nor Enoch can die, for they are now immortal." Ref-0219, p. 235.

Enoch - prophecy : Deu. 33:2; Jude 1:14; Rev. 19:14 ☉ ". . . the quotation from 'Enoch in the seventh generation from Adam' in Jude 1:14 f; this comes recognizably from the apocalyptic book of Enoch (1 Enoch 1:9)." Ref-0073, p. 51. "Jude 1:14-15 is from an apocalyptic book known as 1 Enoch. There are several possible explanations for these passages, but it is nothing especially unusual that Jude makes use of extra-Biblical materials. The Apostle Paul does this (2 Tim. 3:8) and even calls one of the Greek poets a "prophet" (Titus 1:12). Of course, Paul did not believe that the poet was a prophet like Isaiah or Jeremiah. So when Jude writes against false teachers, whether he refers to a traditional story about the body of Moses (v. 9) or to a "prophecy" of Enoch (vv. 14-15), he may be doing no more than we often do. He may be speaking to his audience illustratively, using the writings that were so familiar to his readers and to his opponents." Ref-0236, p. 170.

Ephesians - commentaries : Eph. 1:1 ☺ + "1. Harold Hoehner ? A massive book with an impressive argument for Pauline authorship and extremely detailed in the exegesis department. There is room for him to survey all the options and argue for his choices. One of the best commentaries on any Book. 2. Peter T. O'Brien (Pillar) ? Okay, I haven't read this or even perused it. But it's by P.T. O'Brien, whose other works, especially his "Colossians" I am very familiar with. Everyone recommends this and I'm sure I can trust their judgment. 3. F.F. Bruce (NINCNT) ? Paired with Colossians & Philemon, this work gives the pith and substance of Paul's letter. 4. Markus Barth (Anchor) ? Huge treatment, hard to read, but very suggestive. Two volumes with impressive theological reflection based on minute exegesis. Surprisingly for a German he argues for Paul as the author. 5. A. T. Lincoln (Word) ? Lincoln sometimes reads like an evangelical; sometimes like a liberal. He rejects Pauline authorship (for no good reason that I can see). I like this work because one gets the sense of the forward-looking strain in the epistles.

Shame he doesn't write on Philipians!. 6. J. Armitage Robinson ? A very sound older (1904) exegetical work with extra notes on important Greek words. Includes some very helpful paraphrases of tough passages. 7. John Stott (BST) ? Stott is a little doctrinaire sometimes, but he is a master expositor. This work is of great help to the preacher who wants to build in good applications from the text itself. 8. D. Martyn Lloyd-Jones ? I'm going to include these eight volumes of sermons by "the Doctor" because even though one might raise disagreements here and there, the sheer quality of reasoning through the text is without peer. It's all good, but if you can't afford the whole set, start with the two volumes on chapter 6:10ff., the Armor of God. 9. Klyne Snodgrass (NIVAC) ? Snodgrass is always stimulating to read. He does really good work letting Ephesians speak for today. Takes a not entirely convincing corporate view of election. 10. Clinton Arnold (ZECNT) ? A very good commentary, pitched just below the technical but with real attention to the text. Arnold is well known for his book Ephesians: Power & Magic, which is a superb background study of how pagans in Ephesus understood the concept of spirits and power, including using magical papyri and amulets. There are numerous other fine works which are worthy of commendation. Francis Foulkes in the Tyndale series, Frank Thielman in the Baker series, Ernest Best's ridiculously expensive ICC contribution, and Bryan Chapell's work in the Reformed Expository series. I haven't seen William Klein's commentary in the Revised EBC, but I'm sure it is worth reading, as is William Hendriksen's book." Feeling it inappropriate to reckon from the reign of an imperial enemy of Christianity, he explained: We have been unwilling to connect our cycle with the name of an impious persecutor, but have chosen rather to note the years from the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ. For the year of the incarnation Dionysius accepted the year A.U.C. 753 (= 1 B.C.) and also for that day in the year of the nativity the date of December 25 (the day known in Rome already by Hippolytus and the Chronographer of the Year 354). . . . While this possibility now seems obvious, it actually remained the custom for a long time to designate dates prior to the Christian era in terms of some of the older eras. But from the eighteenth century onward the use of a reckoning prior to the Christian epoch as well as following it became customary, and the designations ante Christum (A.C.), anno ante Christum (A.A.C.), and "before Christ" (B.C.) were employed." Esau - established Petra? : ☉ "Concerning the significance of Petra and the biblical end times, Pastor Noah Hutchings of the Southwest Radio Church, an expert on Petra, offers this account: 'Jacob and Esau were twins. Jacob got the best of the deal in trading for Esau's birthright, and then he stole Esau's blessing. The blessing was far more valuable than the birthright. Esau took his minor share of Isaac's cattle and goods and went to Petra, which in the Bible is called Mount Seir, Mount Hor, Selah and Edom's strong city. Esau chased the Horites (cave dwellers) out of Mount Hor and established Petra and the capital city of his kingdom, Edom. Five hundred years later, when Moses tried to pass through Petra to the Promised Land, the Edomites refused passage and even fought the children of Israel. In 600 B.C., when Babylon invaded Israel, thousands of Israelis were moved to Babylon (today's Iraq) and the Edomites were moved into Israel. The Edomites even helped the Babylonians destroy Jerusalem and the temple (Psalm 137). When a remnant of Israel returned after the Babylonian captivity, the Edomites were there to wage war against them while the city and the temple were being rebuilt.'" A city for 'end times' Is Petra hiding place for Israeli remnant during Armageddon? by Anthony C.  ☉ "When the contexts of these two quotations are kept in mind, it becomes evident that the prediction -- "The older will serve the younger" -- two nations, Israel and Edom, and not the twins as persons. The fact that Esau never served Jacob (in fact it was Jacob who bowed before Esau (Gen. 33:1-4)) confirms that it is the nations which descended from the two brothers that are being discussed here. Not until the time of David would descendants of Esau serve descendants of Jacob (2 Samuel 8:14)." Ref-0685, p. 17. "What is most significant for our study is Tertullian's use of Genesis 25:21-23 in the opening paragraphs of his Answer, where he follows the kind of allegorical exegesis which we have already met with in the Epistle of Barnabas. Here is his comment on the phrase, "the older will serve the younger": "Accordingly, since the people or nation of the Jews is anterior in time, and 'greater' through the grace of primary favor in the Law, whereas ours is understood to be 'less' in the age of times, as having in the last era of the world attained the knowledge of divine mercy: beyond doubt, through the edict of divine utterance, the prior and 'greater' people -- is, the Jewish -- necessarily serve the 'less'; and the 'less' people -- is, the Christians -- the 'greater.'" . . . Tertullian proceeds to adduce reasons for this inversion of roles, finding the main cause in Israel's idolatrous practices. He concludes, "For thus has the 'less' -- that is the posterior -- people overcome the 'greater people,' while it attains the grace of divine favor from which Israel has been divorced." Ref-0685, pp. 79-80. "Augustine thus concurs with the almost universal consensus of Christian interpreters in the early centuries, according to whom the phrase "the older shall serve the younger" means "that the elder people, the Jews, shall serve the younger people, the Christians." esteem - self : righteousness - self☆; Lev. 19:18; Mtt. 22:39; Mark 12:31 ☩ + "A simple reading of Leviticus 19:18 -- cited by Jesus Christ as the second greatest commandment (Mtt. 22:39; Mark 12:31) -- divulges that the command pertained to loving others, not oneself. The "as yourself" part of the command only furnishes a comparison of how Jesus' disciples are to love others. The psychological rejoinder to that straightforward meaning is that one cannot love others until loving oneself. That, however, reads an integrative motif into the verse once again. The "as yourself" phrase says that a person does love self, that he should love self. Furthermore, the psychologist errs when saying that the inevitable self-love is "appropriate self-love, self-care, and self-appreciation." On the contrary, it is rather a person's natural compulsion to promote his or her own personal welfare in every facet of life. That compulsion does not have to be learned and may have to be dispensed with as a requirement of Christian discipleship (Mtt. 10:37-39; 16:24-25; Mark 8:34-35; Luke 9:23-24; 14:26-27; John 12:25). . . . He [Narramore] and other integrationists also choose to bypas New Testament texts that repudiate self-love or use it as an indicator of the arrival of the last days and their accompanying grievous times (2Ti. 3:1-2). These integrationists are so intent on integrating Scripture with secular psychological dogma that self-esteem is vital for mental and emotional health that they leave no stone unturned to find Scripture they can force into supporting that teaching." The syntax, vocabulary, and style of the Greek of these additions is so different from that of the rest of the book that they were certainly introduced by an editor some time after the original translation was produced." The Sardius was the first stone on the priest's breastplate (Ex. 28:17; Ex. 39:10) representing the firstborn of Jacob -- Reuben. The Jasper was the last stone on the priest's breastplate (Ex. 28:20; Ex. 39:13) representing the last born of Jacob -- Benjamin. "There are many approaches to authority in a secular worldview, e.g., 1. oligarchical - authority exercised by a powerful few, 2. democratic - authority exercised by the people, 3. hereditary - authority exercised by those in a particular family, 4. despotic - authority exercised by one or more in an evil fashion, 5. - personal - authority exercised by one person. However, with the biblical worldview, original authority and ultimate authority reside with God and God alone. God did not inherit His authority -- there was no one to bequeath it to Him. God did not receive His authority -- there was no one to bestow it on Him. God's authority did not come by way of an election -- there was no one to vote for Him. God did not seize authority -- there was no one to steal it from. God did not earn His authority -- it was already His. God inherently embodies authority because He is the great "I AM" (Ex. 3:14; John 8:58)." Richard L. Mayhue, The Authority of Scripture, Ref-0164, Vol. 15 No. 2, Fall 2004, 227-236, p. 228. "Where did God come from? He came from nowhere! The reason God came from nowhere is that there was nowhere for him to come from. Coming from nowhere, He stood on nothing. The reason He had to stand on nothing is there was nowhere for Him to stand. And standing on nothing, He reached out where there was nowhere to reach and caught something where there was nothing to catch and hung something on nothing and He told it to stay there. Now standing on nothing, He took the hammer of His own will; He struck the anvil of His omnipotence and sparks flew. He caught them on the tips of His fingers, flung them out into space and bedecked the heaven with stars, but no one said a word. The reason no one said anything is that there was nobody there to say anything. So God Himself said, 'That is very good.'" S.M.  Scriptures used against eternal security are generally less clear than those which strongly support eternal security. When examining these passages, questions which must always be asked include 1) is this passage dealing with individuals who were ever truly saved? and 2) is their resulting condition one of eternal damnation or merely loss of reward (1Cor. 3:15)? Note that if Heb. 6:4-6 is describing loss of salvation, then it also teaches the impossibility of restoring a previous salvation, now lost. This does not square with the generally held view of those who reject eternal security that salvation may be gained and lost multiple times. "And does not the logic of the Arminian system tell us that the wise thing for the Christian to do is to die as soon as possible and thus confirm the inheritance which to him is of infinite value? In view of the fact that so many have fallen away, is it worth while for him to remain here and risk his eternal salvation for the sake of a little more life in this world?" Ref-0096, p. 194.

eternal security - vs. perseverance of the saints : ☪ + "Lastly, dispensationalists should reject the Reformed doctrine of the Perseverance of the saints in favor of the exegetically sound doctrine of Eternal Security, or, if you like, the preservation of the saints. Although some five-pointers will draw no distinction between these terms, it is vital that the dispensationalist realize that what they mean by this term has ramifications for the doctrine of assurance. We hold that our salvation is secure because of the Bible's testimony. We have eternal life; we are bone of His bone and flesh of His flesh; we have been adopted and in God's sight we are already glorified. But that is not where it ends for the Five-Point Calvinist. For them, the P [of the TULIP acronym] signifies that if you are elect you will persevere. Hence, this leads to the creation of "check-lists" to give assurance that one is truly one of the elect, which finds its terminus in "Lordship Salvation." The Reformed doctrine of the Perseverance of the Saints, which constantly looks for proofs of regeneration, cannot logically lead to simple assurance." evolution - adaptation : ☉ + "Adaptive immunity is often brought up by the evolutionist as an example of 'new' genes (traits) being produced by mutation. Here we have an example of a mechanism that takes DNA modules and scrambles those modules in complex ways in order to generate antibodies for antigens to which the organism has never been exposed. This is a quintessential example of intelligent design. The DNA changes in adaptive immunity occur only in a controlled manner among only a limited number of genes in a limited subset of cells that are only part of the immune system, and these changes are not heritable. Thus the argument for evolution falls flat on its face." Robert W. Carter, "Can mutations create new information?", Ref-0784, 25(2) 2011, 92-98, pp. 94-95.

evolution - adultery : ☉ + "By studying how the process of natural selection shaped the mind, evolutionary psychologists are painting a new portrait of human nature. . . . The good news is that human beings are designed to fall in love. The bad news is that they aren't designed to stay there. It was thought that birds did not have the brainpower to remember where they'd buried their seeds, but rather must have been following a few simple rules, poking around randomly until they happened to come across their seed caches. But research now shows seed-storing birds have astonishing intellectual prowess, remembering burial sites with pin-point accuracy, even in the absence of any landmarks." Science News Online, [<http://www.sciencenews.org/articles/20040214/bob8.asp>], 18 March 2004 cited by Ref-0028, 26(3) June-August 2004, p. 7.

evolution - DNA - additional information : ☼ + "Another issue, especially displayed among evolutionists (but creationists, including myself, are not immune), is a lack of understanding of the location of biological information. Most people tend to think DNA (the 'genome') is the storage place for information. While it is certainly the location of a tremendous amount of it, this gene-centered view ignores the information originally engineered into the first created organisms. The architecture of the cell, including the cell wall, nucleus, sub-cellular compartments and a myriad of molecular machines, did not originate from DNA. Neither can exist without the other. Thus, a large, yet immeasurable, part of biological information resides in living organisms outside the DNA." Robert W. Carter, "Can mutations create new information?," Ref-0784, 25(2) 2011, 92-98, p. 92.

evolution - DNA - junk? : ☼ + "The discovery that the vast majority of the information stored in DNA is not primary protein-coding information but secondary meta-information, demolishes the neo-Darwinian argument that it arose by some random (independent) process. Meta-information is inextricably dependent upon the information it refers to so an independent origin is impossible." Alex Williams, "Astonishing DNA complexity demolishes neo-Darwinism", Ref-0784, 21(3) 2007, 111:117, p. 117. ". . . a new study has brought the notion of Junk DNA closer to the dustbin of discarded evolutionary speculations. Faulkner et al. have put junk DNA on the run by claiming that retrotransposons (supposedly the remains of ancient viruses that inserted themselves into the genomes of humans and other species) are highly functional after all." evolution - DNA - twins : ☼ + "Considering that [identical twins] have the same DNA sequence in each of their cells, it seems a bit strange that they often possess a number of physical differences, such as different fingerprints, and different susceptibilities to disease. This raises the question: if two people can have identical DNA sequences and yet be so different, is there more to our genetic blueprint than just DNA? The answer is an emphatic 'yes!' Everyone, it seems, has heard of DAN. But may people are unaware that the DNA code itself is governed by another code, known as the epigenetic code. In fact, so significant is this code that one Science writer said that genes (stretches of DNA) are 'little more than puppets' whereas the enzymes controlling this other code are the 'master puppeteers'. . . . identical twins possess the same DNA code, but different epigenetic codes. . . . the epigenetic codes of identical twins, though indistinguishable during the early years of life, can diverge markedly as they age. Also, epigenetic differences were greater in identical twins that lived apart and had different lifestyles." David White, The genetic puppeteer, Ref-0028, 30(2) March-May 2008, 42:44, p. 42.

evolution - DNA similarity : ☼ + "Surprise, surprise! Evolutionists are now saying that bats and horses are more closely related than cows and horses. In the prestigious Proceedings of The National Academy of Sciences, scientists reported their study of genetic re-arrangements associated with retroposons, which are strands of DNA that copy themselves into RNA and then copy themselves back into DNA at different sites on a chromosome. In the evolutionary paradigm, closely related species should share more of these rearrangements than more distant relatives. Until this study, scientists considered bats and horses to be very distant cousins. They were shocked to discover that bats and horses share a high degree of DNA similarity. . . . Bats and horses should thus have been very different in their DNA, because of their obvious structural and functional differences. This shocking result revealed an astounding discrepancy between morphological and genetic data." Core body temperatures have been measured at -2 to 3 degrees C (28-37 degrees F), respiration and heartbeat are undetectable, brain wave activity is zero and only a trickle of blood is entering the brain. evolution - Hitler's views : ☼ + "The stronger must dominate and not mate with the weaker, which would signify the sacrifice of its own higher nature. Only the born weakling can look upon this principle as cruel, and if he does so it is merely because he is of a feebler nature and narrower mind; for if such a law did not direct the process of evolution than the higher development of organic life would not be conceivable at all. . . . If Nature does not wish that weaker individuals should mate with the stronger, she wishes even less that a superior race should intermingle with an inferior one; because in such a case all her efforts, throughout hundreds of thousands of years, to establish an evolutionary higher stage of being, may thus be rendered futile." However, Tel Aviv University anthropologists have published a study casting serious doubt on Lucy's role as mankind's ape ancestor. Based on a comparative analysis of jaw bones in living and extinct primates, researchers concluded that Lucy and members of her kind should be 'placed as the beginning of the branch that evolved in parallel to ours.' In other words, Lucy should no longer be considered to be our direct ancestor. . . . As is typically the case in the field of human evolution, a single bone structure overturns years of grossly exaggerated claims." evolution - mutations damaging : ☺ + "We have seen that there are some point mutations that, under the right circumstances, do give the organism an advantage. There are point mutations that make bacteria resistant to antibiotics. There are some that make insects resistant to insecticides. There are some that increase quantitative traits in farm plants and animals. But all these mutations reduce the information in the gene by making a protein less specific. They add no information, and they add no new molecular capability. Indeed, all mutations studied destroy information. None of them can serve as an example of a mutation that can lead to the large changes of macroevolution. The neo-Darwinians would like us to believe that large evolutionary changes can result from a series of small events if there are enough of them. but if these events all lose information they can't be the steps in the kind of evolution the NDT is supposed to explain, no matter how many mutations there are. Whoever thinks macroevolution can be made by mutations

"Behe's major argument as to where the edge of evolution lies (what random mutations can and cannot achieve), revolves mainly around the malaria parasite. He analyses the interaction between humans and Plasmodium falciparum. Plasmodium has mutated to overcome various antibiotics, such as chloroquine, and humans have mutated to generate some measure of resistance to malaria (e.g., sickle cell, thalassemia). Behe shows that all the cases of adaptation, in both Plasmodium and humans, are due to breaking things, not creating new complex features. . . . He also looks at pyrimethamine resistance in Plasmodium, DDT resistance in mosquitoes and warfarin resistance in rates. In every case things are broken by mutations to create resistance." "Long before the mutational theory of evolution was popularized, Agassiz foresaw the overwhelmingly harmful nature of mutations and the inability of "selection" to produce new life forms. He recognized that the problem with Darwinism was not the survival of the fittest, but rather the arrival of the fittest. Agassiz knew, as did most all animal and plant breeders both then and today, that clear limits exist to variation and no known way exists to go beyond these limits in spite of 4,000 years of trying." There are no gods, no purposes, and no goal-directed forces of any kind. There is no life after death. When I die, I am absolutely certain that I am going to be dead. That's the end of me. evolution - survival of the fittest : ☺ + "It has long been held that predators preferentially take the young, weak, and diseased prey. This concept is central to natural selection and is one of the tenets on which evolution rests. The premise is flawed. The entire superstructure built on natural selection providing a mechanism for evolution collapses into disarray if predators do not actually take the weakest individuals. Upon close examination, the these is neither logical nor supported by the scientific evidence. Natural selection therefore lacks as a mechanism for evolution. . . . Young animals are only available during a small fraction of the year and most wild animals are healthy. If predators had to rely on eating young or sick prey they would soon start to death. There is another fundamental problem with this theory. If predators ate diseased animals they would likely become ill. . . . Most predators have overkill potential. For example, cheetah or other cats are capable of catching, killing and eating prey larger than they are. The chase-kill instinct is a powerful driving force for many predators, as can be commonly observed in cats hunting mice, or dogs chasing cats or rabbits. In a 20 year study in New Zealand, it was demonstrated that well fed farm cats would travel 3 km to kill rabbits." E. Norbert Smith, "Which prey do predators eat?", Ref-0784, 24(2) 2010, 75:77, p. 75. "McBride worked with ranchers, again protecting the herd from predatory mountain lions. In this area of Mexico, cattle are taken to market only once a year. Some of the younger calves were weaned very young and had difficulty keeping up with the herd. They often straggled behind, making easy targets for the mountain lions. Without fail the lions ignored the young weak calves, but instead attacked and killed the large healthy 500-600 pound steers. Once again this demonstrated the fallacy in thinking these predators select the weak and flies in the face of evolution dogma. . . . Observations clearly show predators do not consistently select the weak, sick or young as evolutionist have long accepted and taught. Many predators have overkill potential and can easily catch and kill larger healthy prey. Predators also seem to seek the chase-kill sequence and will actually ignore live prey that will not flee when approached. . . . The entire predator/prey relation needs to be studied in depth and re-evaluated. It appears the evolutionists have been misled and one of their important foundation cornerstones is cracked and should soon disintegrate." E. exegesis - 1Cor. 12:13 : 1Cor. 12:13 ☩ “If ἐνὶ πνεύματι (en eni pneumatic) is given instrumental force, then in this passage alone we read that the Holy Spirit baptizes us into one body, where as in the other New Testament passages (Mtt. 3:11; Mark 1:8; Luke 3:16; John 1:33; Acts 1:5 in connection with [Acts 2]) we learn that Jesus baptizes his followers in or with the Holy Spirit. On this basis, some try to distinguish two separate works of grace.” Ref-0698, p. 46n49.

exegesis - 1Cor. 13:8 : 1Cor. 12:8-10; 1Cor. 13:8 ☩ “The reason an understanding of 1Cor. 12:8-10 is so significant is that in 1Cor. 13:8, a gift from each section of the first delineation in 1Cor. 12:8-10: gnōsis from the first section, prophēteiai from the second section, and glōssai from the third section. Why does Paul refer to these three gifts in that context?” Donald G. McDougall, “Cessationism in 1_Cor_13:8-12”, Ref-0164, 14/2 (Fall 2003) 177-213, p. 184. “Since tongues appears here between two other arguably revelatory gifts, since interpreted tongues brought the body of Christ an edifying word from God, and since 1Cor. 13:8-12 focuses to a great degree upon God’s revelation to His church, Paul here groups these three gifts because they are all to some degree revelatory in content. Carson suggests that maybe the distinction here is that tongues, as distinct from prophecy and knowledge, is not included in what one might term “inscripturated” revelation . . . Might not the inclusion of all three in one group and the exclusion of tongues in the list of gifts that are “rendered inoperative,” result from such a distinction?” Donald G. McDougall, “Cessationism in 1_Cor_13:8-12”, Ref-0164, 14/2 (Fall 2003) 177-213, p. 184.

exegesis - 1Cor. 13:10 : 1Cor. 13:10; Eph. 4:13 ☩ “Though the use of teleios in [Eph. 4:1-16] may not be determinative of its meaning in 1 Cor 13:10-11, it is certainly corroborative. The Ephesians passage has the same author and the same subject matter -- although with a distinctly different emphasis. Paul refers to the purpose of the gifts and states that a reason for the gifts is that the church might attain to the status of ἀνδρα τέλειον (andra teleion, “a mature man”) (Eph. 4:13), in order that they might no longer be νεπιοί (Eph. 4:14) “tossed here and there by waves” (Eph 4:14, NASB). Note that teleion and νεπιοί stand in contrast to one another, and teleion clearly refers to maturity.” Donald G. McDougall, “Cessationism in 1_Cor_13:8-12”, Ref-0164, 14/2 (Fall 2003) 177-213, p. 205. “On the basis of Paul’s use of teleios throughout his epistles and more specifically elsewhere in 1 Corinthians, it is evident that 1 Cor 13:10 uses to teleion in contrast with νεπιοί as a reference to “maturity” and not to “completeness” or the presence of the Lord, although the latter is clearly in view in 1 Cor. 13:12. Although to teleion does not refer to the completion of the canon, the overall emphasis on divine revelation in this passage and the reference to three revelatory gifts shows that the revelatory process is a major theme. By the time the church becomes mature, the revelatory process reflected in the three gifts will come to an end by God’s intervention. Thus tongues -- a supernatural manifestation of the use of earthly languages -- will end prior to or at the time of this maturation. . . . At the maturation of the church (whenever that happens) all revelatory gifts will have come to an end according to this passage.” Donald G. McDougall, “Cessationism in 1_Cor_13:8-12”, Ref-0164, 14/2 (Fall 2003) 177-213, pp. 212-213. “At least seven interpretations have been suggested for the meaning of τέλειος (“the perfect”) in verse 10: The completion of the canon (Merrill Unger, Joseph Dillow, Myron Houghton), the maturity of the Church at the end of the apostolic age (Robert Thomas), at the time the believer dies and is face to face with the Lord (Thomas R. Edgar), at the Rapture (Stanley D. Toussaint), at the Second Advent of Christ (Charles C. Ryrie in the Ryrie Study Bible, but he seems to suggest the canon view in Balancing the Christian Life, the eternal state (John F. MacArthur, Jr.) and the eschaton in general (Gordon D. Fee).” Robert Dean, Jr., “Three Arguments for the Cessation of Tongues”, Ref-0055, Vol. 9 No. 26, March 2005, 63:86, p. 73.

exegesis - 1Cor. 13:12 : 1Cor. 13:12 ☩ “In a mirror a person looks at himself, not at someone else or God. In the comparison, face to face must describe looking into something that accurately and clearly reflects oneself. When the believer gazes into the completed canon of Scripture, he sees himself as he truly is.” Robert Dean, Jr., “Three Arguments for the Cessation of Tongues”, Ref-0055, Vol. 9 No. 26, March 2005, 63:86, p. 77.

exegesis - 1Cor. 15:54 : Isa. 25:8; 1Cor. 15:54 ☩ “It seems certain, however, that this second-century Theodotion was preceded in his work of revision by a person of the 1st cent b.c. or 1st cent a.d., styled “Ur-Theodotion” by modern scholarship. The reason for this postulate is the appearance of “Theodotonic” readings in writings antedating the time of the activity of the second-century Theodotion. Some of these readings are found in the NT (cf. the quotation in 1 Cor. 15:54 of Isa. 25:8, which corresponds exactly to that of Theodotion).” S. K. Soderlund, Ref-0008, p. 4:404.

Now just two more steps. First you compare בָּקָר and בָּקָר. The words are the same except for the middle consonant, ך or ך. The shureq vowel (ו), though written with waw, is only a vowel and represents a vocalization decision by copyists long after 1 Samuel was first written. . . . What original word would account for both בָּקָר and בָּקָר? Your answer is: בָּקָר, “cattle.” The ך of בָּקָר is probably the miscopy. Second, you confirm this decision by analyzing the immediate context. After “male slaves” and “female slaves” (a logical pair), “young men” and “donkeys” would hardly go together. exegesis - 2Cor. 11:14 : 2Cor. 11:14 ☩ “Or take μετασχηματίζω in 2 Corinthians 11:13-15, translated by the word “transform.” Each occurrence is in the direct middle voice. . . . The Greek verb means “to transform one’s self,” but it means more than that. It refers to the action of changing one’s outward expression by assuming an outward expression which does not come from within, and is not representative of one’s inner nature, while at the time there is no change in one’s sinner nature. It is an outward change of that which inwardly remains the same. . . . Satan originally was an angel of light, and the enswathement of light that that clothed his person come from his inner nature. This is μορφόομαι. But he fell into sin and gave outward expression of the darkness of his totally depraved nature. This is also μορφόομαι. But he saw that he could not deceive and attract the human race in that way. So he changed his outward expression to that of an angel of light by assuming from the outside an expression of light, that expression not coming from nor being representative of his sin-darkened nature. This is μετασχηματίζω. The word “masquerade” would be an approximation of the total content of this word. But even that does not translate the word in its fullness." Ref-0946, pp. 86-87.

exegesis - 2K. 24:10-12 : 2K. 24:10-12 ☪ "The Babylonian Chronicles date the siege and the deportation of King Jehoiachin (Jeconiah) of Judah from the 7th year of Nebuchadnezzar. . . . However the Hebrew account seems to conflict with the Babylonian record as it declares that the second deportation which brought Jehoiachin to Babylon . . . occurred in the 8th year of Nebuchadnezzar (2K. 24:10-12). The "discrepancy" resolves itself when it is seen that the Hebrews count the accession year of foreign monarchs as their first year of reigning. Thus Nebuchadnezzar's 7th year by Babylonian dating becomes his 8th by Hebrew reckoning." Ref-0186, p. 132.

exegesis - 2S. 15:6-7 : 2S. 15:6-7 ☪ "Many of the modern translations have followed the Syriac version and read "after four days" even though every extant Hebrew manuscript reads "forty". Admittedly, two of the Hebrew manuscripts have the novel, yet obviously erroneous rendering "forty days" rather than "forty years". However, as it is impossible that Absalom could have won the hearts of all Israel in so short a time, all scholarship has conceded that this is a corrupted reading of the text. . . . Possible solutions: the forty years are: 1. Not forty into David's reign for this incident did not occur at the end of David's life. 2S. 21:1 makes clear that a minimum of 4 years remained unto David . . . 2. Not Absalom's age. We have already shown that Absalom's "potential" age at David's death would have been 70 - 33 = 37 years old (or 39 max). As we have also shown that the rebellion and death of Absalom took place at least 4 years prior to David's decease, Absalom's life span cannot exceed 37 - 4 = 33 years (or 39 - 4 = 35). 3. Not David's age, Were David 40, Absalom would be only about 7 years old . . . 4. Not the number of years Absalom was at the gate winning the hearts of Israel for he did not live that long. . . . the answer is number five -- other! . . . When had David won over and bonded unto himself the hearts of the men of Israel? Forty years earlier when he slew the Philistine giant, Goliath . . ." Ref-0186, p. 105.

exegesis - 2Th. 2:2 : 2Th. 2:2 ☪ "The rendering of the verb ενεστηκεν in [2Th. 2:2b] as 'is present' rather than as 'has come' or 'will come' is very important, because it is the key to interpreting the difficult verse immediately following. English versions have, for the most part, consistently mistranslated this verb. . . . Only three versions consulted render the verb correctly. Darby renders, 'the day of the Lord is present,' Weymouth has, 'the day of the Lord is now here,' and the NRSV gives, 'the day of the Lord is already here.' Either of these captures the intensive force of the perfect tense ενεστηκεν. That the perfect tense of ενιστημι (enistemi) means 'is present' cannot be doubted seriously in light of its usage elsewhere in the NT (Rom. 8:38; 1Cor. 3:22; 7:26; Gal. 1:4; Heb. 9:9)." Thomas, Robert L., 'Imminence in the NT, Especially Paul's Thessalonian Epistles,' Ref-0164, Vol. 13 No. 2, Fall 2002, pp. 209-210. "The perfect tense 'views action as a finished product' and 'signifies action as complete from the point of view of present time.' In light of this, James Everett Frame has asserted that the verb does not mean 'is coming,' 'is at hand,' or 'is near.' Instead, it means 'has come,' 'is on hand,' or 'is present.' Thus, the Thessalonian believers had been told that the Day of the Lord had already come and they were in it." Ref-0220, p. 64. "If the context warrants, as this one certainly does, a present [tense] idea is legitimate and even preferable: "If the apostasy does not come first and the man of lawlessness is not revealed, the Day of the Lord is not present. That is a proverbial truth you can count on." . . . Transferring these grammatical findings back to 2 Thessalonians 2:3, we arrive at the following sense: "The day of the Lord is not present unless first in sequence within that day there comes the apostasy and, following this apostasy's beginning, the revealing of the man of lawlessness." Rather than the two events preceding the Day of the Lord as has so often been suggested, these are happenings that compose the earlier stages of that day after it has begun. By observing the nonoccurrence of these, the readers could rest assured that the day whose early stages are so characterized was not currently present for them." Ref-0231, pp. 73-75.

exegesis - 2Th. 2:3 : 2Th. 2:3 ☪ "In 1Th. 5:2 [Paul] wrote that the day of the Lord will come as a thief. If that day has precursors as 2Th. 2:3 is often alleged to teach, it could hardly come as a thief. Thieves come without advance notice or precursors. Neither does the day of the Lord have any prior signals before it arrives." Thomas, Robert L., 'Imminence in the NT, Especially Paul's Thessalonian Epistles,' Ref-0164, Vol. 13 No. 2, Fall 2002, pp. 212. "The first seven English translations of apostasia all rendered the noun as either "departure" or "departing." They are as follows: Wycliffe Bible (1384); Tyndale Bible (1526); Coverdale Bible (1535); Cranmer Bible (1539); Breeches Bible (1576); Beza Bible (1583); Geneva Bible (1608). This supports the notion that the word truly means "departure." In fact, Jerome's Latin translation, known as the Vulgate from around the time of A.D. 400, renders apostasia with the "word discessio, meaning 'departure.'" Why was the King James Version the first to depart from the established translation of "departure"? Theodore Beza, the Swiss reformer was the first to translate apostasia and create a new word, rather than translate it as others had done. The translators of the King James Version were the first to introduce the new rendering of apostasia as "falling away." Most English translators have followed the KJV and Beza in departing from translating apostasia as "departure." No good reason was ever given. . . . Kenneth Wuest, a Greek scholar from Moody Bible Institute, added the following contextual support to taking apostasia as a physical departure: "But then hee apostasia of which Paul is speaking precedes the revelation of Antichrist in his true identity., and is to katechon that which holds back his revelation (2Th. 2:6). The hee apostasia, therefore, cannot be either a general apostasy in Christendom which does precede the coming of Antichrist, nor can it be the particular apostasy which is the result of his activities in making himself the alone object of worship. Furthermore, that which holds back his revelation (2Th. 2:3) is vitally connected with hoo katechoon (2Th. 2:7), He who holds back the same event. The latter is, in my opinion, the Holy Spirit and His activities in the Church. All of which means that I am driven to the inescapable conclusion that the hee apostasia (2Th. 2:3) refers to the Rapture of the Church which precedes the Day of the Lord, and holds back the revelation of the Man of Sin who ushers in the world-aspect of that period." Further, the nearest antecedent for the third person plural reference "they" of Acts 2:1 is in the final plural phrase of Acts 1:23, "the eleven apostles." Thus only the eleven were gathered in one place when the Church was born." Robert Dean, Jr., "Three Arguments for the Cessation of Tongues", Ref-0055, Vol. 9 No. 26, March 2005, 63:86, p. 84.

The rule states that in this construction the second noun refers to the same thing to which the first noun does, and is a further description of it. That means that boulē and prognōsis refer to the same thing, the act of selecting the One out of the Persons of the Godhead who would be the Lamb slain as the Sacrifice for sin. The word prognōsis therefore means more here than mere previous knowledge, even though that knowledge be part of the omniscience of God. It partakes of the nature of boulē and is part and parcel of the same act. It means "foreordination." The a.v., translators have so rendered it in I Peter 1:20 where they speak of Christ as "the Lamb who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world." The word should also be so translated in Romans 8:29 and 11:2 in connection with Israel as the people foreordained of God, and in I Peter 1:2, with relation to the saints being foreordained, as well as in our present verse, where the translation should read, "for whom He did foreordain." It speaks of the sovereign act of God foreordaining certain from among mankind to be saved. It is only fair that the author inform the reader that Vincent, Denney, Robertson, and Alford all translate prognōsis by the word "foreknowledge" and understand it to refer to the prescience of God, as Vincent puts it, not to the idea of pre-election." - exegesis - Acts_3:19 : Acts 3:19 ☉ "The phrase "times of refreshing" looks ahead to the promised eschatological Davidic kingdom on this earth. However, not everyone agrees with this interpretation. Actually five views are held. First, some say it looks at present-day spiritual blessings, and the coming of Christ takes places in a person's heart when that person trusts in Him. Second, others say Peter was stating that the times of refreshing will be fulfilled in the present age. Third, others say the times of refreshing refer to blessings for present-day believers but that the sending of the Messiah refers to the second coming of Christ when He will bring great spiritual blessings. A fourth view is that the times of refreshing refer to present-day blessings whereas the sending of the Messiah is yet future when the Old Testament prophecies regarding a literal earthly kingdom will fulfilled. A number of writers take a fifth position, maintain that the times of refreshing and the sending of Jesus are both eschatological and refer to the coming of the promised Davidic kingdom. A number of important factors support this view. . . . The noun ἀναψύξεως, translated "refreshing," is a New Testament hapax legomenon. It is used in Greek literature in various forms to refer to "cooling by blowing, refreshing, relieving, resting." It occurs in the Septuagint only in Exodus (Eng., Ex. 8:15; LXX, Ex. 8:11), where it refers to relief from the plague of frogs." Stanley D. Toussaint and Jay Q. exegesis - Dan. 9:25-26 : Dan. 9:25-26 ☪ "That by this 'anointed one' Christ is meant (and not perhaps Cyrus, or according to 2 Macc. 4:34, the high priest Onias, murdered in B.C. 172) was the interpretation of the ancient church and of such later expositors as Hengstenberg, Auberlen, and Keil." Ref-0197, p. 159n2. "As already noted, this noun in Daniel 9:25-26 does not refer to a high priest because the designation מְשִׁיחַ for a high priest was not used beyond the Mosaic period, and whenever it was used it was always clarified by juxtaposition with the word "priest" in the articular expression הַמְשִׁיחַ הַכֹּהֵן. Some appeal to Isaiah 45:1 to support their contention that the Persian king Cyrus is the מְשִׁיחַ of Daniel 9:25. But this seems improbable because the term מְשִׁיחַ in Isaiah 45:1 is clarified by the juxtaposition of Cyrus's name with the term מְשִׁיחוֹ לְכוֹרֶשׁ (לְמִשְׁחָהוֹ לְכוֹרֶשׁ). This shows that this foreign king is described by God as His anointed one. However, such clarification is noticeably absent in Daniel 9:25. In Daniel 9:25-26 מְשִׁיחַ is used in a unique way. Only here does מְשִׁיחַ occur without the article and without any qualifying noun or pronoun. The more formal designation for the king of Israel was "the Lord's anointed" or sometimes "My anointed" (1S. 2:35), "Your anointed" (Ps. 132:10), or "His anointed" (1S. 12:3). In Daniel 9:25, however, the one in view is designated מְשִׁיחַ, an expression that occurs nowhere else in the Old Testament. The expression is doubly unique. The noun מְשִׁיחַ, which occurs forty-three times in the Old Testament, has a wide semantic range. The word basically means "leader, ruler, prince," and is used most frequently for various kings of Israel (for Saul in 1S. 9:16 and David in 2S. 5:2). Several times מְשִׁיחַ is used of a priest (e.g., 1Chr. 9:20), twice for foreign rulers (Ps. 76:12; Eze. 28:2), once of nobles (Job 29:10, in the plural), and a few times of military commanders (1Chr. 13:1) and tribal heads (1Chr. 27:16). Yet only rarely does the term occur in the prophets. However, in Isaiah 55:4 the term מְשִׁיחַ is used in a prophetic reference to the Messiah, "Behold, I have made him a witness to the peoples, a leader [מְשִׁיחַ] and commander for the peoples." Hence both the term מְשִׁיחַ and מְשִׁיחַ are capable of referring to the Messiah, the promised Son of David. The question, however, is how מְשִׁיחַ should be understood in Daniel 9:25. Is there anything in the preceding context that would be a suitable reference to the Messiah? . . . A suitable candidate in a previous chapter in Daniel makes perfect sense, namely, "One like a Son of Man" to whom is "give dominion, glory, and a kingdom, that all peoples, nations, and men of every language might serve Him" (Dan. 7:13-14). Daniel 9 is also linked to chapter 7 by references in both chapters to a "week" and to the Antichrist. . . . This link, then, serves to support contextually the argument that the מְשִׁיחַ of 9:25 is the "Son of Man" of 7:13, namely, the Messiah." J. Paul Tanner, Is Daniel's Seventy-Weeks Prophecy Messianic? Part 2 Ref-0200, Vol. 166 No. 663 July-September 2009, 319:335, pp. 323-324. "McComiskey (following the argument commonly used by critical scholars) objects to [the identification of the מְשִׁיחַ as Jesus] because of a punctuation marker known as an 'atnāh in the Masoretic text. That mark (,) is placed between the words "seven weeks" . . . and "sixty two weeks" . . . McComiskey says this means that the מְשִׁיחַ appears after seven weeks (of years) from the issuing of the "decree [בְּרַר] to restore and rebuild Jerusalem," not after sixty-nine weeks (seven and sixty-two) weeks). . . . The NRSV reflects this understanding of the 'atnāh in its translation. "Know therefore and understand: from the time that the word went out to restore and rebuild Jerusalem until the time of an anointed prince, there shall be seven weeks; and for sixty-two weeks it shall be built again with streets and moat, but in troubled time." This translation, however, is not convincing. First, in their original form the Hebrew manuscripts did not have vowel points or accentuation markers. These were added by Jewish scribes known as Masoretes many centuries after the time of Jesus' crucifixion. . . . about A.D. 600-700 . . . Thus there is nothing inspired about the accentuation markers, and they are certainly subject to debate. The primary Greek version of Daniel (which was accepted by the early church fathers) was the text of Theodotion. Although there is some dispute as to the identity of Theodotion and when this text originated, the point is that this Greek text reflects no bifurcation of the verse between the two temporal references. Beckwith highlights the significance of these early translations that preceded the imposition of Masoretic punctuation. "In the Septuagint, in Theodotion, in Symmachus and in the Peshitta the 7 and 62 weeks are treated as a single period, at the end of which the anointed one comes. The same is true even of Aquila's translation, though Aquila's rabbinical education was unimpeachable." Even Jerome, who knew Hebrew and lived in Palestine in the latter part of the fourth century A.D. where he certainly would have known of the best manuscripts of that day, made no indication in his Latin Vulgate translation of separating the seven and sixty-two weeks. He translated מְשִׁיחַ quite literally as christum ducem ("Christ, a leader"). Because of the heated polemics between Christians and Jews over the centuries, some might even claim that Jewish scribes purposely inserted the 'atnāh in verse 25 in order to refute the Christian claim that Jesus is the predicted Messiah. Yet this theory can never be proved or disproved. Beyond these points, however, some clarification is needed about the purpose and accuracy of the Masoretic use of the 'atnāh. It is sometimes mistakenly assumed that the 'atnāh served always as a disjunctive accent, marking a major break between clauses. Although it certainly has this use, that was not its only function. . . . In an excellent analysis of the Hebrew 'atnāh Owusu-Antwi remarks, "It is a distinguishing feature that the Hebrew verse is divided into two parts termed 'dichotomy,' for the purposes of chanting. The 'atnāh is generally employed to mark the caesura of the dichotomy. Although 'atnāh is the principle divider within the verse, the accentuators did not hesitate to make strict rules for logical (or syntactical) division give way, when they wished to express emphasis, or otherwise give effect to the reading." Owusu-Antwi suggests several more ways in which the 'atnāh is used. . . . In some cases the 'atnāh has been wrongly placed. . . . In verse 25 the presence of the 'atnāh between the "seven weeks" and "sixty-two weeks" should not be the governing factor for understanding this verse." J. Paul Tanner, Is Daniel's Seventy-Weeks Prophecy Messianic? Part 2 Ref-0200, Vol. 166 No. 663 July-September 2009, 319:335, pp. 325-238. "Verse 24 cites six things God will accomplish in the seventy weeks. . . . If these purposes of God are fulfilled in any way by Christ, then this would reinforce the messianic interpretation of the passage. . . . Even if some of the six purposes for the seventy weeks (Dan. 9:24) could be understood in a nonmessianic way, one stands out as clearly messianic . . . "to bring in everlasting righteousness." The words "everlasting righteousness" do not occur elsewhere in the Old Testament. Of course the noun צְדָקָה ("righteousness") and its cognate forms occur scores of times. . . . Of interest is the fact that this word is used numerous times in Isaiah. Many verses state that the Messiah will transform the nation in righteousness [Isa. 1:26; 11:4-5; 16:5; 62:1-2].

. . . When Daniel wrote that one of the purposes for the seventy weeks is "to bring in everlasting righteousness" (Dan. 9:24), this would have been freighted with meaning for the Jews, for they were looking forward to what the Messiah, Son of David, would accomplish for Israel as a nation and for the world. His kingdom will be a kingdom characterized by righteousness under His righteous rule. . . . Obviously the seventy weeks cannot have been fulfilled in the Maccabean period when Antiochus terrorized the nation, because God did not then "bring in everlasting righteousness." J. Paul Tanner, Is Daniel's Seventy-Weeks Prophecy Messianic? Part 2 Ref-0200, Vol. 166 No. 663 July-September 2009, 319:335, pp. 329-331. "Another point to note is that the מְשִׁיחַ in verse 26 is the same figure as the מְשִׁיחַ in verse 25. These are the only two anarthrous constructions of מְשִׁיחַ in the Old Testament, and the difference between them can be easily explained by noting that once the author introduced him as מְשִׁיחַ in verse 25, he simply needed to refer to him by the more abbreviated designation מְשִׁיחַ in the following verse. With such close proximity of the references one would not expect two different individuals to be referred to." J. Paul Tanner, *Is Daniel's Seventy-Weeks Prophecy Messianic? "That Dan. 11 treats of the Antichrist all pre-millennial students are agreed, but as to how much of it refers to him there is considerable difference of opinion. A small minority, from whom we must dissent, confine the first thirty-five verses to the past. Others make the division in the middle of the chapter and regard all from Dan. 11:21 onwards as a description of the Man of Sin, and with them the writer is in hearty accord. A few consider the entire chapter, after Dan. 11:2, as containing a prediction of the Antichrist under the title of 'The King of the North,' and while we are not prepared to unreservedly endorse this, yet it is fully allowed that there is not a little to be said in its favor." exegesis - Dan. 11:6 : Dan. 11:6 ☪ "In the passage of time, it was natural that there would be intermarriage for political reasons between Egypt and Syria, and such is pictured in verse 6. The participants were the king of the south Ptolemy II Philadelphus (285-246 B.C.) and his daughter, Berenice, who was married to Antiochus II Theos (261-246 B.C.) about 252 B.C." Ref-0005, p. 258.

exegesis - Dan. 11:9 : Dan. 11:9 ☪ "Verse 9 as translated in the King James Version seems to imply that the king of the south returns to his own land. A better translation, however, would indicate that he, Seleucus Callinicus, is the subject of the verb shall come into his kingdom and refers to the fact that Seleucus several years after the Egyptian invasion was able to mount a return attack on Egypt about 20 B.C. Seleucus, however, was defeated completely and was forced to 'return into his own land.' " Ref-0005, p. 260.

exegesis - Dan. 11:36 : Dan. 11:36 ☪ "While it is often claimed that there is no indication of a change of time frame or subject in Daniel 11:36, two good factors indicate that the king of verse 36 is not the same as the king of the north in verses 21-35. First, verse 35 ends with the notice that the persecution of Antiochus will refine God's people for "the time of the end." It is reasonable to think that the prophecy will immediately begin a discussion of the time of the end, in keeping with the catch-concept organizing principle seen elsewhere in prophecy. . . . Second, verse 36 introduces the king in a unique way. He is simply referred to as "the king." No Hellenistic king in this chapter before verse 36 is referred to simply as "the king," even when having been recently mentioned (cf. v. 25). Alexander is "a mighty king" (v. 3). Various Seleucid kings are always "the king of the north" (vv. 6-8, 11, 13, 15), and various Ptolemaic kings are always "the king of the south" (vv. 5-6, 9, 11, 14, 25 [twice]). The king of the north and south together are called "the two kings" (v. 27)." Andrew E. Steinmann, Is the Antichrist in Daniel 11?, Ref-0200, 162 (April-June 2005): 195-209, p. 203.

exegesis - Dan. 11:36-45 : Dan. 11:36-45 ☪ "Traditional Christian exegesis has interpreted Daniel 11:36-45 differently, tending to read these verses as a prophecy about an eschatological king, often identified as the Antichrist (to use a New Testament term). This was the position of several church fathers, including Chrysostom, Hippolytus, Theodoret, and Jerome.² Luther also adopted this interpretation, and contemporary evangelical scholars often advocate it. It views the end of Daniel 11 not as inaccurate prophecy but as prophecy that is yet to be fulfilled. It is part of the larger teaching of Scripture concerning the events leading up to Jesus' second advent. [2] Jerome saw some application to the Antichrist starting at Dan. 11:21, but he said verses 36-45 refer exclusively to the Antichrist. See Jerome's commentary on 11:21-45 in Edward J. Young, The Prophecy of Daniel: A Commentary (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1949, reprint, Eugene, OR: Wipf and Stock, 1998), 306-17. Hippolytus and Theodoret understood Dan. 11:36 as the beginning of the prophecy about the Antichrist, but Chrysostom applied the whole chapter to the Antichrist (see Montgomery, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Book of Daniel, 466-70)." Andrew E. Steinmann, Is the Antichrist in Daniel 11?, Ref-0200, 162 (April-June 2005): 195-209, pp. 195-196. "Yet one faces several problems in seeking to identify the king of Dan. 11:36-45 with Antiochus. First, no historical facts suggest that Antiochus exalted and magnified "himself about every god" (v. 36), or showed "no regard for the gods of his fathers" (v. 37), or honored "a god whom his fathers did not know" (v. 38). While Antiochus had his coins inscribed "King Antiochus, God Manifest," these coins also bore the likeness of Zeus on the reverse, while other coins he issued depicted Apollo. Moreover, Antiochus was known for his devotion to the Greek gods in general, and in Jerusalem he erected a statue of Olympian Zeus and ordered that sacrifices be made to it. He also promoted worship of Dionysius in Jerusalem (2 Macc. 6:7). Greek historian Polybius, a contemporary of Antiochus, reported that in 166 B.C. Antiochus held a festival at Daphne where he honored "all gods or spirits worshiped by people." In addition Apollo was honored on the festival's coinage." Andrew E. Steinmann, Is the Antichrist in Daniel 11?, Ref-0200, 162 (April-June 2005): 195-209, p. 201. "Before the rise of modern higher criticism there was a long-standing interpretive tradition among both Jews and Christians that the king described in verses 36-45 differs from the one prophesied in previous verses. The consensus of such diverse figures as Chrysostom, Hippolytus, Theodoret, Jerome, Rashi, Ibn Ezra, Luther, and Calvin was that one should not see these verses as a description of Antiochus." exegesis - Dan. 11:37 : Dan. 11:37 (Gods plural?) ☪ Word is elohim and could also be translated in the singular as is common elsewhere. "The very fact that the plural form for the word 'god' is used in a context where the singular is found in the majority of cases makes this a reference to heathen deities and not a reference to the God of Israel. . . . In Christian translations -- such as the American Standard Version, the Revised Standard Version, the Amplified Old Testament, the New American Standard, the New International Version, among others -- have all translated the phrase to read the gods of his fathers. . . . the New Scofield Reference Bible, itself based on the King James Version, has done a great service by rendering this passage to read in the plural form. This is true of the official Orthodox Jewish commentary in the Socino Commentary on the Old Testament, as well as the prominent Christian commentary in the Kiel and Delitzsch Commentary." Ref-0219, p. 211. "The king will not favor "the God of his fathers" (Dan. 11:37). This phrase (with "his" and with other pronouns) occurs forty-five times in the Old Testament and is always a description of Yahweh.¹³ Therefore this king will come from among the people of God. Some interpreters see this as an indication that the Antichrist will be Jewish. However, this phrase is a religious identification, not an ethnic one. It indicates that the eschatological king will come from those whose ancestral tradition is to worship the true God. The perfect paraphrastic construction is most likely intensive, however. The KJV translators, though not having nearly as good a grasp on Greek as modern translators, seem to have had a better grasp on English. They apparently recognized that to translate Eph. 2:8 with an English perfect would say nothing about the state resulting from the act of being saved." Ref-0129, p. 575. Regarding the neuter demonstrative And this τούτο not of yourselves. . . Does it refer to grace in χαριτι? Faith πιστεως? Note that the demonstrative τούτο is neuter in gender whereas the other two nouns are feminine in gender. Although a neuter demonstrative can refer to a feminine, it is a relatively rare construction. Most likely, τούτο refers to the entire statement that precedes: by grace you have been saved through faith. "The one verse which seems to teach that saving faith is the gift of God is

Ephesians 2:8. But a careful study of this verse and its context shows clearly that it is salvation which is the gift of God. The Wycliffe Bible Commentary gives this explanation: The word that refers not to grace or to faith, but to the whole act of salvation. This is also the interpretation of Calvin, Meyer, Ellicott, Alford, Eadie, and others. The Greek text favors this meaning because the relative pronoun that τούτο is neuter while the word faith πιστις is feminine. In addition the whole context, especially verse 9 [Eph. 2:9], makes clear that the issue is salvation by grace opposed to the ever-present error of salvation by works. The same conclusion is reached by the grammarian J. Harold Greenlee. Sir Robert Anderson's footnote on Ephesians 2:8 is well stated: Eph 2:8 . 'The gift of God' here is salvation by grace through faith . Not the faith itself. 'This is precluded,' as Alford remarks, 'by the manifestly parallel clauses 'not of yourself,' and 'not of works,' the latter of which would be irrelevant as asserted of faith. "Rashi, a medieval Jewish commentator (1040-1105) believed that the first word of Genesis 1:1 in the Hebrew text, b'rae shai (In the beginning) was in what is called in Hebrew the "construct state." He would, therefore, have translated Genesis 1:1 in this manner: "In the beginning of God's creating of the heaven and the earth." He felt that it was impossible that Genesis should be giving the actual order of creation, because if so, Genesis 1:2 has the Spirit of God hovering over the waters before the text says anything specifically about the creation of the waters. The answer to this problem, however, lies in the fact that the waters over which the Spirit of God was hovering on the first part of the first day of creation were doubtless included in the general term "earth." Thus when God created the "earth" in Genesis 1:1 "waters" were a part of that. In his translation of Genesis 1:1 as a dependent clause . . . Rashi is followed not only by Abraham Ibn Ezra, also a medieval Jewish commentator, and the translators of the recent New Jewish Version (1962), but also by several evangelical scholars including Merrill Unger. This view would require the changing of the Masoretic vowel pointing, and a complete extrusion of creatio ex nihilo from the Genesis account of creation. . . . For over 2000 years since the translation of the Hebrew Torah into the Greek for the Jewish community in Alexandria, Egypt, all official Jewish translations until the New Jewish Version have rendered Genesis 1:1 as an independent clause." Ref-0819, pp. 17-18. "Normally, a word in the absolute state has the article. Had this been the case in Genesis 1:1, one might have expected to find the word b'rae shai instead of b'rae' shai. But the article is missing in this instance, and its absence has precipitated a good deal of discussion. One thing is certain: a noun in the construct state cannot take the article, so if b'rae' shai is in the construct, its form is just what we would expect." Ref-0819, pp. 152-153. "One of the most obvious arguments for the absolute state of b'rae shai in Genesis 1:1 is the wording of some of the ancient translations (and transliterations). Their testimony is worthy of notice since they were prepared by men much nearer both in time and in linguistic understanding to the writing of the Old Testament. Those who are so cavalier in their dismissal of the traditional rendering might well remember that the translation "In the beginning God created" has the support of such ancient versions as the "LXX, Vulgate, Aquila, Theodotion, Symmachus, Targum Onkelos." The Septuagint (LXX), for example, reads en archē ho theos epoiesen the translation of which is indisputably, "In the beginning God made." Ref-0819, p. 155.

Maimonides (aka Rabbi Moses ben Maimon, or the acronym Rambam) has been considered the key figure in Judaism since the Temple was destroyed in A.D. 70. . . . Ibn Ezra was somewhat liberal, imbibing neo-platonic philosophy, and was a forerunner to the Jewish numerological mysticism known as the Kabbala. But on Genesis, he has no doubt: he says very clearly, 'One day refers to the movement of the sphere.' This shows that the common sceptical objection 'how could the creation days be literal before the sun was created' was solved in principle centuries ago. The 'sphere' referred to the celestial sphere of the pre-Galilean Ptolemaic cosmology, universally accepted in the Middle Ages. . . . The footnote makes sure we get the point when it says, 'The heavenly sphere made one revolution. The sun was not yet . . .' Ahaz was terrified because the purpose of Pekah and Rezin was to replace him on the throne of Judah by "the son of Tabeel" (Isa. 7:5-6). . . . The Lord, however, told Ahaz through Isaiah that this effort would not succeed and that He would give him a sign concerning it. A child would be born who would not be old enough to discern evil from good (Isa. 7:16) or to "say 'My father' or 'My mother' " before the land of the two kings Ahaz fared would be devastated. . . . The child was to be called "Immanuel" (7:14). This was the second son of Isaiah, Maher-Shalal-Hash-Baz ("speed the spoil, hasten the prey"), who was to be a prototype of Christ . . . The invasion would occur before the child had reached the age of two. It was between the years 735 to 732 that this took place." Ref-0839, pp. 133-134. See Ref-1272 for a more accurate interpretation which understands the child to be Shear-Jashub (Isa. 7:3) who accompanied Isaiah to see Ahab. The name Immanuel applies only to the Christ child which is a separate prophecy concerning virgin birth which does not concern either of Isaiah's children. "The historical setting [of Isaiah 7:14] was a threat against Judah around the year 734 BC. At that time, Rezin, king of Syria (Aram) and Pekah, king of the northern kingdom of Israel, formed an anti-Assyrian alliance. They in turn wanted Ahaz, king of Judah, to join their alliance. When he refused, they decided to make war against Ahaz to force the issue (7:1). The northern alliance against Ahaz caused great fear in the royal family of David (7:2) because the goal was not just to conquer Judah but also to "set p the son of Tabeel as king" in the place of Ahaz (7:6). Their plan would place a more pliable king on the throne and also put an end to the Davidic house. This thread provides a significant detail in understanding the passage." Ref-1272, p. 148. "A close reading of the text will disclose not just one prophecy here but two--a long term prediction addressed to the house of David (Isa. 7:13-15) and a short-term prediction addressed to Ahaz (Isa. 7:16-25). . . . Since the northern alliance was threatening to replace Ahaz with the son of Tabeel, the entire house of David was being endangered. Were Syria and Israel to succeed, the messianic promise of a future son of David who would have an eternal house, kingdom, and throne (2 Sam 7:16) would be demolished. This provides the need for a long-term sign of hope that despite the menace to the house of David, the Messiah would be born, with the sign of His coming being His virgin birth. . . . When addressing Ahaz alone, the singular was used. However in 7:13-14, Isaiah used the second person plural. This is not an obvious change in the English Bible, but in v. 13 the imperative verb "listen" is plural, the expression "is it not enough for you" is plural, and "Will you also try" is plural. Then in v. 14 "you" is plural. The reason for the shift is that God was clearly fed up with this wicked and sanctimonious king, so he addressed the royal house he represented. Moreover, it was not only Ahaz that was being threatened but the entire house of David. . . . The prophet returned to using the second-person singular pronoun in 7:16 ("the land of the two kings you [sg.] dread"). In 7:1011 he used the singular to address King Ahaz. Then, when addressing the house of David with the prophecy of Messiah, he shifted to the plural. But in 7:16, he addressed King Ahaz, using the singular pronoun once again and giving him a clear prophecy: before Shear-Jashub would be able to discern good from evil, the northern confederacy attacking Judah would fail. Within two years, Tiglath-Pileser defeated both Israel and Syria, just as the prophet had predicted. Having completed his long-term prophecy, Isaiah gave a short-term prophecy. In doing so, he followed a frequent pattern in his book. He consistently did this so his readership could have confidence in the distant prediction by observing the fulfillment of the near one." Ref-1272, p. 140, 158. "Some might object that the careful reading available to Matthew [Isa. 7:14] was not understandable to Ahaz, who might be considered "the original audience" of this prophecy. This objection fails to understand the nature of the Bible as a text. While Ahaz did receive this prophecy in a particular time and place, all we have is a textual record of that event in the composition known as the book of Isaiah. Thus, Ahaz is not the original audience of the book of Isaiah but a character in the inspired narrative written in the book. The audience of the book is eighth century BC Judah, to whom a careful reading of the visible compositional strategies were available. They could read it in context with Isaiah 9 and 11 just as any reader of the book of Isaiah can after the house of David had found its fulfillment in the virgin birth of Jesus of Nazareth." As Shear-jashub (Isa. 7:3, 16), Isaiah's first son, was given as a sign of deliverance to Judah, so Mahershalal-hash-baz, the second son, was the sign of the destruction of Judah's foes." Ref-1274, p. 1163-1164 "So who is the child in [Isa. 7:16]? In light of Isaiah being directed to bring his own son to the confrontation with the king at the conduit of the upper pool [Isa. 7:3], it makes most sense to identify the lad as Shear-Jashub. Otherwise there would be no purpose for God directing Isaiah to bring the boy. Thus having promised the virgin birth of the Messiah (Isa. 7:13-15), the prophet then points to the very small boy that he has brought along and says, "But before this lad (using the article with a demonstrative force) knows enough to refuse evil and choose good, the land whose two kings you dread will be forsaken." In this way, Shear-Jashub functioned as a sign to the king. Appropriately, Isaiah could tell Judah in the very next chapter, "Here I am with the children the Lord has given me to be signs and wonders in Israel from the Lord of Hosts who dwells on Mount Zion" (Isa. 8:18)." exegesis - John 3:4 : John 3:4 ☪ "To fully understand why Nicodemus posed the question as he did, it is necessary to understand that in Pharisaic Judaism, there were six different ways of being born again. Nicodemus qualified for four of the six ways. The two ways for which he was not qualified were: 1. When Gentiles converted to Judaism, they were said to be born again. Since Nicodemus was not a Gentile, he could not qualify in this manner. 2. When a man was crowned king, he was said to be born again. Nothing is said about Nicodemus having been of the House of David, and hence, he was not of royal lineage. But there were four other ways to be born again, and Nicodemus qualified for all four. 1. First, when a Jewish boy became bar mitzvah at the age of 13, he was said to be born again. At that age, he subjected himself to the Mosaic Law and became responsible for his own sins. Since Nicodemus was beyond the age of 13, he had already experienced his bar mitzvah. 2. A second way was by marriage, for when a Jew married, he was said to be born again. Although nothing is said about Nicodemus's wife, it has been clearly stated that he was a member of the Sanhedrin. One of the rules for becoming a member of the Sanhedrin was that one must be married, and so we know from this that Nicodemus was married. 3. A third way that a Jew could be born again was to be ordained as a rabbi. Since Nicodemus was a Pharisee, he had been ordained as a rabbi and thus had been born again in a third way. 4. The final way to be born again in Judaism was to become the head of a rabbinical school. In verse 10, Jesus said to Nicodemus that he was "the teacher of Israel." The one who was the head of rabbinical school was always referred to as the teacher of Israel. Hence, Nicodemus was also the head of a rabbinical school. The point, then, is this: Nicodemus had undergone every process available in Judaism to be born again. There was no other way available in Judaism, and so the only way he could see being born again at his age was to re-enter his mother's womb and start the process all over again." It is now generally admitted that that feast was either Purim or Passover, and Hengstenberg's proofs in favour of the latter are overwhelming. The feast of Purim had no Divine sanction. It was instituted by the decree of Esther, Queen of Persia, in the 13th year of Xerxes (b.c. 473), and it was rather a social and political than a religious feast, the service in the synagogue being quite secondary to the excessive eating and drinking which marked the day. It is doubtful whether our Lord would have observed such a feast at all; but that, contrary to the usual practice, He would have specially gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate it, is altogether incredible." In Diaspora synagogues the reading was done by only one person. Both in Israel and abroad, one person alone could read from the Prophets; he was free to select the passage (see Luke 4:17). The readings were accompanied by a targum, a translation-interpretation which included both a free rendering of the text into another language and a brief explanation of it. To whom do the italicized words "of whom" refer? Joseph as father? Mary as mother? Both Joseph and Mary as parents? It is possible for the English words "of whom" to mean any of these. However, behind the English words "of whom" stands the Greek relative pronoun ης. The feminine gender of the relative pronoun points specifically to Mary as the one from whom Jesus Christ was born. The genealogy regularly emphasizes the male who fathers a child, but here "meticulous Matthew" delivers a precise statement of the relationship of Jesus Christ to Joseph and Mary. While the genealogy establishes that Joseph is the legal father of Jesus, Matthew emphasizes that Mary is the biological parent "of whom" Jesus was born. Further, the passive voice of the verb ἐγεννήθη ("was born")--the only passive among the forty occurrences of γεννάω in the genealogy--prepares for Matthew's emphasis upon divine action in the conception and birth of Jesus (Mtt. 1:18-25)." exegesis - Rev. 3:14 : Rev. 3:14 ☪ "Further compounding the problem, the recent third edition of Bauer's "A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature" makes a startling change under its definition for ἀρχή. The earlier second edition cites Revelation 3:14 under the meaning "the first cause" with the following note: "but the meaning beginning -- first created is linguistically possible." In the third edition, however, the alternative meaning for ἀρχή in this verse is changed from "linguistically possible" to "linguistically probable" without amending any of the cited evidence. . . . The most probably interpretation of ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς κτίσεως τοῦ θεοῦ is "supreme Authority over the creation of God," encompassing both the original and new creations. . . . As in the Septuagint the majority of the occurrences of ἀρχή in the New Testament are protemporal, with the governmental sense in the second place. Of significance is the fact that there are no clear uses of ἀρχή as causal. . . . While it is wrong to determine the meaning of a word in a particular context based on statistical probability alone, the data from the nuances of ἀρχή in the Septuagint, the New Testament, and the apostolic fathers show an overwhelming tendency to employ ἀρχή as a protemporal or a governmental indicator. . . . Based on these syntactical issues the most natural rendering of the phrase would be "the supreme Authority over the creation of God," taking τῆς κτίσεως as a genitive of subordination and τοῦ θεοῦ as source or producer, an interpretation that avoids the objections against the former options. . . . The constellation of evidences presented in this article strongly suggests that viewing ἀρχή in Revelation 3:14 as governmental is most probable, whereas causal, propartial, or prosequential interpretations are improbable. This view fits the theme and theology of the Apocalypse itself (Christ as Ruler over the present and future ages); it harmonizes with the New Testament doctrine of the agency of Christ in creation (by and through the Son, but from the Father); it adopts a legitimate nuance of ἀρχή when referring to persons; it harmonizes with the most probable understanding of κτίσις (the created universe rather than the act of creating); it best explains the syntactical functions of the noun ἀρχή, and the two genitives (τῆς κτίσεως as a genitive of subordination and τοῦ θεοῦ as a genitive of source); and it best accounts for the subsequent reference in Revelation 3:21-22 to Christ being granted authority to rule by the Father. . . . Regarding the recent assertion by Bauer, Arndt, Gingrich, and Danker that the meaning "first created" for ἀρχή in Revelation 3:14 is linguistically probable, in light of the evidence and arguments presented in this article the entry should be amended to "linguistically improbable." The Latin, Coptic or Memphitic, and Armenian, which are of great value, contain it. And so do all other MSS. and versions. Ref-0035, p. 108*. "Revelation 5:9 is a passage where UBS/Nestle-Aland has gone out on a limb -- and they know it. This is reflected in their original evaluation of this as a C rating. . . . this paper shows that UBS/Nestle-Aland are joined by only two other critical Greek editions (Tischendorf and Westcott-Hort). This does not inspire confidence in their reading of verse 9. . . . only one Greek manuscript out of all the manuscripts on Revelation supports the reading preferred by the UBS/Nestle-Aland text." Ref-0782, p. 4. "Revelation 5:9 has content that is appropriate to humans (the elders), while verse 10 is appropriate for angelic singers (the cherubs). John did not explain the arrangement of singers, but his words allow for an antiphonal arrangement." Ref-0782, p. 8. "Internal arguments leave Alexandrinus under a cloud. The fact that τῷ αἵματι σου is at the top of the next makes it impossible to rule out the possibility that the scribe simply had a memory lapse as he finished once column and started another." Ref-0782, p. 12.

exegesis - Rev. 9:1 : Rev. 9:1 ☪ fallen is perfect tense, having fallen -- at a time prior to John seeing.

exegesis - Rev. 12:10 : Rev. 12:10 ☪ strength . . . and power in the NKJV is better rendered as power . . . and authority as the NASB. The phrase is δύναμις . . . και ἡ ἐξουσία. Εξουσία here is "Authority, absolute power, warrant . . . authority and commission." Ref-0227, p 278.

exegesis - Rev. 14:2 : Rev. 14:2 ☪ All texts except the TR end with the phrase, καὶ ἡ φωνὴ ἣν ἤκουσα ὡς κιθαροῶδων κιθαρίζοντων ἐν ταῖς κιθάραις αὐτῶν, and the voice (sound) which I heard as harpists while harping on the harps of them. The voice, or sound was as harps. This may not speak specifically of harpists as the KJV and NKJV assume. Also, voice and sound in this verse both are φωνή and the choice to utilize sound vs. voice is somewhat arbitrary. It may be a singular voice, or the sound (of a multitude).

exegesis - Rev. 15:2 : Rev. 15:2

exegesis - Rev. 16:17 : Rev. 16:17 ☪

According to Rev. 15:8, only God is in the temple at this juncture so the loud voice is likely His.

exegesis - Rev. 17:10 : Rev. 17:9-10 ☪ "Also" in the NKJV text (Rev. 17:10, Rev. 17:9 NASB) is not found in any Greek text. It simply says "The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sits. They are (εἰσιν) seven kings."

exegesis - Rev. 20:4 : Rev. 20:4 ☪ Who had not worshiped (NKJV) is και οἱτινες οὐ προσεκύνησαν; and all the ones who not they worshiped. The KJV and NKJV give the impression that this is a further description of those who were beheaded. Not so. This is a second category who refused worship and were killed, but not by being beheaded.

exegesis - Rom. 5:13-14 : Rom. 5:13-14 ☪ "While the word "sin" is a general term and can refer to internal sin and external sin, it can refer to the sin nature and the acts of sin externally, the words transgression and trespass have a more limited meaning. The point is this: You cannot transgress or trespass a specific commandment until the commandment is given. In other words, no one could be guilty of breaking the Mosaic Law until the Mosaic Law was given. Until then, they could be in violation of other aspects of God's law like God's moral law but could not be guilty of violating the Mosaic Law. . . . With the Mosaic Law, it was forbidden for a brother and sister to have sexual intercourse and to marry. . . . Once these commandments were given, to violate those commandments would be transgression and trespassing. . . . That was not true of those who did these things prior to the giving of the laws. It should be obvious that that children of Adam and Eve, who were brothers and sisters, married each other." Arnold Fruchtenbaum, "Fruit from the Frucht," Ref-0067, Spring 2004, p. 4. exegesis - Rom. 6:1 : Rom. 6:1 ☪ "Does . . . [Romans 6:1] refer to acts of sin or the evil nature? A glance at the Greek text will show that the word "sin" is preceded by the article. The article identifies the sin referred to as a particular kind defined by the context. It points to the sin spoken of in 5:21, and indicates that Paul is still speaking of the same sin." Ref-0946, p. 21.

exegesis - Rom. 7:1-25 : Rom. 7:1-25 ☪ "This chapter speaks neither of the experience of a Christian after his conversion (as Augustine, Jerome, the Reformers explain), nor of Paul's experience under the Law before his conversion (so, e.g. Neander). Much rather Paul speaks of himself as he would be if he were considered as 'in himself' (ver. 25, autos, ego, that is ?I, of myself, standing in my own strength,' apart from the Holy Spirit). In Romans 7 he is always 'in himself,' but in Romans 8 always 'in Christ'. Thus these two chapters do not treat of two successive experiences but of two conditions, two ways of considering the matter. Even a regenerate Christian can (abnormally indeed) sometimes (or often) be in Romans 7 as to his experience, while, as to his standing, he is always in Romans 8, and should certainly walk constantly in Romans 8." Ref-0197, p. 129.

exegesis - Rom. 9:10 : Rom. 9:10 ☪ by one man (NKJV) is better understood as by one seminal emission (εξ ενος κοιτην) according to Ref-0203, p. 440. The emphasis is on the absolutely matching origin of the two sons and God's electing purposes in accordance with this fact. Both Jacob and Esau were from the same mother, the same father, and even the same act of sexual union. ". . . "identical twins" or "monozygotic" (from "one egg"). These children share the exact same genes and hence are always the same sex and have same eye color. They are identical in every biological characteristic that is caused by the genes. . . . "fraternal twins" or "dizygotic" (from "two eggs"). In this case, both eggs from the mother are fertilized by different sperms. They can be different gender and have different genetically determined characteristics (e.g., eye color). They would share the same basic degree of genetic similarities as any two siblings born to the same parents." Michael A. Grisanti, Cultural and Medical Myths about Homosexuality, Ref-0164, Vol. 19 No. 2 Fall 2008, 175:202, pp. 178-179.

exegesis - Rom. 11:26 : Rom. 11:26; Rom. 11:28 ☪ "Covenantal interpreters usually balk over making 'Israel' in Rom. 11:26 refer to Jews in distinction with Gentiles, even though no one has objected to this national, ethnic identification in the previous ten references to 'Israel' in Romans." Walter C. Kaiser, Jr., "Kingdom Promises as Spiritual and National," Ref-0199, p. 301. "Three major views of the identity of "all Israel" in Rom. 11:26 have concluded that "all Israel" refers to the church, to the elect remnant of believing Jews during the present age, and to the ethnic nation of Israel. Romans 11:28 is an often neglected verse that helps in determining which of the views is correct because the pronoun "they" in v. 28 refers to the same people as the "all Israel" of v. 26. Since context requires that the pronoun "you" in v. 28 refers to Gentiles, the "enemies" and the "they" of v. 28 must be ethnic Jews, thereby eliminating the possibility of "all Israel" being the church. The two clauses in v. 28 describe what is true of ethnic Israel at the same time, not one condition prior to Israel's salvation and another subsequent to that salvation. That eliminates the view that "all Israel" depicts an elect remnant of believing Jews, because they could hardly be enemies according to the gospel after becoming believers." Matt Waymeyer, "The Dual Status of Israel in Romans_11:28", Ref-0164, Vol. 16 No. 1, (Spring 2005), 57:71, p. 57. "Rather for Augustine, in Romans 11, Some Jews have believed in Christ, and they are the remnant of the natural olive and fulfillment of the divine promises to historical Israel. . . . The "Israel" that will ultimately be saved are the predestined elect, drawn into a unity out of the Jews and Gentiles. . . . Judaism is simply relegated to the latter [non-elect] category, and its status in salvation-history assigned of the pre-Christian past. [Peter Corday, Principles of Patristic Exegesis: Romans 9-11 in Origin, John Chrysostom, and Augustine (New York: E. Mellen Press, 1983), 171, 333] Ref-1263, p. 5. "But consider Matt Waymeyer's persuasive point that "they" in Rom 11:28 (:they are enemies . . . they are loved") being unbelieving national Israel, is identical to the national "them" in v. 27 ("this will be my covenant with them when I take away their sins"), which is identical to "Jacob" and to national or "all Israel" in v. 26, and so is not a mere remnant." Ref-1263, p. 94 exegesis - Ru. 1:4 : Ru. 1:4 ☪ "In order to obtain children Naomi's sons married Moabite women (common values). But the Mosaic Covenant was specific regarding marriage to non-Israelites, which was not only specifically prohibited but was also considered so unthinkable that it, like the move to Moab, was a judgment of God." Charles P. Baylis, "Naomi in the Book of Ruth in Light of the Mosaic Covenant," Ref-0200, Vol. 161 No. 644, October-December 2004, 413:431, p. 421.

exegesis - Ru. 1:5 : Lev. 26:21-22; Ru. 1:5; Ru. 4:13 ☪ "God, as the giver and remover of life (Ruth 4:13), removed the sons. "If then, you walk with hostility against Me and are unwilling to obey Me . . . I will bereave you of your children" (Lev. 26:21-22)." Charles P. Baylis, "Naomi in the Book of Ruth in Light of the Mosaic Covenant," Ref-0200, Vol. 161 No. 644, October-December 2004, 413:431, p. 421.

exegesis - Ru. 1:6 : Ru. 1:6 ☪ "At the level of common values, an Israelite might consider moving to another more fruitful country, but knowing that the famine was controlled by Yahweh (Ruth 1:6) would necessitate a response based on the Mosaic Covenant. If disobedience was the cause of the famine, then a return to covenant loyalty was required (Deu. 30:1-2), but if a test was involved, then the Israelites were to trust in Yahweh to provide (8:1-20)." Charles P. Baylis, "Naomi in the Book of Ruth in Light of the Mosaic Covenant," Ref-0200, Vol. 161 No. 644, October-December 2004, 413:431, p. 420.

exegesis - Ru. 3:3 : 2S. 12:20; Ru. 3:3 ☪ "The clause "Wash yourself therefore, and anoint yourself and put on your best clothes" (Ruth 3:3) is similar to David's situation where he "washed, anointed himself, and changed his clothes" after he ceased mourning publicly for his dying child (2S. 12:20). Also when Joab wanted the woman of Tekoa to appear like a long term mourner, he said, "Please pretend to be a mourner, and put on mourning garments now, and do not anoint yourself with oil, but be like a woman who has been mourning for the dead many days" (14:2)." Charles P. Baylis, "Naomi in the Book of Ruth in Light of the Mosaic Covenant," Ref-0200, Vol. 161 No. 644, October-December 2004, 413:431, p. 421.

exegesis - Ru. 3:13 : Ru. 3:13 ☪ "The word in Hebrew is lun and not shachav, and that is significant because shachav does carry sexual connotations but lun does not. So, by the use of this verb, all ambiguity is removed concerning the sexual implication between the two." Arnold Fruchtenbaum, "Fruit from the Frucht," Ref-0067, Winter 2004, p. 6. exegesis - semantic range : ☪ + "A frequently cited example of semantic breadth is bound up with our word board." ⁷² A board is a piece of dressed lumber, a plank. Many people pay room and board, an expression possibly derived from the fact that in older English the table from which one ate on special occasions was called a festive board. A group of people gathered together for business might be called a board of trustees; and if they get on a ship or a train, they will step on board and hope they do not fall overboard. The same word can function as a verb: workmen may board up a broken window, and passengers board a jetliner." Ref-0698, p. 57. "A second level of interpretation is the task of finding adequate equivalents in the "target" language. To complicate matters, the semantic range of a given word is usually not identical to the range of its corresponding word in another language. This affords the opportunity for interpretation, and thus for error. When someone translates a word from one language into another, he or she must decide what sense the original word carries and identify an equivalent word in the target language. Thus, even if the sense of the original thought has been correctly understood, a word in the target language may be chosen that has a more specific or more general meaning than the original word. Moreover, the translator may tend to choose in the target language one word instead of another for various reasons, such as to make the translation sound pleasant or to avoid suggesting a social, political, or religious taboo in the target culture." Ref-0838, pp. 87-88.

exegesis - Sos. 3:1-5 : Sos. 3:1-5; Sos. 5:2-8 ☪ "Despite the differences, the parallels between Sos. 3:1-5 and Sos. 5:2-8 are self-evident . . . 1. She is in bed at night (3:1a; 5:2a); 2. He is nowhere to be found (3:1b), he is at her door, which he asks her to open (5:3-5); 3. She arises from her bed to seek him (3:2a), she arises from her bed to open for him (5:6a); 4. She seeks him but cannot find him (3:2b; 5:6b); 5. The night watchmen find her (3:3; 5:7a); 6. She finds her lover and takes him home (3:4), the night watchmen assault her and take her cloak (5:7c); 7. She adjures the daughters of Jerusalem (3:5; 5:8)." Gordon H. In his conquest of the Middle East, Alexander's marauding forces passed Jerusalem on the way to Egypt and returned via the same route without ever invading the city. Jerusalem's deliverance can be attributed directly to God's divine protection The Lord promised to encamp around the city, and He did (2:5). exodus - date - theories : 1K. 6:1 ☪ "Broadly speaking, two major theories have emerged, one which places the events in the Eighteenth Egyptian Dynasty and the fifteenth century B.C., and one which places the events in the Nineteenth Egyptian Dynasty and the thirteenth century B.C." Ref-0840, p. 225. "Setting aside extreme views the principal positions are whether there was: (1) an early exodus (15th century B.C.) with the entire 430 years spent in Egypt (the "long sojourn" position); (2) a late date for the Exodus (13th century B.C.; Rameses III's dynasty), again placing the 430 years as spent in Egypt; and (3) an early exodus (15th century B.C.) with but 215 of the 430 years of sojourn spent in Egypt ("short sojourn" position). Thus two major questions must be settled in a Scripture honoring manner. Was the Exodus during the 15th or the 13th centuries B.C. and was the duration of the sojourn in Egypt 430 years or less? . . . Regarding the question as to whether the Exodus was a 15th (early date) or 13th century (late date) B.C. episode, the Biblical evidence unmistakably places the event in the 15th. Moreover, those who defend the late date such as Albright and Rowley placing the Exodus at B.C. 1290 and 1225 respectively, do so by rejecting the 480 years of 1K. 6:1, deeming it completely unreliable." expert - bias of : ☪ "An experienced Judge with an intelligent jury -- any tribunal, indeed, accustomed to sift and weigh conflicting testimony -- would be better fitted to deal with it [the Daniel controversy] than a company of all the philologists of Christendom. The philologist's proper place is in the witness-chair. He can supply but a part, and that by no means the most important part, of the necessary evidence. And if a single well-ascertained fact be inconsistent with his theories, the fact must prevail. But this the specialist is proverbially slow to recognize. He is always apt to exaggerate the importance of his own testimony, and to betray impatience when evidence of another kind is allowed legitimate weight. And nowhere is this tendency more marked than among the critics." Ref-0745, p. ix. "In his History of the Criminal Law, Sir James Fitzjames Stephen declares that, as no kind of evidence more demands the test of cross-examination than that of experts, their proper place is the witness chair and not the judgment seat." eye - design : ☩ + "However, ophthalmologists, specialists in eye anatomy and disease, have denounced Dawkins' claim [that the eye is poorly designed] repeatedly. E.g. Dr. George Marshall, the Sir Jules Thorn Lecturer in Ophthalmic Science at the University of Glasgow, Scotland, stated in reply to Dawkins: "The idea that the eye is wired backward comes from a lack of knowledge of eye function and anatomy." Dr. Marshall explains that the nerves could not go behind the eye, because that space is reserved for the choroid, which provides the rich blood supply needed for the very metabolically active retinal pigment epithelium (RPE). This is necessary to regenerate the photoreceptors. So it is necessary for the nerves to go in front." Jonathan Sarfati, "Fiber Optics in the Eye", Ref-0028, 32(1) December 2008 - February 2009, 45:47, pp. 45-46.

"The traditional chronology of the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, which were originally but one book, in use today by nearly all scholars, Christian or secular is not tenable. The presence of an Ezra and a Nehemiah at the beginning and end of this narrative has long created a problem as the history spans from the first year of Cyrus (B.C. 536) to at least the thirty-second year of a Persian monarch designated as "Artaxerxes". Although his identification was long held in debate, for the past several centuries he has commonly been identified as Artaxerxes I Longimanus, placing the twentieth year of his rule as c.445 B.C. and his thirty-second as 433. As Ezra and Nehemiah are specified to be among the leaders who returned from the Babylonian captivity in 536 B.C. with Zerubbabel, their minimal ages would have exceeded 120 by even Artaxerxes' twentieth year (536 - 445 - 91 + 30); yet the Biblical record reveals that by this time men's normal life spans were that of today (Ps. 90:10). Although Walter Williams, the last survivor of the American Civil War, died in 1959 at 117, Carey White in 1991 at 115, a Japanese woman in 1986 at 120, and nearly 5,000 individuals in the Caucasus Mountain region of Russia were documented as attaining 100 years with some becoming 110-114 along with equal and even greater claims for Indians in the mountains of Ecuador, most scholars have not been able to accept such extended life spans for Ezra and Nehemiah. The result is that, in the main, the predicament has been managed by assuming that there must be two different Ezras and Nehemiahs, despite the fact that the context seems to indicate that they are one and the same. Inasmuch as it has been undeniably demonstrated that there are not merely two men involved in the problem, these scholars have wrongly assumed that two Ezras and Nehemiahs solves the dilemma. Comparing the lists of leaders of the Priests and Levites in Nehemiah 10 and 12 which are supposedly separated by 91 years leaves the traditional modern solution, dealing as it does with only Ezra and Nehemiah, totally inadequate. . . . As Sir Robert Anderson did not take this matter into account, those who utilize his solution for the 483 (490) year Daniel 9:25 prophecy simply fail to unravel the issue and secure the proper chronology. Although Sir Isaac Newton recognized the full extent of the conundrum and formulated a chronological solution with regard to the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah which reduced the ages of the Priests and Levites on the Nehemiah 10 and 12 registers to conform to the normal range thereby constructing an improvement over the traditional scheme, he knowing left Ezra and Nehemiah as having attained ages 120 and older. Although because of this the vast majority of today's scholars find Newton's solution unsatisfactory, the author deems it as not only an acceptable answer, but a most meritorious piece of insight and revelation." Ref-0186, pp. 259-260. "This second solution to the paradox lies in taking the Biblical kings of Persia has having been mismatched in the secular list. Again, the great ages attributed to the men of Nehemiah's generation indicate that [sic] the Biblical "Artaxerxes" in question to be a Persian King who reigned before Artaxerxes Longimanus. This correction reduces the outlandish ages of these men to conform to the evidence of other Scripture." Ref-0186, p. 277.

Then, in 332 BC, Alexander the Great set siege for 6 months. Built causeway using dirt and debris of the destroyed mainland city. Alexander threw stones and timbers into the water (Eze. 26:12). It was again attacked and almost completely destroyed by Muslims in A.D. 1291
- (fulfilling Eze. 26:14). Modern day Tyre is a fishing town with a harbor, built down the coast from the ancient site. Ancient Tyre is now a barron rock where local fisherman spread nets to dry (Eze. 26:4,14). Ref-0025, p. 255. "This prophecy against Tyre was partly fulfilled in 586 B.C. when King Nebuchadnezzar took the mainland city of Tyre after a siege of thirteen years but was unable to take its nearby island to which most of the people had fled. In 322 B.C., Alexander the Great, by scraping up the stones and timber of the mainland city as building material, built a great causeway to the heavily-defended island, and so completed the conquest of Tyre. Today, the site of ancient Tyre, has fresh water supply enough for a large modern city, but it has not been occupied for 2,300 years." Ref-0207, p. 65. "Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre from 586-573 B.C. and eventually destroyed it. But many of the inhabitants escaped to a fortified island. Alexander scraped up the ruins of old Tyre and dumped the debris into the sea, enabling him to build a half-mile causeway so his army could attack the island. In 332 B.C. Alexander conquered the island city and burned it to the ground. The prophecies of Tyre's destruction were fulfilled in every detail as Alexander annihilated this "power," its riches, fleet of ships, commerce, and fortifications (cf. Ezek. 26-28)." David M. 1:29 ; 3:9 ; Romans 12:3 ; 2 Peter 1:1 ; 2 Timothy 2:25 ; and John 6:44-45 . Aldrich, "The Gift of God", Ref-0200, Vol. 122, July 1965, p. 250. "Chapter 11: Of Justification 1. Those whom God effectually calleth, he also freely justifieth: not by infusing righteousness into them, but by pardoning their sins, and by accounting and accepting their persons as righteous; not for anything wrought in them, or done by them, but for Christ's sake alone; nor by imputing faith itself, the act of believing, or any other evangelical obedience to them, as their righteousness; but by imputing the obedience and satisfaction of Christ unto them, they receiving and resting on him and his righteousness, by faith; which faith they have not of themselves, it is the gift of God." Westminster Confession of Faith, Ref-0154, p. 1186. "When Paul in Ephesians 2:8 uses the clause that not of yourselves we are naturally drawn to ask the question 'What does that refer to?' According to Greek grammar, it cannot refer to the words grace or faith because the pronoun translated 'that' has an ending in the neuter gender. Both grace and faith are in the feminine gender. Corresponding terms must agree in gender. Grammatically, that can only refer to the conceptual notion as a whole, God's provision of a salvation that is by grace through faith. His salvation is of grace because He provided and initiates eternal life apart from all human effort; it is of faith because one must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Moreover, salvation is 'not of ourselves' because the faith exercised has no virtue or merit in itself. Merit is drawn strictly from the object of faith, Jesus Christ." George E. Meisinger, "Salvation by Faith Alone" in Mal Couch (ed.), The Fundamentals for the Twenty-First Century (Grand Rapids: Kregel Publications, 2000), 280-281.

faith - rule of : ☩ + "But the regula fidei was the necessary context for the correct interpretation of that authoritative Scripture. F. F. Bruce summarizes this early understanding of the rule of faith: "When the summary of the apostolic tradition is called the rule of faith or the rule of truth, the implication is that this is the church's norm, the standard by which everything must be judged that presents itself for Christian faith or claims to be Christian doctrine, the criterion for the recognition of truth and exposure of error. If at times it is formally distinguished from Scripture in the sense that it is recognized as the interpretation of Scripture, at other times it is materially identical with Scripture in the sense that it sums up what Scripture says. Plainly what was written down by the apostles in their letters and what was delivered by them orally to their disciples and handed down in the church's tradition must be one and the same body of teaching." Ref-0791, pp. 23-24, "The error of the heretics, according to Athanasius, is not in their appeal to Scripture but in their appeal to Scripture taken out of the context of the apostolic faith, that which Irenaeus referred to as the regula fidei." Ref-0791, p. 30. "These Scriptures, however, cannot be interpreted apart from the context of the apostolic faith without destroying their meaning. He [Hilary, the Bishop of Poitiers, ca. 300-367] writes of heretics, "Such is their error, such their pestilent teaching; to support it they borrow the words of Scripture, perverting its meaning and using the ignorance of men as their opportunity of gaining credence for their lies." Scripture is the final doctrinal authority, according to Hilary, but only when it is interpreted rightly. The mere use of Scripture does not guarantee the right use of Scripture." Ref-0791, p. 31. "Regarding the Reformer's desire that Scripture be interpreted in and by the Church according to the rule of faith, McGrath notes, "Although it is often suggested that the reformers had no place for tradition in their theological deliberations, this judgment is clearly incorrect. While the notion of tradition as an extra-scriptural source of revelation is excluded, the classic concept of tradition as a particular way of reading and interpreting scripture is retained. Scripture, tradition and the keyrgma are regarded as essentially coinherent, and as being transmitted, propagated and safeguarded by the community of faith." Ref-0791, p. 119.

faith - vs. reason : Mtt. 16:8 ☩ "Thus already in this life he attempts to investigate the mysteries of revelation by the natural light of reason. The result of such an effort is precisely what Augustine called intellectus==some rational insight into the contents of revelation. Such is the ultimate meaning of Augustine's famous formula "understanding is the reward of faith. Therefore seek not to understand that you may believe, but believe that you may understand." For Augustine, the truths for the Christian faith are true because they are revealed by God. Once one accepts the divine truth his reason will enable him to begin to understand those truths. Faith is higher than reason, yet cannot do without it; therefore when used properly, reason serves faith. This early medieval attitude is expressed clearly in the writings of Anselm (1033-1109). Two phrases he used summarize his position: fides quaerens intellectum ("Faith seeking understanding"), and credo ut intellegam ("I believe, in order that I may understand"). In other words, while faith precedes rational understanding, faith is itself rational." Ref-0791, pp. 68-69.

A man can never be said to obtain a thing for himself if he obtains it by faith; indeed to say that he obtains it by faith is only another way of saying that he does not obtain it for himself but permits another to obtain it for him. Faith, in other words, is not active but passive; and to say that we are saved by faith is to say that we do not save ourselves but are saved only by the one in whom our faith is reposed; the faith of man presupposes the sovereign grace of God." J. Gresham Machen, What is Faith? (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans Publishing Company, 1946), 195. "R. C. Sproul presents the issue succinctly: The difference between Rome and the Reformation can be seen in these simple formulas: | Roman view | faith + works = justification | - | Protestant view | faith = justification + works | - Neither view eliminates works. The Protestant view eliminates human merit." Richard Mayhue, "Editorial", Ref-0164 Vol. 16 No. 2 Fall 2005, p. 187.

faith - without works : Acts 26:20; Tit. 1:16; Jas. 2:14-26 ☩ "The usual way of stating Reformation doctrine is that we are 'justified by faith alone but not by the faith that is alone.' That is, we are justified by our union with Jesus Christ by true faith, but that faith is not alone because it bears the fruit of good works. Antinomians say that justification is by faith alone and by a faith that may be alone. The faith ought to bring forth good works but, if it does not, that is not fatal to faith. The antinomian will never put it this way, but it amounts to justification by a faith without works, justification by a 'dead' faith. If faith may exist without works in antinomianism, then that justification may be by a dead faith, that is, by no faith at all." Ref-0192, p. 29.

M'Neile says, 'No such definite claim to Messiahship is known till that of Barkokba in the reign of Hadrian.' . . . H. A. W. Meyer clarifies the issue when he notes, 'We possess no historical record of any false Messiahs having appeared previous to the destruction of Jerusalem . . . [Leon] Morris explains: 'This will surely be a reference to the last days, for there is little evidence that any of the turbulent men so active preceding the fall of Jerusalem ever claimed to be the Messiah. I think I’ve shared that with you before. Father is not a nice word to me. On Sunday our pastor spoke about Jesus and his relationship with the Father and how that mirrors our relationship with him. It was a hard sermon for me and I did end up crying a little. It was sort of neat though because at the end of the sermon while our pastor was praying the sun came out and shone brightly through the window on me where I was sitting. We always sit in the same place! I felt the Lord say to me that this prayer was for me and that he understood why I feel the way I do. It made me feel so much better knowing he loves me anyway with all my faults and insecurities! Maybe someday I will be able to call him father, but I don’t feel like I can right now.”

 "These formulations represent an elaboration of three of the Ten Commandments. . . In the language of a text of Judaism attributed to authorities long before Jesus' own time, 'Make a fence around the Torah.' That is to say, conduct yourself in such a way that you will avoid even the things that cause you to sin, not only sin itself." Ref-0137, p. 40. "But not resisting one who is evil has no relationship to 'an eye for an eye.' This is not in the category of 'a fence around the Torah.' It is a religious duty to resist evil, to struggle for good, to love God, and to fight against those who make themselves into enemies of God. The Torah knows nothing of not resisting evil. . ."
Ref-0137, p. 43. "The fifth statement cites a saying not to be found in the Torah [what about Deu. 23:3,17-19; 1S. 24:19; Ezra 9:12; Ps. 41:10; Ps. 139:21-22?], which contains no commandment to hate one's enemies."
Ref-0137, p. 44. ". . . this particular fence extends the border protecting the Commandments from out there to in here: to heart and mind and imagination. True, these sayings touch me in my everyday life, where murder is uncommon, but anger routine; adultery rare, fantasy, always; false swearing exceptional, swearing normal. So he has brought the power of his imagination to bear, and made these commandments immediate and urgent." Ref-0137, p. 54. Yet we read the following from the Jerusalem Talmud concerning vows: "Is it not enough for you what the Torah has forbidden, that you must come and add more prohibitions?" [Jerusalem Talmud, Tr. Nedarim (Vows) 9,1] "Another category of interpretive method is found in the development of the material which was later (c. A.D. 90-200) collected, edited, and adapted in the Mishnah (commandments). Its nature is reflected in Mishnah Aboth 1:1, which speaks of making "a hedge around the Law." This hedge (or fence), which consists of a body of laws, customs, and usages alongside the Pentateuch, developed in the postexilic and following periods and originally circulated in oral form. It constituted the so-called oral law, the tradition, which was considered just as authoritative as the written law. A particular form of tradition found in the Mishnah is called halakah (walking uprightly, the proper way) and deals almost exclusively with the pentateuchal laws. It often explains and interprets by citing opinions from the past. Halakah also includes what appear to a non-Jew to be subsidiary, additional laws which, if observed, protect against breaking the law by fencing or hedging in the written command. Such additional interpretations and laws were regarded as part of the original divine intent." Ref-1200, p. 129. "Finally, building a fence around the law is clarified in Aboth 3:14, "The tradition is a fence around the Law." To assure compliance with the law, instructions around it were multiplied; these instructions make up much of what is called oral tradition. . . . This codification, Aboth assumes, was the work of the Great Synagogue. Herbert Danby describes it as "a body of 120 elders, including many prophets, who came up from exile with Ezra; they saw that prophecy had come to an end and that restraint was lacking; therefore they made many new rules and restrictions for the better observance of the Law." In our summary of the Persian period we noted that the very existence of the Great Synagogue is questioned. . . . This problem of historicity cannot be finally solved. If indeed there was such a body, it is probably to be dated from Ezra (c. 444 B.C.) and the events of Nehemiah 8-10 until the time of Simon the Just." Ref-1200, pp. 170-171.

fencing - Torah - milk and meat : Ex. 23:19 ☪
 "The reference to seething a kid in its mother's milk has been a puzzler since patristic exegesis (Ex 23:19). It is now known to be part of heathenish idolatry. [Cf. J. Finegan, Light from the Ancient Past, p. 148. The rite is referenced to in the Ras Shamra texts.]" Ref-0015, p. 204. "Many Jewish religious proscriptions were greatly extended throughout the ages by a process of creating a 'fence around the Torah,' and this prohibition is no exception. To guard against committing a transgression, even inadvertently, the interpretation of the biblical rule was stretched to include practices where were far removed from the original intention. Hence it was no longer only a 'kid' but all flesh; no longer only goat's milk, but all milk and all dairy products; not just the process of cooking them together, but even consuming the two during the same meal. All this led to detailed regulations concerning separate sinks, cooking utensiles, plates, and cutlery for meat and milk products. These items must be stored and washed separately, and if 'contaminated,' they need to be thoroughly 'purified' by a very elaborate process." Ref-0151, p. 7.

fig tree - unfruitful : Joel 1:7; Mtt. 21:19; Mark 11:13; Luke 13:6 ☪ "When the fig leaves appear about the end of March they are accompanied by a crop of small knobs, called taqsh by the Arabs, a sort of forerunner of the real figs. These taqsh are eaten by peasants and others when hungry. They drop off before the real fig is formed. But if the leaves appear unaccompanied by taqsh, there will be no figs that year. So it was evident to our Lord, when He turned aside to see if there were any of these taqsh on the fig tree to assuage His hunger for the time being, that the absence of the taqsh meant that there would be no figs when the time for figs came. For all its fair show of foliage, it was a fruitless and hopeless tree. The whole incident was an acted parable. To Jesus the fig tree, fair but barren, spoke of the city of Jerusalem, where He had found much religious observance, but no response to His message from God. The withering of the tree was thus an omen of the disaster which, as He foresaw and foretold, would shortly fall upon the city." Ref-0239, pp. 73-74.

The parents then take the eggs into their mouths until they hatch after two or three weeks. . . . the Hebrew name for this fish [is] Amnun (nurse fish) . . . “The parental instincts of these fish often cause them to put objects in their mouths just prior to spawning in preparation for the eggs that will hatch in their mouths” (Martin et al 2003:116). It does not take much imagination to consider the Amnun was what Peter caught after Jesus had instructed him to go hook (KJV, NRSV, ASV) a fish, and in its mouth Peter would find a coin (Mt. 17:27). The musht’s flat shape makes it good for frying, and Christian pilgrims who eat at restaurants along the shore order musht advertised as “St. Peter’s Fish.”” David G. L. problematicus was named after an English farmer, Alfred Leeds, who discovered the first fossils of this species in the late 1800s. The name ‘problematicus’ refers to the problem paleontologist encountered trying to classify this new fish. . . . This fish, alleged to be 155 million years old, was an astonishing 15 m long. But a new specimen of the same species found recently surpasses this, reaching a length of about 30 m! This is about the length of 3 school buses and is twice the size of a whale shark (14 m), or about the size of a blue whale, making it the largest fish ever discovered. . . . Leedsichthys would not have torn its prey apart with its teeth. In fact it didn’t have teeth on its jaws; it used thousands of gill rakers with needle-like teeth to filter plankton and small fish from the water. The fish was large enough to swallow a man whole.” Matthew Murdock, “Jonah and Leedsichthys problematicus, the problem fish”, Ref-0003, 19(1) 2005, pp. 6-7.

French - language of medieval clergy : ☪ + “While the popular view of the late medieval English church is that it was dominated by the Latin language, it needs to be realized that French was also extensively used. Many senior English clergy spoke neither English nor Latin, but only French. An eyewitness account of the consecration of the bishop of Durham in 1318 discloses the remarkable fact that the new bishop could not even read the Latin words he was required to repeat during the service. After several attempts to pronounce the Latin word metropoliticae, he announced -- in French -- his intention to leave that word out, and get on with the remainder of the service.” Ref-0686, p. 29.

fundamentalism - five points : ☪ "in 1910, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church issued the Five Fundamentals of the Faith, which included: first, the inspiration of the Scriptures; second, the Virgin Birth; third, the substitutionary atonement; fourth, the resurrection of Jesus; and fifth, the miracles of Jesus. Those who subscribed to these five points were labeled 'Fundamentalists,' and so a new word was coined. . . . The General Assembly issued these in 1910 and reaffirmed them in 1916 and 1923." Ref-0219, p. 73. "The phrase itself came into prominence first when a widely circulated set of booklets called The Fundamentals: A testimony to the Truth were published between 1910 and 1915. They contained nearly one hundred articles by leading evangelicals. Together they defended the "fundamentals," or basics, of the faith that newer forms of thought had recently called into question, among them assertions that the Bible is the inspired Word of God; that Jesus Christ was God in human flesh, was born of a virgin, lived a sinless life, died on the cross for the salvation of men and women, rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and would return at the end of the age in great glory; that sin is real and not the product of fevered imaginations; that God's grace and not human effort is the source of salvation; and that the church is God's institution designed to build up Christians and to spread the gospel. Authors of the articles included some of the leading theological conservatives from the start of the twentieth century: Scottish theologian James Orr, Princeton Presbyterian B. B. Warfield, Anglican bishop H. C. G. Moule, American dispensationalist C. I. Scofield, evangelist R. A. Torrey, and Southern Baptist scholar E. Y. Mullins. . . . The term fundamentalist itself was coined by Baptist editor Curtis Lee Laws in 1920 as a designation for those who were ready "to do battle royal for the Fundamentals." Laws later called fundamentalism "a protest against that rationalistic interpretation of Christianity which seeks to discredit supernaturalism." " Ref-0958, pp. 381-383.

gap theory - argument from silence : Gen. 1:2; Ex. 20:11; Ne. 9:6; Ps. 96:5; Ps. 148:5; Isa. 45:18; John 1:3; Heb. 11:3 ☉ + "The Scriptures [Ex. 20:11; Ne. 9:6; Ps. 96:5; Ps. 148:5; Isa. 45:18; John 1:3; Heb. 11:3] discussed . . . are notable for at least one thing: their silence on anything but original creation. An argument ex silentio is of course, somewhat less than satisfactory, and certainly not conclusive in itself. But there is no hint in the straightforward verses recounting creation of any ruin and subsequent restoration. On this the Scriptures are absolutely silent.”

gap theory - Babylonian Talmud : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “The Babylonian Talmud, in Hagigah 12a records a statement by Rabbi Judah, dated in the latter part of the third century, in which he declares, Ten things were created (by God) on the first day (of Creation). These are: heaven and earth, tohu and bohū (traditional “unformed and void”), and light and darkness, wind (ruah) and water, and the duration of day and night. This talmudic statement is notable for several reasons. It places the creation (implied ex nihilo) on the first day; it describes the state of the earth on the first day as “tōhū and bohū;” . . . Most importantly, it leaves no room for chronological gaps of any kind before 1:1 or after 1:1, or after 1:2, for all the events of Genesis 1:1-5 are placed on the first day of creation!” Ref-0819, p. 19.

gap theory - Chalmers : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “One of the men who is perhaps most responsible for the origin and popularity of the Gap Theory is Thomas Chalmers (1780-1847), a famous theologian of Scotland, and founder of the Free Church of Scotland. One has only to read the writings of this man to understand how acutely he felt the attacks of science, and geology in particular, upon the Scriptures. He lived concurrently with Lyell and Darwin, and was part of the age during which men were breaking loose from and thrusting aside what they felt had been the shackles of the Scriptures, and were placing all their hopes in the new science and its “assured” results. It is not without significance that Chalmers deemed it necessary to harmonize the Scriptures and science in order to save Christianity from the onslaught of atheism!” Ref-0819, p. 40.

gap theory - Custance : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “For over seventy-five years [since Pember’s Earth’s Earliest Ages] the defense or contest of this theory received little significant lengthy treatment in print. Brief and sporadic defenders were just as briefly and sporadically refuted by its antagonists. But in 1970 the silence was broken by a Canadian physiologist, retired and turned biblical commentator. Arthur C. Custance, who in his Without Form and Void leaves no stone unturned in the most scholarly, thorough, and lengthy defense of the Gap Theory any man has ever attempted to print. For those who hold this view, his work will doubtless be the standard textbook for years to come.” Ref-0819, pp. 43-44.

gap theory - grammatical considerations : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “In other words, a stative verb normally represents a state of being in the suffix [the ‘perfect’ aspect or qatal] conjugation, but a state of becoming in the prefix [the ‘imperfective aspect’ or yiqtol] conjugation. This grammatical observation is significant for the interpretation of Gen. 1:2 (the verb is the suffix conjugation: “was” -- not “became”). Recognizing this distinction provides a major argument against the so-called Gap Theory . . .” William D. Barrick, “Exegetical Fallacies: Common Interpretive Mistakes Every Student Must Avoid”, Ref-0164, Vol. 19 No. 1, Spring 2008, 15:27, p. 23.

gap theory - King Edgar of England : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “Kurtz, an adherent of the Gap Theory in the 19th century, was apparently the first in modern times to claim King Edgar as a gap theorist, and in this he has been followed more recently by Sauer and Custance. Kurtz, however, does not give the source for his material. What he says is that in confirmation of the law of Oswald . . . , King Edgar said: “As God drove the angles from the earth after their fall, whereupon it was changed into chaos, he had now placed kings upon the earth that justice might obtain there.” [Kurtz, History of the Old Covenant, p. lvii.]” Ref-0819, p. 31.

gap theory - Origen : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “In these comments on Genesis 1:2 specifically, any mention of such a ruin-restoration idea is conspicuously lacking: Very many, indeed, are of the opinion that the matter of which things are made is itself signified in the language used by Moses in the beginning of Genesis: “In the beginning God made heaven and earth; and the earth was invisible, and not arranged;” for by the words “invisible and not arranged” Moses would seem to mean nothing else than shapeless matter. By these words Origen connects Genesis 1:2 with the original state of the earth when it was created on the first of the six days of creation. . . . [Elsewhere,] he says: This world had its beginning at a certain time, and . . . agreeably to our belief in Scripture, we can calculate the years of its past duration. This last statement should completely remove any doubt regarding whether Origen was a gap theorist. For if he did not believe in a continuous and uninterrupted history from Genesis 1:1 onward, he could not “calculate the years of its past duration.” Other interesting aspects of Origen’s interpretation of Genesis include the fact that he translated 1:1,2 by these Latin words: “In principio creavit Deus caelum et terram. Erra autem erat vastum et vacuum. Et Tenebrae erant super faciem abyssi . . .” If Origen did believe in a Gap Theory, it is nothing less than astounding to find how he translated Genesis 1:2. He used erat, which can only mean “was,” the simple imperfect, never having the sense, “became,” or the pluperfect, “had become.” . . . It should be mentioned, however, that Origen believed that there had been other worlds before our earth, but that when the angels fell, these heavenly worlds were replaced by God’s creation of the earth. . . . he saw no connection between them and our own earth. . . . It should be obvious that Origen was going far beyond Scripture into the realm of conjecture when he spoke of preexisting worlds. His misuse of katabolē . . . is not lexically supportable.” Ref-0819, pp. 22-25.

gap theory - origin : Gen. 1:2; Isa. 45:18 ☪ “In 1804, the gap theory began to be propounded by the 24-year-old pastor, Thomas Chalmers (179-1847), who after his conversion to evangelicalism in 1811 became one of the leading Scottish evangelicals. It should be noted that Chalmers began teaching his gap theory before the world’s first geological society was formed (in London in 1807), and before Currier’s catastrophist theory appeared in French (1812) or in English (1813) and over two decades before Lyell’s theory was promoted (beginning in 1830).” Terry Mortenson, “Philosophical Naturalism and the Age of the Earth: Are they Related?”, Ref-0164, 15/1 (Spring 2004) 71-92, p. 77. “It was in 1814 that Dr. Thomas Chalmers of Edinburgh University first proposed what has since become known as the Gap Theory of Genesis 1:2. By this interpretation of the bible, Dr. Chalmers felt that he could make room for the vast expanse of time which the geologists of his day were demanding, and at the same time maintain a literal interpretation of the creation account. His views were further elaborated by George H. Pember (Earth’s Earliest Ages) in 1876, and enormously popularized by a footnote in the Scofield Reference Bible (first edition, 1917).” Ref-0819, p. ix. “It is claimed the J. C. Rosenmuller (1736-1815) was the first to clearly suggest a theory of earth’s origins similar to the present Gap Theory in his Antiquissima Tellures Historica, published in 1776. About the same time, Johann August Dathe, also a German scholar, translated Genesis 1:2 in his commentary in this manner: “Waw (ו) before ‘the earth’ cannot be translated “AND,” for it would then refer back to verse 1, where the narrative has “the earth and heaven were created by God.” Whereas verse 2 proceeds to tell how the earth, at some uncertain time, had undergone some remarkable change. Therefore waw stands for “afterwards” and is so to be interpreted, as it so often is--for example in Num. 5:23 and Deu. 1:19”” Ref-0819, p. 36.

gap theory - proponents : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “Other more recent adherents [than George H. Pember and Arthur C. Custance] have included Dake (Dake’s Annotated Reference Bible), Arno C. Gaebelin, James M. Gray, William Evans, Arthur Pink, Louis T. Talbot, G. Campbell Morgan, Henry Thiessen, Donald Grey Barnhouse, and Clarence Larkin.” Ref-0819, p. 43n100.

gap theory - questions raised : Gen. 1:2 ☪ “Did the earth actually become a ruined chaos sometime after its original creation? Were dinosaurs and other creatures killed and fossilized at the time, so that Adam and Eve would find themselves walking, as it were, upon a graveyard of extinct animals? Had Satan already become “the god of this world” before Adam and Eve were given their “dominion”? Were presently living animals, which can also be identified in the fossil formations, re-created during the days described in the remainder of Genesis 1? Was the supposed catastrophe of Genesis 1:2 even more devastating, and thus geologically significant, than the Flood of Noah’s day? These and similar questions cry out for solid biblical answers, . . .” Ref-0819, p. ix.

gap theory - ruin/restoration required : Gen. 1:2 ☪ + “Certain commentators, both ancient and modern, have not placed the action of Genesis 1: within the first of the six creative days of Genesis 1. They have, instead, postulated a creation of the basic material of the universe in Genesis 1:1; next, an interval, small or great, between 1:1 and 1:2; then, a continuation of creation in Genesis 1:2. This postulation of an interval must not be construed into or confused with the classical form of the Gap Theory, which proposes a complete and perfect creation of both universe and earth in Genesis 1:1, a ruin of the earth during a chronological gap between 1:1 and 1:2, and a subsequent recreation beginning with Genesis 1:3. . . . Those who hold a ruin-restoration Gap Theory cannot find gap theory - science - harmonizing : Gen. 1:2 ☉ + "The Gap Theory was not generated by compelling exegetical considerations. On the contrary, it arose in recent times, and its popularity has been maintained for one and only one reason--the fixation of science-intimidated minds upon harmonizations, a practice not only futile if all the pronouncements of science are accepted uncritically, but something highly dangerous as well. Christians (including Luther) who defended the geocentric universe before (and particularly after) Copernicus were guilty of this very thing. Yet is is the contemporary harmonizers who most severely castigate these Christians as pre-scientific and hopelessly naive--part of an embarrassing chapter of church history to be hidden as a skeleton in a closet. Let us remember that medieval Christians were only harmonizing with science in their day, and when science made further discoveries they were not prepared to re-harmonize. Our own day could not be more parallel. . . . We are happy when science confirms biblical statements, but contradictions cause us no consternation. To be sure, some such contradictions may be the result of improper biblical interpretation. If this is so, then the erroneous interpretations should be corrected. But let it never be forgotten: science is changing and the Bible is not. Therefore, what may be a contradiction now, may be completely resolved as science progresses. If we do not allow for the progress of science, we, too, may someday find ourselves left with neat harmonizations which no longer harmonize!" Ref-0819, pp. 45-46.

gap theory - Scofield Reference Bible : Gen. 1:2 ☉ + "Though the [gap theory] was greatly popularized by Pember's widely-circulated book [Earth's Earliest Ages], it was left to the Scofield Reference Bible to canonize it. Probably no reference Bible, whether the older (1917) or the newer (1967) edition, has ever been as broadly distributed in the English-speaking world. In the older edition the note supporting the Gap Theory appeared under Genesis 1, but in the newer edition it was included less conspicuously under Isaiah 45. The inclusion of this theory in the Scofield Bible is most unfortunate, for it has led so many into believing a theory which was tailored to harmonize science in its present fluid form and the Bible in its immutable form." Ref-0819, p. 43. gap theory - Zohar : Gen. 1:2 ☉ + "Custance cites a quotation which appears to embrace a cosmogony similar to that of Ginzberg's Jewish legends. The comment on Genesis 2:4-6 reads in part: And these are the generations of the destruction which is signified in verse 2 of chapter 1. The earth was Tohu and Bohu. These indeed are the worlds of which it is said that the blessed God created them and destroyed them and on that account, the earth was desolate and empty. But the Zohar, like other legends of the Jews, is so fanciful that it is difficult to take it seriously as representing an ancient ruin-restoration interpretation comparable to the modern Gap Theory. Furthermore, if it really is a late medieval forgery (as is generally conceded today), its historical value is negligible." Ref-0819, p. 20.

Ezekiel 38 and 39 presuppose an unbelieving Israel in her land. "It must be borne in mind that the Jews are to return to Palestine and there re-assume a national standing whilst yet unconverted. There are a number of passages which establish this beyond question. For example, in Eze. 22:19-22 we are told, 'Therefore thus saith the Lord God; because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem, as they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in Mine anger and in My fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you. Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of My wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.' The first six verses of Isa. 18 describe how the Lord will gather the Jews to Jerusalem, there to be the prey of 'fowls and beasts.' The closing chapters of Zechariah lead to the inevitable conclusion that the Jews return to their land in unbelief, for if their national conversion takes place in Jerusalem (Zec. 12:10), they must have returned to it unconverted." Ref-0215, "Israel and Antichrist". "Notice the sequence here [Eze. 39:25-28], and "after" they have borne their shame, "when" they are dwelling safely in the land, "then" will they know that the Lord is their God. This same idea is expressed in an earlier chapter when the Lord says that He will take the Jews out from among the nations and bring them into their own land, and then will he sprinkle clean water upon them and then shall they be clean. (See Ezekiel 36:24-25.)" Ref-1163, p. 26. "On July 9, 1947, in the 24th meeting of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine (UNSCOP) testimony was heard from Rabbi Fischman, Chief Rabbi of the city of Jerusalem. . . . Sir [Abdur] Rahman: "According to the Jews, was not their return to this country to take place with the appearance of Messiah?" Rabbi Fischman: "No, In accordance with Jewish tradition, the Jews would return to Palestine before the Messiah comes, and Jerusalem would be a part of Palestine. Only then, after the return of the Jews to Palestine, in accordance with the tradition, the Messiah will arrive." Ref-1163, p. 47. "The prophets did not always understand the meanings of their own words; much of what they saw will be revealed by circumstance. As we approach the end, we see more clearly. If the commentators of 100 years ago had known about the marvelous return of the Jews and their success in restoring the promised land, they would not have applied the prophecies concerning Israel to the church. . . . Today, everything has changed and there is no reason for not applying the prophecies concerning Israel literally to Israel." Ref-1201, p. 8. Questionable: Jer. 16:14-16 (?); gathering - of Israel second time : Isa. 11:11

Gemara : ☪ "The name Gemara, derived from the Aramaic verb גמרא (to learn), refers to the second part of the Talmud consisting of discussions and amplifications of the Mishnah which is the first part. . . . The Gemara is the interpretation of the Mishnah by the Amoraim, the bearers of the oral traditional lore, who were active in Palestine and Babylonia from the time of the completion of the Mishnah until the redaction of the Babylonian Talmud. There is the Babylonian Gemara and the Palestinian Gemara. . . . The former, which is more complete, was concluded by the academies of Babylon at the beginning of the sixth century; the latter was finished during the fifth century." Ref-0006, pp. 127-128. "The Gemara (to complete, accomplish, learn) was written in Aramaic rather than Hebrew, and was basically an expanded commentary on the Mishnah. It was transmitted in two traditions, the Palestinian Gemara (c. A.D. 200), and the larger and more authoritative Babylonian Gemara (c. A.D. 500)." Ref-0075, p. 502.

gematria - numerology : Rev. 13:8 ☪ The study of the numerical value of words. "There are seven ways of calculating gematria in Jewish tradition. 1) Ragil: This method is the basis for all the other methods. Each letter of the alphabet has its own numerical value. The numerical value of a word or phrase is the sum total of the values of its letters. 2) Katan: All the tens and hundreds are converted to the single numbers 1 to 9. 3) K'lali: In this method, the value of a word is the square of the sum of the ragil values of each letter in that word. 4) Millui: This method gives a letter the numerical value of the sum of the ragil values of the letters that make up the name of the letter. 5) Kolel: This method sums the ragil values of the letters in a word plus the number of letters. 5) Hakadmi: The value of the first letter is ragil. The accumulated value of the second letter is its ragil value plus the ragil value of the first letter. The accumulated value of the third letter is its ragil value plus the accumulated value of the second letter, etc. 7) Haperati: The value of each letter is the square of its ragil value. The value of the word is the sum of all the squares of its letters. It is apparent that the k'lali, millui, kolel, hakadmi, and haperati methods are unlikely to be intended in this passage, since they would tend to produce numerical values much in excess of 666. These methods also seem to be late additions not in use during the New Testament period. Only the ragil and katan methods are candidates for this calculation. Katan suffers from four shortcomings: 1) It would require a long name to evaluate to 666 (at least 74 letters). 2) The Talmud only uses ragil. 3) Therefore, katan is a later development and not contemporary with the Revelation. 4) Only ragil has an analogue in Greek and Roman culture, katan does not." gematria - numerology - symbols - Greek : ☪ "From the first century B.C. to the end of the Roman empire and on into the Byzantine period, the less cumbersome alphabetic system was mainly used. The complete Ionic alphabet was employed including three signs now obsolete:" (1) Stigma or van/digamma; (2) Koppa; (3) Sampi. | α --> ε = 1, 2, . . . 5 | Vau/digamma = 6 | ζ --> θ = 7, 8, 9 | ι --> π = 10, 20, . . . 80 | Koppa = 90 | ρ --> ω = 100, 200, . . . 800 | Sampi = 900 "To indicate the numerical employment of the letters a mark like an acute accent is placed after the character or characters up through 999; a similar mark is used below the line and preceding the letter for 1000 and above. Thus, for example, φρϵ' = 555, εφρϵ' = 5555 . . ." Ref-0840, pp. 4-5.

limits of the sequence of letters are formed by addition of characters. These composite groups are written thus, for example: ת"ת = 500, תת"ת = 900." Ref-0840, p. 4.
